"Politics make strange bed fellows." Susan B. Anthony is said to be for Hancock.

GENERAL GRANT is going to spend a week with Gen. Garfield at the latter's farm in Ohio.

If Speaker Randall takes any interest in the present campaign the fact has not developed itself.

THERE are two Democratic headquarters just now—Mr. Tilden's residence and Governor's Island.

THE Cobden club of England will take a hand in the Presidential election, in the interests of the Democracy.

As between the two "Yankee Generals," Jefferson Davis says he prefers Hancock, which is quite natural, and very proper.

COL. FORNEY has called upon Gen. Hancock and received personal assurance that the latter appreciates the former's sacrifice.

CONGRESSMAN MURCH, the Greenbacker, says his party flourishes the best when times are hard. The confession is honest and humiliating.

COL. FORNEY is writing the life of General Hancock for campaign circulation. He is to receive $5,000 for the work. Well, that is something.

THE Democratic organs don't like General Arthur's letter of acceptance any better than they did Garfield's. They are so difficult to please.

GENERAL ROGER A. PRYOR, who won his military title fighting against the Union, thinks the country is in great danger from the Republicans.

WADE HAMPTON promised Hancock the solid Southern Electoral vote. He should have added: "Peaceably if we can—with the shot-gun if we must."

SENATOR CAMERON's alleged lukewarmness in the present contest does not appear to have been well grounded, much to the disgust of the Democrats.

THERE is a probability of a dead failure being the result of the attempt to harmonize the Democratic troubles in New York. In Philadelphia, ditto.

GENERAL BUTLER has, at last, defined his position. He will devote himself this year to thorough identification with the Democratic party and next year run for Governor.

SECRETARY SCHURZ has got to work in Indiana, and by the way the Democrats are shouting "civil service rule" at him it is apparent he is doing considerable damage.

NOTHING new delights the Bourbon Democrats so much as the sight of a sword and pair of spurs. Several years ago such equipments threw a Democrat into spasms.

THE Republicans of Iowa have concluded that it is about time for them to again return a solid Republican delegation to Congress, and they will do it. In the present Congress there are two Greenbackers from Iowa—Messrs. Weaver and Gillette—but their places will be filled in the next Congress by reliable Republicans. Iowa is so overwhelmingly Republican that even with moderate harmony a solid delegation to Congress can easily be elected.

CARL SCHURZ spoke at Indianapolis yesterday, making the opening speech of the Republican campaign. He did not review the political questions of the day, merely passing them by with a few words, but he made a strong point on the business condition of the country, and the prosperity with which the people are now blessed. It is evidently the keynote of the campaign, and shows that the Republicans will make their campaign with the business men rather than politicians.—Derick.

THE HON. SAMUEL R. MASON of Pennsylvania, who was in 1878 the Greenback candidate for Governor, and before that a Democrat, has come out for Garfield, and is expected to make his first Republican speech this week at Erie, where he is attending United States Court.—Buffalo Express, July 22.

A short time ago it was circulated about that Mr. Mason had gone back to the Democrats, and all the papers of that stripe shouted for joy, and were profuse in their eulogies of him. We suppose he will now be the worst abused men in the country.

Garbling Garfield's Speeches.

In their efforts to make it appear that General Garfield is a Free-trader, the Democratic organs resort to the petty and disreputable trick of printing garbled and distorted extracts from some of his speeches in Congress. Here is one of them, which we find in one of our Democratic Philadelphia exchanges:

"In one of his revenue speeches in Congress General Garfield declared that 'the best way of arising revenue is to impose taxes on the fewest possible articles. Our present tariff imposes duties on 4,000 articles. Does Garfield's position satisfy the Industrial League?'"

The truth is that when General Garfield made the speech above alluded to, an amendment to the internal revenue laws was under discussion, and he had no reference whatever to custom duties. He was not discussing the tariff laws at all, but the subject of internal revenue. He has always advocated the levying of United States taxes on as few articles as possible, because it is internal taxation that bears most heavily on those classes of our people who are at least able to bear the burden. This same idea was carried out by the Republican party when it formulated the policy of abolishing internal taxation on the necessities of life and laid them on the luxuries. The attempt of the Democracy to establish a free trade record for James A. Garfield is as hopeless a task as any political party has ever undertaken, and will fail as ignominiously. The Republican candidate for President needs no further defense of his soundness on the tariff question than an honest presentation of his own record in Congress during the past few years, the events of which are fresh in the minds of all careful observers. During the last session of the Forty-fifth Congress Fernando Wood, the great disciple of Free-trade, made his furious attacks upon the present tariff laws. All men remembered how the industrial classes throughout the country were aroused. Great meetings were held by the workingmen in the Susquehanna, Lehigh, Schuylkill and Wyoming Valleys of this State, as well as in Ohio and other States. In those days General Garfield was among the foremost opponents of Fernando Wood's Free-trade scheme in Congress. Had Garfield been a Free-trader he would have joined Wood in the attempt to carry through the schemes of the European Free-traders.

How faithfully General Garfield battled in the interests of our American Industries at that time is attested by Hon. Wm. D. Kelly, the truest and ablest of all the Pennsylvania champions of Protection. On the same day that the great mass meeting was held at Lee Park in this city to protest against the passage of Wood's Free-trade bill, a similar meeting was held at Youngstown, Ohio, by the iron workers of Mahoning Valley. Among the speakers at that meeting was James A. Garfield, and none spoke more eloquently or more pronouncedly in favor of protecting our iron industries; none denounced more vehemently the schemes of British Free-traders to break down our system of Protection by Congressional enactment.

If the Democratic organs desire to give General Garfield's record on the question of Protection, let them print honest extracts from his speeches in Congress and not garbled sentences.—Wilkesbarre Record.

Our Washington Letter.

SPECIAL TO THE REPUBLICAN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22, '80.

The Democrats have made much talk since the Chicago Convention about General Grant's lukewarmness in the election of his successful rival. General Grant has at last deemed it expedient to deny these allegations. He says: "I can say without hesitation that I will give Garfield my hearty support. There is no reason why any Republican should not vote for Garfield. I know him to be a man of talent, thoroughly accomplished, and an upright man. I have nothing against General Hancock, but Garfield is the man for the office." In fact all the leaders charged by the Democrats with lukewarmness in the cause, have set them at naught by their declarations of warm support.

Secretary Schurz delivered his promised speech at Indianapolis, Indiana, on Tuesday night. It has peculiar interest in being the first important one of the campaign, and from the views he advocates, and the position he assumes, the drift of the campaign can be determined. The Secretary makes many strong points. He contrasts ably, and with striking truth the fitness of the two candidates for the office, taking the ground that the inexperience of General Hancock in political affairs would totally unsettle the civil branch of the Government by reason of the immense number of politicians with conflicting views upon vital questions who would press upon him for recognition support and official patronage. Being totally without experience in dealing with political factions, it is easy to see the predicaments he would constantly be in. Another strong point in his speech is his treatment of the financial question, and he ably contrasts the well known financial views of General Garfield and the Republican party, and the good work they have, and are accomplishing in lessening the burden of debt, and in establishing a foreign credit, which should be the pride of all Americans; with the unsettled and constantly changing views of the Democratic party, and its dangerous tendencies to repudiation. He asks the business men and capitalists if they can afford to help place in power a party so loose in its financial record. Business men, he said, would take a gambling chance, and a poor one at that, in voting the Democratic ticket. The speech will not inflame sectional passion. It is calm and presents the more solid issues of the campaign. It will be sent out as a campaign document.

The New York Sun (Democratic) gives up the contest in Indiana, and says that Hancock cannot carry the State. It further says "to elect Hancock it may be necessary to carry Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut and New Jersey. It is also disheartened as to the prospects of Democratic success in Virginia. If Democratic success is to depend upon the vote of Pennsylvania, Hancock's chances are not worth much. PHIL.
