and close struggle for the mastery on the part of its giant leaders are ended. In many respects the National Convention of 1880 may be regarded as one of the most marked that has ever assembled in this country. Its work, however, has been well done. The platform of principals enunciated and the candidates chosen as the standard bearers for the coming Presidential contest are worthy of the great political organization of liberal progress and advanced civilization. The dark clouds of distrust and discord that hung like a pall over the future success of the party have been dispelled by the sunlight of peace and harmony. Again the Republicans of all sections present a united front against the common enemy. The nomination of James A. Garfield, of Ohio, for the Chief Magistracy of this Nation, and the selection of Chester A. Arthur, of New York, unites all contending factions and interests, and infuses strength and enthusiasm into all hearts. Inspired with the confidence born of just principles and a trusted and capable leader, the Republican party will march on to certain victory. The all hands as the very best result of ation. No better choice could have 25th district. been made. Garfield and Arthur will sweep the country, and be elected with tremendous cheering. In our own county Garfield is particularly acceptable to all Republicans. Even the most ardent Grant and Blaine followers gladly acquiesce in the nomentire strength of the party.

OREGON secures the enviable position of firing the first gan of the campaign by electing a Republican Congressman and three Republican judges.

THE Derrick thinks it is hard to reconcile the editorial remarks in the Democratic papers that Garfield has stolen thousands of dollars from the government, with the statements in their life of the man that he is worth calculated for billousness and headonly about $15,000.

Garfield and Arthur.

Following are brief sketches of the ident four years hence :

James A. Garfield, the nominee of the Republican party for President, was born in Orange, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, November 19, 1831. His parenta were natives of the New England States. By the death of his father he was while yet a small boy, thrown upon his own energies and resources for a livelihood. At the age of sixteen he drove horse on the Ohio & Pennsylvania canal, and in various other employments he "paddled his own canoe," successfully over the waters of College, Mass., where he graduated in | don-22. 1856. After graduating, he returned to the West, and during a period of three years was president of a collegiate seminary at Hyram, Portage county, Ohio. In 1859 he was elected to the State Senate for the term of two years, and in 1860 was admitted

He is a native of the State of New York, and is now close upon fifty the period that he filled the position of Collector of the Port of New York, be was noted for his fine executive ability. The office was exceptionally well managed, and when President Hayes removed him along with Corstated that no fault was found with his administration of the office. He was removed because, in defiance of the famous civil service order of the President, he took an active part in State politics, serving on the State Central Committee and going to conmost trusted lieutenants, and has been frequently spoken of late as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Kernan.

One strong Blaine man, who is a manufacturer, however, was very open as to his feelings, going so far as to instruct his workmen to support any candidate but Grant, and that if he should be the nominee, to support the Demoventions. He was one of Conkling's cratic convention's choice, no matter who he be. It is a strange fact that since the nomination it is impossible to find anyone who was in favor of Grant, though Blaine's friends are as plenty as before his defeat, and they are open in saying that though the nomination is a good one, and that they will support it warmly, yet they Jefferson county having instructed are disappointed at their chieftain's for Gen.
