Fashions in Millinery.

Hitherto bonnets have been very closeatting and small, but the fall and winter mhapes show a decided change. One style has a large, flat crown, with a slightly flaring brim. In this shape the face-trimming is composed merely of a shirred satin facing. Several loops of ribbon are massed on the top of the crown, and a long estrich plume passe down one side and falls on the hair at the back. Strings are considered indispensable to every bonnet. The large Leghorn bonnets, which made their appearance late in the summer, are now imitated in felt and velvet. They are trimmed very much as individual taste suggests, but all agree in omitting all face-trimming. The brim is faced with velvet or other suitable material, and hoops over the face, or is indented in Marie Stuart shape,

A very pretty novelty in a hat, worn as a bonnet, gives us the square Cromwellian crown and straight, narrow brim, which frames the face without turning up or indentation of any kind. These appear in felt of all shades, and are very becoming to the majority of faces. An exaggerated style of the Gainsborough has a high sugar-loaf crown, which slants downward at the top, and a very pronounced brim, turned up high and broad at the side. This might look well on the stage or in a picture, but could hardly be considered suitable for the street. Some importers have exhibited turbans with closely-rolled brims, and the English walking bat is introduced in all the fashionable colors in felt.

A stylish model in white felt is cut up some distance on either side and laced together with a gilt cord; gilt cord to match is placed around the edges; the inner portion of the front brim rising over the forehead is faced with black velvet, and a spray of magenta rose-buds and attendant leaves nestles some second pair of narrow strings handsomely brocaded. A pretty hat of black velvet was trimmed with a black silk netted small black ostrich tips sprinkled with gold beads were grouped in a cluster on the top. A few years ago red bonnets would have seemed an impossibility. Now they are shown made of red plush, plain felt, trimmed with rich feathers, and tied with red satin ribbons, Handsome reception bonnets have the frames covered plain with ruby satin, or ruby elvet, the trimming costly lace, and a ong soft ostrich plume.

Of course, red bonnets will only be m consisting of trimmings of brocade thing better than that. in high blended colors, which look like Indian embroidery or Persian stuff.

Persons who must confine themselves to one "best," select a style to match their best suit, which is usually of black, or some dark shade, trimming it with feathers to match, and a fabric used for combining them with, Ribes, and very gay in others. A new obon has narrow plush stripes alter-ting with satin. Other rich ribbons tin on the other; and here especially medical men y be remarked, very beautiful combitions of color—the velvet being comratively dark, and the satin usually of bright or pale shade. Black velvet is often gorgeously colored. Roses in shades of garnet are in great favor, of which are very dark. Other are a bright pink or magenta. Adal brightness is imparted by coxbe in natural colors, or, oftentimes, ry tuftings show successions of at threads of a deep wine or garnet placed in minute bunchings on ous green stalks arranged in coxlike form.

ornaments of every kind reap-Much favor, however, is accorded rridescent ornaments, wrought in tion of large flies with outstretched lizards and coiled anakes. All quite large; lizards, although in undulations, extending oftentimes more than three to four inches on bonnet, while serpents, though d in cork-screw fashion, reach alan equal length.

Many Baboos and men of other classes of the natives of Bengal never wear any covering on their heads except that given by nature.

Some of the Baboos are as noble-looking specimens of humanity as I ever saw, and have as good brain as brawn. The head-coverings worn are usually either a little hemisphere, often beautifully embroidered, or a large turban consisting of many yards of cotton cloth wound around the top of the head. The latter is good protection; the former seems to be worn only for ornament.

Choate's Conversation,

The following extract is from an article in Harper's Magazine on Rufus Choate, the celebrated lawyer and once United States senator from Massachudistance within. A number of white ostrich tips are place in bunch-like form on the top; broad double-faced strings, black velvet and satin, are tied exaggeration. To attend the performance of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was under the chin, and above these are a like listening, he said, to 10,000 forests of birds. Three in coming into vital acquaintance with a work of transcendent genius in any department of literature and the fine arts. Ten thousand birds would be a small testimony to the melodies of Mozart ; but 10,000 forests of birds is a comparison which indicates the rapture of wonder and admiration which Mozart's mas-terpiece excites in all souls capable of feeling its beauty. With this tendency to verbal exaggeration Choate had that instantaneous humorous recoil from extravagant assertion characteristic of worn by persons who can afford several ardent natures whose sense of the ludichanges, and do not, therefore, need to crons is quick as their sense of the display them frequently. That consumption can be cured by proper treatment will be readily perceived when the exact nature of the disease is understood, viz.: the accumulation and deposition of scrofulous matter (tubercles) in the lungs. Obviously, the principal remedies required are (1) a powerful alterative, or blood-purifier, to arrest the accumulations and also cleanse the blood of the scrofnious matter, and (2) a mild cathartic to expel the diseased matter from the system. This course of treatment in conjunction with a strict hygiente regime, has proved the most successful method of curing this disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets are the best alterative and cathartic remedies before the public, and have been alone used in thousands of cares of consumption with the most marked efficacy. Marriage and Sponges.

In many os the Greek islands spongefishing forms the occupation of the inhabitants. The method of fishing is by diving, and for many hundred years the business has been carried on. An old historian, writing of a singular custom prevailing at Himia, a little island opposite Rhodes, says :

A girl in this island is not permitted by her relatives to marry before she has brought up a certain quantity of sponges, and before she can give proof of her agility by taking them from a certain depth. In other islands the same cusom prevails, but with reversed application, as in Nicarus, where the father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the best diver among her suitors. "He that can stay longest in the water and gather the most sponges marries
