The Best Remedy Known to Man!

Dr. Clark Johnson having associated himself with Mr. Edwin Eastman, an escaped captive, long a slave to Wakametkla, the medicine man of the Comanches, is now prepared to lend his aid in the introduction of the wooderful remedy of that tribe.

The experience of Mr. Eastman being similar to that of Mrs. Class. Jones and son, of Washington Co., lowa, an account of whose safferings were thrillingly marrated in the New Ton. Hereld of Dec. 15th, 1878, the facts of which are so widely known, and so nearly parallel, that but little mention of Mr. Eastman's experiences will be given here. They are, however, published in a neat volume of 300 pages, entitled, "Seven and Nine Years Among the Comanches and Apaches," of which mention will be made hereafter. Suffice it to say, that for several years, Mr. Eastman, while a captive, was compolled to gather the roots, guins, barks, herbs and berries of which Wakametkla's medicine was made, and is still prepared to provide the says materials for the successful introduction of the medicine to the world; and assures the public that the remedy is the same now as when Wakametkla compelled him to make it.

Telegrams from Wyoming Territory state that General Merritt, after a forced march in which his troops covered 170 miles in about forty-eight hours, reached the battlefield at Milk river, in Colorado, and reinforced the command of Captain Payne, which for five days had been gallantly holding its own in the intrenchments, though constantly under a hot fire from the Ute Indians. The casualties in Payne's command has been twelve men killed Payne's command has been twelve men killed and forty-three wounded. Captain Dodge had already arrived with a company of colored cavalry, but all of his horses had been shot by the Iudians, except two, and he was obliged to remain passive behind the intrench-ments until General Merritt arrived. In his report to General Sheridan, Merritt says words fail to describe the scene in the vicinity of the wretched intrenchments. Over 300 dead animals were lying outside of the breastworks, the stench from which was something horrible. During the five days that Captain Payne's troops were besieged they fortified themselves as well as possible by building a stockade and digging a trench, in which they ensconced themselves out of range of the galling fire that was being poured into them constantly by the Utes from the surrounding heights. A courier from the White river agency, to the reliet of which Major Thornburg a command was marching when attacked, reports that all the white men there were killed, but the women and children were The women and children at the agency were the wite of Agent Meeker and his daughter, Miss Josephine, Mrs. Price and her two children, and a boy named Thompso The white men at the agency were the agent, Mr. N. C. Meeker, Frank and Harry Dresser, E. L. Mansfield, W. H. Post, Mr. Price, Frederick Shepherd and George Eaton.

The one hundredth anniversary of the siege of Savannah and death of Sergeant Jasper, the Revolutionary hero, was celebrated at Savan-nah in presence of about 20,000 people. The corner-stone of a monument to Sergeant Jasper was laid, and the military and civic procession was one of the most brilliant ever seen in a Southern city. United States Senator Gordon was the orator of the day.

From Washington.

Under the provisions of the circular of the Secretary of the Treasury, of September 19 last, in regard to the shipment of gold coin to parties desiring it, there has been sent out from the mint gold to the amount of $171,050. In addition to this the sub-treasuries are all supplied with gold and are paying it out freely on current obligations, and the Treasurer's checks for called bonds redeemed are being paid by the Assistant Treasurer in New York in gold through the clearing house.

The postoffice authorities have issued a circular directing the postmasters not to deliver mail matter addressed to lottery concerns or to their agents when designated as such.

The English army of advance into Afghan stan has fought a battle with the Afghans, who advanced to the attack from Cabul in heavy numbers. General Roberts, the English commander, reports that the fighting was heavy and lasted all day, but finally resulted in the complete rout of the Afghans, whose position was carried. The British loss was about eighty killed and wounded. Special dispatches report that at one time during the fight two companies of Highlanders were op-posed to 2,000 Afghans. The latter held their ground until the Highlanders were within twenty yards The total Afghan force is said to have been eleven regiments, with artillery and an immense number of hillmen. The backbone of the resistance is broken for the present, but the whole country is seething with excitement, and the people would rise at the slightest reverse to the British.

In a naval engagement off Majillones the Chilian fleet captured the Peruvian ram Huasear. Under Captain, now Admiral Grau, the Huascar has borne the whole brunt of the present war with Chili, especially since the Pilcomayo, the only other vessel in the Peruvian navy of any value, ran on a reef during a battle and sank. At Iquique the Huascar sank the Chilian wooden ship Esmeralda. Captain Pratt, of the Esmeralda, was killed while making a gallant attempt to board the ram. Off Antalogasta she captured the Chillan transport Rimae with 240 dragoons, 30,000 pesos in coin, and a cargo of supplies for the army. She also engaged without very positive results the Chilian iron-elad Blanco Eucalada and the corvettes Magallanes, besides capturing many launches and merchantmen, bombarding Antalogasta, sinking a pontoon arsenal, making two or three raids along the Chilian coast and breaking up the Chilian blockade of Iquique. As the armies on land cannot get at each other on account of the desert which lies between them, and as the Peruvians have no navy to speak of left to meet the comparatively fine squadron of the Chilians, it is difficult to see how the war can last much longer.

England. Terrible Railroad Collision.

One of the most shocking disasters that has occurred in the West since Ashtabula, and one of the most frightful in the history of Michigan railroads, has befallen a train on the Michigan Central Railroad, which left Detroit at half-past ten P. M., forty minutes behind time. The train was the west bound Pacific express, and was composed of fourteen cars seven Wagner sleepers, four passenger coaches

SUMMARY OF NEWS. and three mail and baggage cars. Next to the mail car was an emigrant and second-class car, nearly filled with passengers. At Jackson, Mich., the train, while going at a high rate of speed, ran into a switch engine, telescoping the baggage and express cars and ernshing the four passenger coaches. The scenes which followed the collision were heartrending in the extreme. When the baggage car came in contact with the crushed conches there was a heap of bruised, bleeding and dying human beings, whose means and cries of distress filled the air. Mutilated bodies of the dead could be seen among the debris of the wrocked coaches. Under the shapeless mass which was once the express engine were the bodies of the engineer and fireman, which were extricated as soon as possible. Death to them and many of the other victims must have been instantaneous. The engineer and fireman of the switch engine seeing their peril in time leaped from their places and escaped injury. The lateness of the bour and the darkness of the night rendered the work of extricating the victims necessarily a slow and tedious one, but scores of ready hands were actively engaged in doing all that could be done under the distressing circumstances. Many trying and touching incidents occurred, and many acts of heroism were recorded. The saddest case was that of Willie Rice, a fairhaired and bright-eyed little boy, four years of age, whose father and mother and sister were all killed. He was found clasped in his dead mother's arms, and so fastened in the wreck that it took three hours with axes and other implements to extricate him. His left leg was broken and his left arm and chin badly cut. His family lived in Philadelphia, and were on their way to some point in the West. The news of the disaster soon spread through Jackson, and by daybreak the crowds at the scene of the catastrophe were numbered by hundreds and greatly hindered the work of the rescuers, and required the constant efforts and watchfulness of the police. The milroad offi-cers summoned hacks, omnibuses and what-ever vehicles could be obtained, and conveyed provided for their immediate wants, while the citizens did all in their power to mitigate the horrors of the accident. More than twenty persons were killed and about thirty wounded, some fatally. Most of the dead and injured were taken out of the accident. the passengers and wounded to the city, and were takea out of the emigrant car, which received the heaviest force of the collision.

> Bantered into a Marriage. The Ogden (Utah) Daily, of a recent date, contained this queer communica-tion from an indignant husband and wife: We, the undersigned, parents of Frances Albert Gale, desire to state, as some unprincipled person, on September 18, 1879, did bet and banter our son, the aforesaid Francis Gale, that he dare not marry Miss Esther Malan on the train coming into Ogden that evening, on the Utah and Northern railroad, the same person offering presents and work to the young man if his father disowned him, and as the young man would not take the banter, but asked C. F. Middleton to unite them in the bonds of matrimony, and as Middleton listened to their requests and married the couple at Hot Springs, ten miles from Ogden, on board the train, in consideration of five dollars, that we protest against this alliance and will not recognize it as valid, either in church, county or State, the young man being a minor and not having our consent to his marriage with the young woman; and we would advise all our neighbors, brethren and friends to take care lest their own children, when abroad with money in their pockets, be bantered or coaxed into such unhappy alliances for the benefit of mercenary persons, who look more upon the value of the dollars to them than they do upon the feelings of the unfortunate parents.

It does not deteriorate, is an agrees ble cordial as well as a potent medicine, and when mixed with brackish or unwholesome water neutralizes its hurtful properties. The denizens of malarious localities, not only in the United States, but the tropics, regard it as an invaluable protection, and in hosts of families it is kept constantly on hand.
