Accidental Shooting.

Last Saturday evening, about o'clock, as we were returning from a hunt after pigeons, in company with Will Smearbaugh, and just as we had got about half way between the school house and J. H. Wentworth's farm on the Tylersburg road, two miles from town, we heard a very loud report of a gun followed by tremendous yells of murder! help! etc., down in the hollow toward Mr. Reese's place. We turned our horse and drove down the Wilderness road in the direction of the noise. As we neared the place we met a couple of boys coming up the road, who told us that Martin Salsgiver had accidently shot and killed his little brother Andy, about 13 years of age, and that the boy had been taken down to Reese's house. Proceeding we went to the house and upon opening the door we beheld the little fellow lying to the late election, peruse the Repubon the floor, the blood and brains oozing out of his head until it had formed a large pool, and yet the boy was still living. After a few hurried inquiries as to the cause of the accident we hastened to town and informed Dr. Coburn, whom we met at the Lawrence House. It seems the young man, Martin, his brother Mike, one of Mr. Wentworth's boys and the unfortunate little boy had been out to shoot pigeons as they were flying into the roost, and while returning home concluded to shoot off their guns. Young Wentworth pulled up his gun to shoot; Martin was standing near with his gun lying on his left arm, while the little boy was standing behind him. When Wentworth's gun went of Martin says his also was discharged striking the boy a glancing shot on the right side of the head, about the top of the ear, knocking a piece of the skull out and leaving a hole about two inches long

Strange to say the boy is still living the doctor has no hopes of his recovery. Although unconscious he seems to realize pain, as, when the doctor was feeling about his head he wanted has also asked for water on one or two occasions; otherwise he does not speak or recognize any one. His brother can give no account of how his gun was discharged, but the theory is that he had his thumb on the hammer and intended shooting off his gun about

-Our citizens were somewhat surprised to see a raft going down the river last Thursday, the water being probably a foot or eighteen inches lower than it was ever known to be before. The "fleet" covered considerable ground-or water, rather-but was not rafted deep, and was drawn over the shallow places by a horse. The occurrence inspired a faint hope in the breasts of some of our lumbermen, and they went immediately to work to fix up their raft shanties.
