SENATOR BLAINE is already arranging for vigorous participation in the campaign for the success of the Republican party. What are Blaine's opponents doing?

A SPECIAL to the Commercial Gazette from Washington says: General Hendrick B. Wright is much disgusted with the treatment which he received at the hands of the Greenback Convention. He had been led to suppose by his friends that he would have a place on the Greenback ticket, either as President or Vice President, and in anticipation of that honor the General was in frequent communication with the convention at Chicago.

Finding his name omitted from the ticket, he consoles himself by asserting that the convention did not amount to much anyhow, and that the Greenback movement is played out. With these philosophical reflections the representative returns to his old political faith and companionship.

THE Boston Herald, an independent paper, if there ever was one, has this to say of General Garfield: "On the whole, we presume that our Democratic contemporaries, who feel obliged to throw mud on Garfield, believe he is an honest man. We certainly have no party prejudices in his favor, but we consider him one of the most honest, liberal and patriotic men in Congress, representing in the Republican party what Bayard represents in the Democratic, and in every way worthy of respect and confidence. If the Democrats will nominate a candidate equally good, we shall be pleased to give them credit for it, and we shall not worry over the result."

THE campaign this year opens in a manner which promises to make it the most unsavory of any ever known. It will exceed in calumny and "mud-throwing" the campaign of 1876. Hayes was a surprise to the democratic editors, and it was several weeks before they could obtain the points of his record on which to base abuse, but the morning after the nomination of Garfield the Democratic editorial batteries, loaded with political "mud-balls," were blazing away at the nominee. Less than a week has passed since the nomination, yet Garfield is the best abused man in the country, and the Republicans are waiting for the news from Cincinnati to pay their opponents back in the same coin. There is one despicable feature of these campaign slanders, which disgraces American journalism. It is the dishonesty of most of the criticisms. Honest reproofs to a party should be always in order, but exaggerated abuse without just cause is contemptible. The slightest rumor against a man's character is used for an editorial text, without an attempt being made to discover its origin, its truth or its falsity. Once started it can never down, but like the story of the three black crows, is enlarged with each repetition. If all the Democratic papers have said against Garfield could be proven or had the semblance of truth, he should be disgraced from office, tried, convicted and sentenced. If all is true that is charged against Tilden, why is he out of states prison? It is certainly time that journalism should be more truthful, and not hint that our laws are a failure by charging that prominent citizens are escaped criminals.—Derrick, 15th, inst.

Operations in Jefferson County.

ED. REPUBLICAN:—In fulfillment of my promise I will give you a brief statement of the "oil question" as connected with Rockdale in this county:

Oil was first noticed about 20 years ago, when digging a water well, but as they knew nothing about it at that time, they considered and called it "dirty, stinking stuff," and as it made everything that came in contact with it very offensive, and as it was of no value as a water well, it was filled up and the subject passed from their minds. Near to the spot where the water well was put down, is a small turf or peat bog in which a horse got mired about ten years ago, and in working to get it out, oil was for the first time noticed in that place, but as the people of that section thought of but little except the getting of timber and the working of their farms, no attention was paid to it. Lately, however, another and very different class of persons,—viz, practical oil producers,—have been examining the subject, the result of which is that two thousand acres have been purchased or leased in a very quiet way, and Mr. Ira Fuller, a well-known, practical and successful operator, who controls about one thousand acres, has one well going down, which at this time has reached a depth of about two hundred feet, with everything going on satisfactorily.

Mr. Meyer, another successful and practical operator, has leased several hundred acres and is expected to commence operations in a few days. Other parties have also leased large quantities of land, but I am unable to state the time when they are expected to commence operations.

There are other points in this county where drilling for oil is going on, and the prospects are that before long it will be fully tested as an oil territory, and, as far as I have been able to learn during my short visit to this place, with very favorable prospects.

Elk County Operations.

The following from the Kane Blade will doubtless be of interest to many of our readers, in that it shows that developments are tending toward this county from the Bradford field:

The operations recently commenced upon Hunt & Cleminger's well in Highland township, to drill to a greater depth, originated in a belief that the third sand, which was not found at a depth of 2,100 feet, was still to be had upon further search. The theory of the position of the oil sand in and about Kane is substantially, that upon leaving the Bradford field and proceeding in a southeasterly direction, the oil-bearing rock dips downward and in consequence of this declination, lies further from the surface the greater the distance away from well defined producing areas. At the Kinzua region oil sand has been struck at depths varying between 1,800 and 2,100 feet and these facts led to the consideration and adoption of the purpose of renewed drilling.

It is now very generally known about town that the work begun scarcely three weeks ago has brought results sooner than was anticipated, and the nature of the discoveries have become a public secret. It is said that the drill had not proceeded ten feet from where it was stopped last February before sand was struck, and quality and quantity was surprisingly good. At first coarse and pebbly the texture changed to a fine pebbly Bradford sand at the depth of fifteen feet from the top, through the upper layers of which rushed a large quantity of gas. This current was so strong as to render the sand pump useless, the cable doing the work of that implement by the aggregation of sand particles blown against its wet surface. Showings of oil were found, and the drill continued through over fifty feet of as good sand as can be found in the Bradford field, before striking slate. Progressing some way into the slate and no further indications being found, the well was removed to give place to a torpedo, which was set off on Thursday last. The most noticeable effect of the shot was to increase the flow of gas, without materially changing the quantity of oil. The general success of the well, however, in wildcat territory, is such as to induce the sinking of one or two more in the same vicinity within a few weeks by the same operators. There remains no doubt now of the existence of oil southwest of Kane, and the delay will not be long before that territory is fairly opened.
