The Best Remedy Known to Man! Dr. Clark Johnson having associated himself Dr. Clark Johnson having associated himself with Mr. Edwin Eastman, an escaped captive, long a slave to Wakametkia, the medicine man of the Connanchea, is now prepared to lend his aid in the introduction of the wonderful remedy of that tribe.

The experience of Mr. Eastman being similar to that of Mrs. Chas. Jones and son, of Washington Co., lowa, an account of whose sufferings were thrilingly narrated in the New York Heraid of Dec. 15th, 1878, the facts of which are so widely known, and so nearly parallel, that but little mention of Mr. Eastman's experiences will be given hore. They are, however, published in a near volume of 300 pages, entitled, "Seven and Nine Years Among the Commenches and Apaches," of which mention will be made hereafter. Suffice it to say, that for several years, Mr. Eastman, while a captive, was compelled to gather the roots, gums, barks, herbs and berries of which Wakametkia's medicine was made, and is still prepared to provide the saxs materials for the soccessful introduction of the medicine to the world; and assures the public that the remedy is the same now as when Wakametkia compelled him to make it.

Wakametkla, the Medicine Man Nothing has been added to the medicine and sothing has been taken away. It is without doubt he BEST PURIFIER of the BLOOD and RENEWER of he System over known to man. This Syrup possesses varied properties. It acts upon the Liver.

It acts upon the Kidneys.
It regulates the Blood.
It purlies the Blood.
It quiets the Nervous System.
It promotes Digestion.
It Nourishes, Strengthens and Invigerates.

It carries off the old blood and makes

New.

It opens the pores of the skin, and induces Mealthy Perspiration.

It neutralizes the hereditary taint, or poison in the blood, which generates Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all manner of skin disenses and internal humors. There are no spirits employed in its manufacture, and it can be taken by the most delicate babe, or by the aged and feeble, care only being required stanties to directions.

scenes in the Famous Salons of Monte Carlo-Description of the Piny-Piles of Gold and Bank Notes-"The Green Table is a Great Leveler."

To come to Nice without visiting Monaco, writes a correspondent, is to go to London and not see the Tower. Carnivalistic festivities being at an end, I made a trip to Monte Carlo at Monaco, the most famous gambling place the world knows—and the only one in Europe now existing openly under State patronage; for that of Nalais-Saxon, Switzerland, was shut a short time ago, the federal government commission solemly reading at midnight the law announcing the closing of the last gambling place but one in the o.d world. Our 12:85 P. M. train leaving Nice was packed with English, Germans, Russians, with here and there an American, some of whom had come from Cannes. Our common destination was Monaco, a half hour's ride through the finest scenery on God's earth.

I descended from the train at Monaco, while my feilow travelers remained a couple of minutes longer, riding to the door of Monte Carlo; for your convenience is so studied that you are kin ly left at the very gate of destruction. Preferring to see the town itself first, I climbed the steep rock, perhaps 300 feet high, on which Monaco is perched. The broad, white silk banner of the smallest country in Europe fluttered gaily on the breeze, and the little town lay bathed in sunshine and literally covered with bright flowers, palm trees, cactuses and aloes. I have traveled far and wide, but I never have seen as lovely view of mountains, water and sky as on the threshold of Italy. After visiting the remarkable castle and still more remarkable court, and gazing down from the lovely palace garden into the sea, which lies far below, I started off for Monte Carlo, twenty minutes walk from the castle, on a road planted with paim trees and innumerable cactuses. This road by the sea wound around the tiny town and afforded unrevealed views stretching around a semi-circle of blue mountains to Italy, and closed by the dim outlines of the city of Bordighiera. It would take me hours to describe one of the finest gardens of Europe, so I'll only say that the garden of Monte Carlo commands the loveliest view and has the finest plants and flowers of the beautiful, peaceful look the landscape has; the ladies, many of them splendidly attired, laugh and talk nervously; the men are wrapt up in their own thoughts, paying little attention to their fair companions. The women care but little for this want of politeness, for this gambling passion is the strongest of all, swallowgin up all others, natural and artificial. At the gambling table there is no sex; a man gazes as stolidly at the most beautiful women of Europe as at the walls.

There are some formalities to be gone through before entering the play rooms. A man is not permitted to ruin himself each day the following notice: "In accordance with the rules of the Strangers' Circle of Monte Carlo, en-trance to the playing rooms is allowed only to persons with tickets. The entrance is forbidden to inhabitants of the principality, and to those of the department, with the exception of club members. Entrance tickets given at the Casino bureau."

A Russian acquaintance of mine, who goes often merely to look on and play a napoleon or so, was refused admittance ately by the secretary, who saw by his eard that he had moved from his hotel to private lodgings, and thereby lost his migratory character and became an in-habitant of the department. "Oh, very well," returned the subject of the ezar, nonchalently, "then I shall save a thousand franc bill." He was immediately allowed to enter; circumstances alter ases. The fact is, he had only twenty francs in his pocket, with which he won 600; but he spent it in a day or two. money gained in that way notoriously burning one's pocket. The wisdom of the above measure is obvious. If the inhabitants of the neighborhood were allowed to play, the ruin and desolation a ould cause the immediate closing of he Casino; whereas when a stranger leses, the next train takes him away, and if he chooses to blow out his brains, it is purely a personal affair. The Casino is a fine large palace containing a large, elegant ball-room, a thrater with a fine orchestra and a spleadid reading-room, well supplied with journals in all languages. After entering our name in a visitor's book, we receive an entrance ticket and are permitted to pass into the magnificent raming-rooms. As we enter at 6 P. M .. the rooms are softly lighted to harmonize with the richty decorated walls. There are two tables in the first room and three in the second, at which are played the two games, roulette and rouge et noir. Several hundred players and spectators are present. Silver stakes are predominant on the tables devoted to the first game, but only gold and bank notes on the rouge et noir tables. which are given up to the aristocracy of gamblers, of whom women are in the majority. Not a seat at the tables is unoccupied. Behind the scated gamesters stands an eager crowd of players, as well as spectators; who prick with a pin the progress of the game, prepara-tory to risking later their money. Well-bred servants, in fine liveries, stand here and there or glide noiselessly around. Four men, cool and uncon-cerned, at each table, scated on elevated chairs, represent the bank, with piles of gold and bank notes before them. What beautiful women one sees here, and what toilettes. But no one cares to regard either. Here beautiful blue English eyes seem sinister and glassy; little cherry mouths look hard, and pearly teeth are firmly set; little white hands are convulsively clenched; bright faces which I thought might do me good, but I did not find the right medicine until I got a 50-cen bottle of your medicine, which entirely cured to be a suppressed excitement. Some of these fair women would evidently feel reare ruined by an expression of cupidity; lieved by a shriek, but grim etiquette prevents. Passing a roulette table, I heard an English woman, who was holding up both hands tull of gold pieces, excitedly exclaim: "See! all that for one napoleon!" Her nervous laugh caused many a frown from those less the same result. Fortunately she did not play high. Here is an Englishman, however, who does; he is the center of all attraction, and a little crowd collect behind him; he is winning heavy stakes! How slowly and monotonously the croupler speaks. "Gentlemen, make game lasts. There is an instant's intermission between each phrase; at the first the players hasten to throw down their gold on red or black, and there are perhaps twenty different gold piles on the table. Here a woman standing and new to the game timidly throws down three Napoleons on black, immediately drawing back and gazing around as if fearful of being seen. There a Spanish millionaire throws down negligently a handful of gold. My lord, the English-man before alluded to, a handsome young fellow with a florid face, throws a 1,000 franc note on red. After the second phrase, no one is allowed to throw any money on the table or change the position of that already placed. Cards are dealt in breathless silence, and the winning color pronounced red! My lord pulls in with a little rake the bank note which he adds to a pile of bills under his elbow, leaving the newly won roll of 1,000 francs in gold on red again, and tossing ten francs in silver to the bank as the rules require on the gain of a thousand. The ady of the three napoleons looks sad, and her mouth quivers as they are raked in by the bank. It would not be merciful to say, "Serves her right, why did she play?" I've seen Christian men and women, who went "only to look on" come away without Suicides are not very frequent, as the losers, thanks to precautions taken, belong generally to classes that can afford to lose. In cases of suicide the journals of the department register the fact very briefly, in a line or two. Probably as each journal receives 300 or 400 francs for the short advertisement to players, it includes a tacit agreement not to inquire to deeply into tragic events. These journals do not demand the suppression of a casino which brings thousands of rich visitors to the shores of the Mediterranean. During the month of February, 1879, 37,000 visitors came to Mo

The promenaders have not the silk, but her pariner seemed desirous of making economies in his linen, and perhaps "making it up in that way." The bank, I am told, handed him back 1,500 for traveling expenses to England.

The bank at Monaco is not likely to break in spite of dreamers. Temporarily it is occasionally forced to stop, as a couple of years ago when an Englishman won in one evening 72,000 francs. I think, however, that the bank's capital is more secure than that of many Ame i-can stock companies; also that the players have perhaps as much chance winning as stockholders of said companies. A croupier at Hamburg, in a mowithout complying with them. Every ment of confidence, told me "that in journal in the department publishes the end the bank must win." The eldest daughter of Mr. Blanc, the deceased director, married, a year or so sgo, the Polish Prince Radetsky, and the youngest, the journals here inform us, is engaged to Prince Henride Bourbon (Sicilian branch,) having a dot of fifteen million francs. Mr. Blanc, the famous director, died a short time ago, and was universally loved and esteemed in the principality, thousands attending his

Among the bodily troubles which it oversomes are dyspepsia, irregularity of the bowels, liver complaint, general debility and nervous complaints. It is also found very usefu, in counteracting a tendency to weakness or disorder of the kidneys and bladder, and persons troubled with rheumatism strongly indorse it as a remedy. Its influence upon the entire system is highly beneficial, promoting as it does the return of sleep and appetite, and the acquisition of flesh and strength.
