Harrisburg Letter.

HARRISBURG, May 24, 1879.

The most absorbing measures having been disposed of, members are anxiously pushing those affecting their own regions. As there are over 400 Bills on the Senate files and 750 on the House, when not to exceed 400 in all can be acted upon, it is certain some one must be disappointed.

The Revenue Bill, without any tax on oil, passed the House finally Tuesday, and now the Senate are wrestling with it. A strong effort is being made to insert a tax of $1,500 on each new derrick erected. Should it be done by the Senate, any such injustice would be promptly defeated by the House. It is astonishing how the necessity of extra taxation is shown by papers which urged the State to assume enormous claims since the Bills providing for them are defeated. Both Houses are cutting down the appropriations. Should this same commendable spirit continue to the end, the present revenues it is thought will prove sufficient.

No one need be frightened at the cry of another session. Harrisburg is very desirous to have it to help her hotels, boarding-houses, merchants &c., about the Capitol. The newspapers desire it for the items it furnishes them. Some who have schemes they wish to become laws desire it; With the exception of an inconsiderable number the members do not want it, and unquestionably the people do not at an extra expense of $500,000. No party in power can afford to call an extra session except from dire necessity, which is not likely to arise.

A more stringent law on the subject of firing the woods passed the House finally Tuesday.

Hon. John Welsh's bill making it a penal offense to employ labor over eight hours a day, punishing the same by fine and imprisonment, failed to pass.

The two Houses having failed to agree on the General Appropriation Bill it has gone to a committee of conference

The Riot Investigating Committee is still taking testimony. More damaging evidence has been brought out of money offered or promised for votes.

C. L. Magee's check book, offered in evidence, showed the way in which public sentiment was manufactured by articles published at 10c per line. The resolution offered Friday to have the testimony published, was met with a good deal of filibustering, but passed by a large majority. It is quite possible charges may be preferred against some of the members, and a move made for expulsion.

The Annual sessions of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, held here the past week, has been largely attended by delegates from all parts of the State.

The final adjournment of the Legislature has been fixed upon June 6th.

VERTIAS.

Our Washington Letter.

Special to the REPUBLICAN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22, '79.

From a Republican standpoint, affairs at the Capitol are going on swimmingly. Nothing could have been better for them than the extra Confederate session had they ordered it for party purpose alone. The Democrats have committed blunder after blunder in rapid succession, until there seems no limit to their capacity in that line. The very inception of the contest over the political measures in the appropriation bills was a blunder which the Republicans were not slow to take advantage of. It cemented the Republican ranks solidly, and united the President and the minority in Congress so finally that hereafter to the end of his term President Hayes and the party that elected him will act in co-operation upon every essential point of policy. Forced by the Bourbonism of their ablest leaders to take rank state rights grounds, and thrown back upon their unpatriotic record by the Republican orators, the Democratic leaders have gone on from bad to worse every time they have essayed to explain away ugly things and improve their reputation. Senator Blaine in his speech the other day brought up against Bayard, Hill and Hampton such damaging acts of their own that they must lose the respect of even their boon companions. The Bayard family were shown to have been copperheads of a deep dye, placing obstacles in the way of the war for the Union at every step. Hill was shown to have voted for the Georgia ordinance of secession, notwithstanding all his boasts that he had opposed that course and shed bitter tears over it. And Hampton was proved by his own campaign speeches to be a conspirator who is awaiting only a favorable chance to enforce state rights to the point of disunion.

The Greenbackers and rag money Democrats have met with a damaging reverse on the silver bill. While the Republicans are not solidly opposed to silver remonetization, and what is called the double standard, they are united against the communistic Warner silver bill as it was. Their steady opposition to it has been rewarded with success. The section allowing speculators to make money out of the Government to an unlimited extent by "free coinage," so called, was amended so as to make the owners of silver pay the difference in the price of silver bullion and coin as to the price of coinage. This in fact defeats the dangerous feature of the bill and the inflationists are greatly disappointed.

Dutch Hill Notes.

DUTCH HILL, May 26, 1879.

The late frost, as far as I can learn, did comparatively little damage, and the weather has been very mild and nice since. A tramp passed over the Hill Saturday, who had evidently met an unfriendly dog some where, as he was compelled to borrow a needle and thread and a piece of cloth to patch the bottom of his pants. W. B. Heath, R. C. Hanth and J. H. Zuendell last Friday caught eighty-one trout out of some of the small streams on the other side of the creek. Pretty well done for "boys." I have noticed but one candidate on the road thus far. Why is this thus? It must be that the "Hon. Tucker" has given up the ghost, else why do we not hear from him. Our school will re-open one week from to day, with Mr. R. Z. Gillespie as teacher. Hurry along Robert. JACK.
