The forest Republican.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY

J. E. WENE. OFFICE IN ROBINSON & BONNER'S BUILDING ELM STREET, TIONESTA, PA.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

No Subscriptions received for a shorter period than three months. Correspondence solicited from all parts of the country. No notice will be taken of auonymous communications.

The Watermill.

Listen to the watermill through the livelong day-

How the clinking of its wheel wears the hours away.

Languidly the autumn wind stirs the green wood leaves.

From the fields the reapers sing, binding up the sheaves:

And a proverb haunts my mind, as a spell ih

The mill will never grind with the water that is past.

Autumn winds revive no more leaves that once are shed,

And the sickle cannot reap corn once gath ered:

And the rippling stream flows tranquil, deep and still,

Never gliding back again to the watermill. Truly speaks the proverb old, with a meaning vast, The mill will never grind with the water that is past.

Take the lesson to thyself, loving heart and true,

Golden years are fleeting by, youth is passing

Learn to make the most of life; loss no happy day.

Time will never bring thee back chance awept away.

Leave no tender word unsaid, love while love shall last;

The mill will never grind with the water that is past.

Work while yet the daylight shines, man of strength and will,

Never does the streamlet glide useless by the mill:

Wait not 'till to-morrow's sun shines upon thy way,

All that thou canst call thine own lies in thy lo-day

Power, intellect and health may not always Inst

The n Ill cannot grind with the water that is past.

Oh, the wasted hours of life that have drifted - hyl

O', the good we might have done, gone with out a sight

Love, that we might once have saved by single word,

Phoughts conscived, but never penned, per ishing unbeard.

Take this lesson to thine heart, take and hold it last

The mill will never grind with the water that is past. _ Gen. D. C. McCallum.

cital-I felt a thrill at my heart. It was a thrill of exquisite pain—a thrill of jealousy of Joe's happiness. "Joe," I mentally cried, "better, far better for me if I had declined your invitation Presently we had a most refreshing supper, after which Joe and I strolled

VOL. XII., NO. 33.

it for a walk and a smoke, "Joe," I exclaimed, enthusiastically, out "your encomiums of your wife were merited. She is indeed a treasure. By Jove if I could find such a jewel I would never rest till I won and married her." Joe was on the point of lighting a cigar when I begun, but paused with up-raised match till I had finished—and the match burned his fingers. I thought for a time he was angry at my impetu-osity, but his face cleared away, and the old wicked twinkle that I feared so much came to his eyes. He grasped my hand, saying: "You're right, my boy; she's the dearest little wife in the universe. I'm glad you like her." After we had finished our cigars and talked for some time of our old college talked for some time of our old college days, we re-entered the house. "Nellie," cried Joe, opening the piano, "favor Tom and me with a tune. He has a passion for music." "Perhaps, Mr. Thurston—" began she, but was interrupted by Joe. "No, Nellie, I protest! No mistering around here! It's plain Tom. Do you hear, Tom? She's to call you Tom and you're to call her Nellie. Violation of this rule will incur my internal dis-pleasure. Govern yourselves accord-ingly." ingly.

"Perhaps he will object," pleaded Nellie, "No, no," I exclaimed, "it will please me very much-and-I will feel highly honored to be allowed to address you by your Christian name. "Pshaw, Tom! It'll please her. Won't it, Nell?"

She laughed, and gave me a bewitching look accompanied by a nod. "I was going to say," said Nellie, "that perhaps you could sing with me." "No. no; excuse me, I can't sing-Nellie.

Nellie." The word was uttered with a gasp, and I certainly turned violently red in the face. Joe was looking at me, and I saw he had a desperate struggle to control the muscles of his mouth. I was indeed foud of music, but I was entranced with her magnificent voice. The accuracy passed on golden wings

The evening passed on golden wings. Joe ran on in his wild old ways; told his jokes and laughed just as boister-ously as he did when we roomed to-gether at college. He did not give as much chance to join in the conversation; for one comic anecdote reminded him of another which he must tell. We both laughed heartily at his stories, and talked volumes to each other with our

That night I dreamed I loved Nellic.

with her. I demand satisfaction, and it can only be had from your heart's blood. Meet me on the river bank, and by the The commonness of inebriety among light of the moon, and in the presence French children is asserted by a writer of Long, we will settle our differences. in the London Gentleman's Magazine. Again and again at hotel tables," he filthy.

The Forest Republican.

TIONESTA, PA., NOV. 5, 1879.

TIMELY TOPICS.

says, "I have seen children scarcely more than babies suffering distinctly from alcohol. It is, as travelers in France know, the custom in all districts south of the Loire to supply wine gratis

I looked up. Long had disappeared, and in his place stood Nellie. "Why, Tom, you're not going to leave us, are you?" she asked. I thought she addressed me in a tone of regret. I looked in her bright eyessuch beautiful loving eyes! How could I pain her? How could I drive the blood from her cheeks and the light from her eyes by showing her Joe's letter and telling her all? She came very near to me and said coaxingly: "Don't go, Tom; I will be so lonely here now.

'. I cannot stay, Nell, I regret having to leave you"—My words came fast and almost inarticulate. "I thought to be on my way now, and can only stay long enough to bid you adieu."

"But, Tom, what will Joe say? Surely you will stay till he comes!" she cried

"No, no. I cannot, Nellie; indeed I can not. I can never forget the happi-ness I have had here this summer; but I must leave you now, and fear--it-is forever!

My voice was unsteady, and I clasped both her hands very tightly in mine. "Forever!" she repeated. "Oh, Tom,

Forever! What a world of tenderness, of regret, in her intonations, It died away as a wail of woe. "No, Nellie; never shall I see you again; never shall I clasp these little hands in mine, never hear the music of your sweet voice. I shall never see you again-never!"

"Never!" the moan died away and the beautiful eyes were raised to mine in speechless agony that wrung my heart with pain.

"Oh, Nellie, do not break my heart! My grief, my wretchedness is beyond bearing now. Your beloved eyes look-iato mine will haunt me in coming years. You know my secret. Recrimi-nate me if you will, Nellie, my darling." A light sprung into her eyes—strange, dazzling light that spread over her beau-tiful form the light of a measuralous tiful face—the light of a measureless love, of a transport of joy. "Fare-well, I cried, in a husky voice, not dar-ing to stay longer; "farewell," and I turned to go, when her fingers closed over mine. I turned to her again and the star bar of the start of the sta she threw her arms about my neck.

"You must not go! You shall not go, for I love you!" and the beaming face was hidden on my breast.

A chuckling noise from behind startled us. It broke into a laugh, then into loud shouts and frightful roars, intermingled with hideous guffaws and a woman's musical laugh, till the hills echoed and re-echoed the sound. Nellie's face was suffused with blushes and she drew away from me; but I clasped her more closely, a light breaking in on $1.50 Per Annum.

The Government Library.

Readers who are eager for statistics may seek to know something of the pe-cuniary value of the collection of books which the people own at Washington. The expenditures upon the library of the government, if compared with its extent and value, has not been great. The sum total of the appropriations of Congress for books from 1800 to 1878 has not exceeded $640,000, and this is inclusive of the cost of two conflagrations.

at two meals, breakfast and dinner, at The British Museum Library, which which the residents in a hotel eat in company. Repeatedly, then, in the hotels in French watering places, I have watched children of five years old and upward supplied by their mothers with numbers 1,100,000 volumes, is supposed to have cost about $3,000,000 (£600,000); but as not not only this collection, but all the great government libraries of Europe, are rich in rare and early-printed books, as well as in manuwine enough visibly to flush and excite them. At Sables d'Olonne one little scripts, and many of them in costly enfellow, whose age could not be more than gravings, there can be no just basis for six, drank at each of two consecutive a comparison between them and a colmeals three tumblers of wine slightly diluted with water. The result was on each occasion that he sprawled over the lection so modern in its origin, as well as its principal contents, as our own. The library of the British museum, table, and ended by putting his head in his mother's lap and falling asleep." moreover, has enjoyed for more than a century the benefit of the copyright, bringing in free of cost all the publications of the British and colonial press. It appears from the official reports The library at Washington, though founded in the beginning of the century, that the experience of what are called model lodging houses, such as the Pea-body buildings in London and other large towns, combined with that of barreally dates from 1852, when only 20,-000 volumes were saved from the flames. It would be unreasonable to expect that racks, workhouses and schools, furnishan American national library should rival those of the old world in those coled abundant evidence that what is termed density of population is not so lections of incunabula and precious manudetrimental physically as has usually been assumed; because in such buildings as are referred to the rate of mortality is scripts which centuries of opportunity have enabled them to assemble. There are now twelve libraries in Europe out-numbering the library of Congress in the books upon their shelves; yet the growth of our national library has been much less, with a density of one thou-sand five hundred persons to the acre, than it is in ordinary houses, with a density of only two hundred and fifty to so rapid as to have twice doubled the the acre. Again, the health of a community is found to be much more de-pendent upon food, clothing and personal numeral extent of the collection in fifteen years. In 1863 the library of Washington contained 72,000 volumes; in 1867, 165,000; and in 1878 the collection habits, than upon the arrangement and construction of dwellings or workshops had risen to 340,000 volumes, besides -for, however perfect the arrangement pamphlets. The Boston public library and construction, these may be entirely neutralized if the food is bad, the clothalone among American collections, approximate it in size, and even a little ing deficient and the personal habits exceeds it if we count the books contained in its seven branches in the suburbs of Boston, which, however, are duplicates of the parent collection. But We get a great deal of wind about compressed air street car motors every the numerical standard is far from furnishing an adequate test of the true now and then. These aerial propellers value of any collection of books, save are in use on one street car line in the in the presumptive it furnishes that the largest collections will contain the best works printed in every field. It may be said for the library of Congress that, in the main, its stores have been selected United States and seen to give good sat-isfaction. It costs six and one-fourth cents a mile to draw a car by horse power. The compressed air system is said to cost but one and one-fourth cents with a view to the highest utility, and a mile. The speed can be regulated up with some general plan of unity; it has not, like the British museum library, to twenty miles an hour. The car can be stopped at its highest rate of speed within its own length; at least so it is reported, although this would be rather the Boston public library, and some other large institutions, been the recip-ient of extensive donations or bequests, rough on the passengers if the car was which, while greatly enriching the colgoing at its twenty-mile rate. The adlections, tends also to the multiplicavantage of this over any other motor is tion of duplicates. It were to be wished that all the heavy machinery is left be-hind at the depot, where the compress-ing is done, and the cars start out with that all authors of books, and especially of pamphlets, should bear in mind that this great collection at Washington is the representative library of the country, and by placing in it copies of their productions, whether protected by copyright or not, secure to their thought a place where it will be sure of transmission to that posterity which may care to examine it. All pamphlets coming to this library are treated with the same honor as books, acknowledged, sepa-

Rates of Advertising.

One Square (1 inch.) one insertion - $1 One Square " one month - - 3 One Square " three months - 6 One Square " one year - - 10 one month - - 3 00 three months - 6 00 one year - - 10 00 - 15 00 Two Squares, one year -Quarter Col. Half " 50 00 100 00 One Legal notices at established rates. Marriage and death notices, gratis. All bills for yearly advertisements col-lected quarterly. Temporary advertise-ments must be paid for in advance. Job work, Cash on Delivery.

Autumn Leaves.

Autumn leaves are falling, falling, falling Slowly to the ground : Angels sad are calling, calling, calling To the weary hearts with mournful cound; Solemn sound.

Autumn leaves are sailing, sailing, sailing Sottly through the air; Loving hearts are failing, failing;

Azrael hovers, beck'ning everywhere Everywhere.

Autumn leaves are dying, dying, dying Sadly, one by one;

Broken hearts are lying, lying, lying In their rest where dark despair is done; Grief is done.

Autumn leaves are speaking, speaking, speaking

To the thoughtless souls Who, but pleasure seeking, seeking, seeking, Heed not as life ever onward rolls; Swiftly rolls

Autumn leaves are pleading, pleading, pleading

In prophetic tone,

With the thousands speeding, speeding, speeding

To appear before their Maker's throne; A winl throne!

-Emile Pickhardt.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A handsome thing in dress goods: A pretty giri.—Ollawa Republican.

Scotland has produced another peasant bard named Anderson, a railroad aborer.

When the night is pitch dark, it does y no means follow that it's s-tarry .--Whim Whams.

Some one who believes that "brevity is the soul of wit" writes, "Don't eat stale Q-cumbers. They'll W up."

No matter how a young lady's hat is lost it is almost certain to turn upeither behind or at the side .- Sandy Some.

We presume the axletrees of railroad car wheels are called journals because of their rapid circulation.—Boston Trancript.

There are thirty thousand deaf mutes n the United States, and fifty places of worship where services are conducted in the sign language.

"It is more disgraceful, my son," said a fond parent, "to wear a black eya than it is to wear shabby clothes. "Ya-as," replied the boy, "but the clothes are hardest to get rid of." And the old man sat silent for a long time, thinking what to say, and by the time he thought of it his boy had been over in the neighbor's ard fifteen minutes, and had "

I write, my dear old chum, for the purpose of inviting you to visit us. Don't refuse: My wife heartily seconds the invitation. Ah, Tom, she's a jewel-my wife. I know if you could meet such a one you would succumb bachelorhood. She is the dearest, sweetest, best tem-pered, loveliest-the English language fails me here, but, as you were always better than I at the "Unabridged," I beseech you to look therein for some endearing adjectives and complete the sentence. You, who sing about the felicity of a "Bachelor Hall," when you have seen my happy home, will change your tune. You must come, Tom. I won't take a refusal. Yours, etc.

JOE HALL.

I answered his letter thus: My DEAR JOE-I thought when I hast saw you I never could be tempted to jeopardize my peace of utind or my bones by again placing myself at the mercy of your practical jokes. -But I have no other recourse now than to accept your invitation. You must promise me, my dear fellow, you will not play any of your jokes. A married man ought to be more dignified, and if you do play any of your tricks on me I warn you I shall board the first train for home. Yours, TOM THURSTON ...

I went. I was met at the train by Joe's servant, a man who had a long body, dressed in a long coat, a long waistcoat, a long necktie, a long hat, long boots and whose name was Long, I instinctively hated this man, scrutinized me closely; I returned the scrutiny. He watched my every movement like a detective would a supposed criminal's. I watched his movement as a timid man would a vicious canine's.

We at length reached Joe's house. anticipated Joe's welcome, but in his place came the loveliest woman I ever saw. It is true, as Joe said, I was always fluent in language, but to this day I cannot find words to satisfy me in describing her surpassing beauty. "Joe, Joe," thought I, "it is well for you that you met her first."

You are Mr. Thurston," she asked, timidly approaching me, and shyly glancing at me from under her drooping eyclids. I informed her that I was the personage, and inquired for Joe.

For answer that gentleman himself, who was on herseback, sprang from the saddie; grasped my hand, and, like the irrepressible Joe of old, cricd :

"Glad to see you, old boy! "We'l, have glorious old times, as of old. We'll hunt, fish, smoke, etc., till you grow so fat, hale and hearty that your most intimate city friends won't know Come, let's go in, tea is waiting. Pardon me for not introducing you, but I suppose you introduced yourself in my absence. Apropos, it was hospitable in me to absent myself on your arrival, but business called me away.

So rattling on Joe ushered us into the coziest little parlor that ever a poor bachelor was called upon to envy. But the cozy little wife? What was the from Joe, and read: envy of the room, with its adornments, (Oh, truthful dream!) I dreamed she reciprocated that love. (Oh, vain dream!) Then I dreamed intrigue be-gan. We determined to glope, My heart bled for poor Joe, but I felt it was death to live without her. Now she iver. swiftly. Now he closes in on us!

has met me under the old eim south of Joe's house. I see her pale, excited face I feel her nervous hand clasping mine! Now we are fleeing! On, on, and now we are pursued! Joe is on our track! The scene changes, and we are on the We glide along smoothly in a ight boat. Now we are safe, and she is mine-mine forever! But no, Joe still pursues us. Now he is close to us. Why cannot we glide faster? Joe approaches He has caught her in his cruel grasp! Her beautiful pleading eyes are raised to mine! He raises a knife aloft! Thee I catch his arm, we struggle silently to gether. I wrest the knife from his rasp and plunge it into his breast, and he drops from the misty boat and sinks beneath the dark waves! How dark the river has grown by the pale light of the moon! The gaunt and ghastly figure of Mr. Long suddenly emerges from the waves! I saw him catch my darling in his long arms, and, before I could inter-fere, they had both disappeared beneath the turbid waves of the river! This awoke me! I arose and resumed my wearing apparel, bathed my feverish face and went forth into the air to try and exercise the evil spirits with a cigar. By the ensuing morning my dream had ceased to trouble me, but the reality of things did not cease. There was Nellie before me in all her beanty, all her sweetness, to tempt me on to love her. There was Joe, with all his exuberance of spirit, and as unsuspicious as a child. He seemed to do all in his power to bring us together. He often lured us into interesting conversation, or managed to get us engaged in singing and playing, and then leave us alone for Days passed away and lapsed hours. into weeks; in these weeks I was almost the constant companion of Nellie Hall. We were out riding, boating, and to innumerable concerts and entertainments all through the suggestion and planning of Joe. I felt and knew well the danger; I was fascinated at first-now I was irretrievably in love. The thought of preaking away from this charming creature caused me pain like unto death. resolved to leave. No matter what it cost me, the only honorable course for me to pursue was to return to the city and forget-no, not forget, for never could I forget the only woman I ever loved or could love.

Joe was absent on the day I arrived at this determination. All the better I thought it; it would be easier to get away. I proceeded to pack up and get ready to go on the evening train. I noticed during the progress of packing, that the long body of Long was overshadowing me He seemed determined not to let anything escape his observa-tion. At length, when I had finished my work, he approached me. His long arm was raised to his breast pocket, and

Thomas Thurston, you are a traitor! to the envy of such a wife? Must I admit it?-I might as well own right here as at any further period of my re-is useless to deny intention of eloping is useless to deny intention of eloping is useless to deny intention of eloping is useless to deny intention of eloping my bewildered brain, "Ha! ha! ha!" roared Joe, while Long emitted a series of strange sounds very like a laugh. "Ho! ho! ho! Long —ha! ha! ha! wife—Tom thought sister Nell was-ha! ha! ha!-was my wife!

Words of Courage.

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for the want of courage. Every world for the want of courage. Every day sends to the grave a number of obscure men, who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented their first effort, and who, if ey could have been induced to begin, would, in all probability, have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is, in order to do anything in this world that is worth doing we must not stand shivering on the brink, and think of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating risks and ad-justing nice chances. It did very well before the flood, when a man could consult his friends upon a publication for one hundred and fifty years and then live to see its success for six or seven centuries afterwards, but at present a man waits, and doubts, and hesitates, and consults his brother and his uncle, and particular friends, till one day he finds that he is sixty years of age; that he has lost so much time in consulting first cousins and particular friends that he us no time left to follow their advice. There is no such thing for over-squeam ishness at present, the opportunity so casily slips away, the very period of his life at which man chooses to venture, if ever, is so confined, that it is no bad rule to preach up the necessity, in such instances, of a little violence to teelings, and to efforts made in defiance to strict and sober calculation-Sydney Smith.

Bucket Shop Gamblers.

According to the Chicago Tribunche introduction of "bucket shops," (low agencies where any sum from $1 upward can be invested on the rise or all of wheat) has led to wholesale gamb-Tribune declares The that ing. oman "not of desperate or questionable condition " come to these shops to gamble under assumed names, as well as ads from twelve to sixteen years old "by the hundred," and men, "clerks, alesmen, bookkeepers, men in business, hackmen, teamsters, men on saeries and men employed at day's work, stonecutters, blacksmiths and workmen of all wages and occupation; students and professors of colleges, reverend di-vines, dealers in theology, members of Christian associations, members of societies for the prevention of cruelty to and slight acidity, which you can no animals and for the suppression of vice, gentlemen who war on saloons which permit minors to play pool, and teach-ers of Sunday-schools, hard drinkers and temperate men," who stake thousands of dollars in small sums. Accepting the statements of the Tribune as true, the recent fluctuations in the price of wheat have brought the community to a worse pass in Chicago than ever mining speculation did in the worst days of San Francisco.

The midnight marauder should not be hanished from our dwelling any more quick'y than should a cough or cold of any kind be concealed evlinders containing the an compressed to twenty-five atmospheres. Thus we may have windmills to drive the street cars.

Persons presenting claims to the United States Treasury on account of bonds which have been destroyed wholly or in part, or on account of registered bonds which have been lost, will be rerately bound (instead of having their identity merged with others in incon-gruous volumes), and classified in their quired to present evidence showing-First, the number, denomination, date of authorizing act and series of each proper relation upon the shelves. bond, whether coupon or registered, and if registered, the name of the payee. In the case of recistered bonds, it should also be stated whether they had been assigned or not, and if so, the name of the assignee should be given. Second-The time and place of purchase, of whom purchased, and the consideration paid. Third-The material facts and circumstances connected with the loss. The evidence should be as full and clear as possible. Proofs may be made by affidavit, and by such other competent evidence as may be in the possession of the claimant. Duplicates will not be issued within six months from the loss. The interest on uncalled registered bonds will be paid notwithstanding the loss. These regulations do not apply in any way to coupons lost or destroyed which have been detached from the bonds, as no relief in such cases can be granted.

The Mangosteen.

I must not omit the tree which bears mals, the famous fruit of the East known as the mangosteen. It is not tall nor is it particularly handsome. It is only some twenty feet in height and has spreading branches instead of the single tufts that adorn the trees that I have just described. But the fruit is the prince of the tree fruits of the world-the apple, the peach, the orange, the pomegranate, none of them cin compare with it, and even if you combine all these fruits you are only beginning to approach it. Externally it has the appearance of a small apple that has been partially baked or has become very brown in the sun. On harder than the rind of an orange and three times as thick. When you have penetrated this husk you find a mass of snow-white pulp, and you need no instructor to tell you that this is the edble portion of the mangosteen. It melts your mouth like an over-ripe peach or like snow on the surface of a river. Its flavor is a combination of sweetness more describe than you can tell how a violet smells or a canary sings. I think have tasted nearly every fruit that grows on the globe, and unhesitatingly I award the prize of excellence to the mangosteen. At this distance of time and place my lips moisten when I think of the mangosteens that solaced the heat of Java and made the life of the island more agreeable than it would otherwise have been. If this fruit grew in the Garden of Eden, I can well understand why Adam and Eve wept at their expulsion; perhaps it was the mangosteen which the serpent offered for the temptation of our first mother, if so, it is easy to understand why she fell from grace.

-Correspondence Philadelphia Times.

Educating Horses.

Horses can be educated to the extent of their understanding, as well as children can be easily damaged or ruined by bay management. It is believed that the great liability comes more from the different management of men than from variance of natural disposition in the animals. Horses with mettle are more easily educated than those of less or dull spirits, and are more susceptible of illtraining, and consequently may be as good or bad, according to the education they receive. Horses with dull spirits are not by any means proof against bad management, for in any of them may often be found the most provoking ob-stinacy, vicious habits of different characters that render them almost worthless. Could the coming generation of horses in this country be kept from the days of colthood to the age of five years in the hands of good, careful managers, there would be seen a vast difference in the general character of the noble ani

If a colt is never allowed to get an advantage it will never know that it possesses a power that man cannot con-trol, and if it be made familiar with strange objects it will not be skittish and nervous. If a horse is made accustomed from his early days to have objects hit on his heels, back and hips, he will pay no attention to the giving out of harness or of a wagon running against him at an unexpected moment. A gun can be fired from the back of a horse, an umbrella held over his head, a buffalo robe thrown over his neck, a railroad engine pass close by, his heels bumped with sticks, and the animal take it all as the natural condition of things, if only taught by careful management that he will not be injured thereby. There is a great need of improvement in the management of this noble animal, less beating and more educating.

Rules for Acquiring Wealth.

Be honest. If Satan tempts you to defraud your neighbor, it is only that he may rob you of your ill-gotten gain in the end.

Be temperate. Liquor has made more paupers than all other vices combined. Be industrious. Indolence, debt and disease are brothers

Let your word be your bond. Good credit is a fortune to begin with.

Limit your expenses by necessity and comfort, leaving a good balance for margin saved.

Invest your funds carefully and intelligently. Beware of the brilliant bubbles that are blown up to tempt ingenious speculators.

Give your personal attention to your To do this, keep brain and business. body healthful.

the neighbor's son and won a white alley, two crystals and a boly .- hawkeye.

A terror remembered is sometimes more dangerous than the same terror actually experienced. One Sunday, not long ago, as a young woman was cross-ing the Rue St. Honore, Paris, she was suddenly knocked down by a highwheeled cart, known as a spider. Her peril was imminent, but she retained her elf-possession and relieved the anxiety of the spectators by regaining her fect and reaching the sidewalk very little the worse for her mishap. As soon as she reached home she began to relate the incident to her friends, and while doing so was seized with a violent attack of nervous agitation, and sank fainting on the floor. She never spoke again.

A LAY.

Oh, these memories all flow inward, On my tired heart to-day, And I almost smell the clover, While I list, the robins lay. -Lilla N. Cushman.

LATER.

Sweet the summer breezes gently Sweep along the cottage thatch, And I almost smell the clover. While I list, the robins hatch. -Steubenville Heral :.

LATEST And while autumn winds are sighing, Echoing my heart's sail throbbin's, Yesterday we shot and made a Bully pot-pie of the robins. -Burlington Hawkeye.

How the Sparrow was Introduced.

One of the most interesting papers in Harper's relates to a little bird that has een the subjection of praise and of denunciation also. There is much dispute as to the merits or the shortcomings of the sparrow, and we are not certain the American people will gratefully remem-ber the person who first introduced the foreigner to our country. This attempt was made we are told by a gentleman named Desblois, in Portland, Maine, during the autumn of 1858; he brought over a few birds from the continent, and liberated them in a large garden which was situated within the central part of the city. They remained there sheltered and secure under the caves of a neighboring church throughout the winter, and in the following spring settled down happily enough to the labor of nest-building and rearing their young. 'wo years later the first pair of these finches were set at liberty near Madison Square, New York city; the importation was steadily repeated, the birds being released in the Central Park and at Jersey City. They were first introduced to Boston in 1868 by the city gov-ernment, and to Philadelphia by the municipal authorities in 1869, and from small beginnings the house-sparrow has been spread all over this northern country wherever we have a city east of the Rocky mountains, and the fluttering floe's of the robust, noisy little foreigner enliven the streets thereof in every direction. Their numbers are near? countless .- Buffalo Commercial.