A NEW SKETCH BY DICKENS.

Mr. Hobert Bolton, the Gentleman Con nected with the Press.

Below we make room for one s ries of six sketches-called the " Mudfrog Papers' -- written in his early days by Chasles Dickens for Kentley's Miscellany. These sketches have never appeared in any of Dickens' published works, and are therefore unknown to the present generation of readers. Anything new from the pen of the great English novelist cannot fail to arouse interest in the thousands who have been charmed by the great novelist's

In the parlor of the Green Dragen, a public-house in the immediate neighborhood of Westminster Bridge, everybody talks politics, every evening, the great political authority being Mr. Robert Bolton, an individual who de-fines himself as "a gentleman connected with the press," which is a definition of peculiar indefiniteness. Mr. Robert Bolton's regular circle of admirers and listeners are an undertaker, a greengrocer, a hairdresser, a baker, a large stomach surmounted by a man's head, and placed on the top of two particularly short legs, and a thin man in black, name, profession and pursuit unknown, who always sits in the same position, always displays the same long, vacant face, and never opens his lips, sur-rounded as he is by most enthusiastic conversation, except to puff forth a volume of tobacco smoke, or give vent to a very snappy, loud and shrill hem! The conversation sometimes turns upon literature, Mr. Bolton being a literary character, and always upon such news of the day as is exclusively possessed by that talented individual. I found myseif (of course accidentally) in the Green Dragon, the other evening, and being somewhat amused by the followdresser of the stomach.

Where's your security, Mr. Clip?" of it, I'm thinking, Mr. Thicknesse. Some fifty whigs, two poles, half a dozen head blocks, and a dead bruin."

"No, I won't, then," growled out Thicknesse, "I lends nothing on the security of the whigs or the Poles As for wigs, they're cheats; as for the Poles, they've got no cash. I never have nothing to do with blockheads, unless I can't awoid it (ironiuse to me as I could be to a dead bear. "Well, then," urged the other, there's a book as belonged to Pope, Byron's Poems," valued at forty po: nds, because it's got Pope's identical scratch on the back; what do you think of that for security?"
"Well, to be sure!" cried the baker.
"But how d'ye mean, Mr. Clip?"

"Mean! why, that it's got the hottergruff of Pope.

Steal not this book, for fear of hangman's

For it belongs to Alexander Pope.' All that's written on the inside of the binding of the book; so, as my son says, we're bound to believe it."

"Well, sir" observed the undertaker, deferentially, and in a half whisper, leaning over the table, and knocking over the hairdresser's grog as he spoke,

"that argument's very easy upset."
"Perhaps, sir," said Clip, a little flurried, "you'll pay for the first upset afore you thinks of another." "Now," said the undertaker, bowing amicably to the hairdresser, "I think, I says I think-you'll excuse me, Mr. Clip, I think, you see, that won't go down with the present company—unfortunately, my master had the bonor of making the coffin of that ere lord's housemaid, not no more nor twenty year ago. Don't think I'm proud on it. gentlemen; others might be; but I hate rank of any sort. I've no more resp ct for a lord's footman than I have for ny respectable tradesmen in this room. I may say no more nor I have for Mr. Clip [bowing]. Therefore, that ere lord must have been born long after Pope died. And it's a logical inter-ferance to defer, that they neither of on the label of every bottle. Sold everywhere. MALT | them lived at the same time. So what I mean is this here, that Pope never had no book, never seed, felt, never smelt no book [triumphantly] as belonged to that ere Lord. And, gentlemen, when I consider how patiently you have eared the ideas what I have expressed, I feel bound, as the best way to reward you for the kindness you have exhibited, to sit down without saying anything more -partickler as I perceive a worthier visitor nor myself is just entered. I am not in the habit of paying compliments. gentlemen; when I do, therefore, I hope I strikes with double torce."

Ah, Mr. Murgatroyd! what's all this about striking with double force?" said the object of the above remark, as he entered. "I never excuse a man's getting into a rage during winter, even when he's scated so close to the fire as you are. It's very injudicious to put yourself into such a perspiration. What is the cause of this extreme physical and mental excitement, sir?"

Such was the very philosophical ad-dress of Mr. Robert Bolton, a shorthand equivoque passing current among his fraternity, which must give the uninitiated a vast idea of the establishment of the ministerial organ, while to the initiated it signifies that no one paper can lay claim to the enjoyment of their ser vices. Mr. Bolton was a young man, with a some what sickly and very dissipated expression of countenance. His thrift and persevering industry, which habiliments were composed of an exquisite union of gentility, slovenliness, assumption, simplicity, newness and old age. Half of him was dressed for the winter, the other half for the sum-mer. His hat was of the newest cut, the D'Orsay; his trousers had been white, but the inroads of mud and ink, etc., had given them a pie bald appearance; round his throat he wore a very high black cravat of the most tyrannical hidden beneath the enormous folds of an old brown poodle-collared greatcoat, which was closely buttoned up to the aforesaid cravat. His fingers peeped through the ends of his black kid gloves, and two of the toes of each foot took a similar view of society through the extremities of his highlows. Sacred to the bare walls of his garret be the mysteries of his interior dress! He was a short, spare man, of a somewhat inferior deportment. Everybody seemed influenced by his entry into the room, and his salutation of each member partook we write for partinuiss.

"PEOPLE'S TEA CO., Box 5025, St. Louis Mo. of the patronizing. The hairdresser made way for him between himself and the stomach. A minute afterward he had taken possesion of his pint and pipe. A pause in the conversation took place. Everybody was waiting, anxious for his first observation.

Everybody changed their positions. All eyes were fixed upon the man of paragraphs. "A baker murdered his son by boiling him in a copper," said Mr. Bolton.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed everybody, in simultaneous horror.
"Boiled him, gentlemen!" added Mr.

of porter, and some two or three dozen whiffs of tobacco, doubtless to instill into the commercial capacities of the company the superiority of a gentleman connected with the press, and then said 'The man was a baker, gentlemen.

Every one looked at the baker present, who stared at Bolton.] His victim, in bed, by inserting in her mouth a con-siderable portion of a sheet or blanket."

came home in a reprehensible state of beer. Mrs, S., connubially considerate, carried him in that condition upstairs inte his chamber, and consigned him to their mutual couch. In a minute or two she lay sleeping beside the man reporter that his picture had attained the awful effect he desired]. The son came home about an hour afterward, opened the door and went up to bed. Scarcely (gentlemen, conceive his feelings of alarm)—scarcely had he taken ing conversation, preserved it.

"Can you lend me a ten-pound note till Christmas?" inquired the hairoff his indescribables, when shricks (to his experienced ear maternal shricks) scared the silence of surrounding night. "My stock in trade—there's enough it, I'm thinking, Mr. Thicknesse, ran downstairs. He opened the door of them, adding a few words of earnest was dancing upon his mother. What must have been his feelings! In the agony of the minute he rushed at his her own hand and sends with a letter of male parent as he was about to plunge a knife into the side of the female. found with a ferocious countenance by the mother, who arrived in the melan-

"'In that copper, boiling,' coolly re plied the benign father. "Struck by the awful intelligence, the mother rushed from the house, and alarmed the neighborhood. The police entered a minute afterward. The father, having boited the wash-house door, had bolted himself. They dragged the life-less body of the boiled baker from the caldron, and, with a promptitude com-mendable in men of their station, they immediately carried it to the station-house. Subsequently the baker was apprehended while seated on the top of a amp-post in Parliament street, lighting his pipe."

The whole horrible ideality of the 'Mysteries of Udolpho," condensed into the pithy effect of a ten-line paragraph, could not possibly have so affected the narrator's auditory. Silence the purest and most noble of all kinds of applause, bore ample testimony to the barbarity of the baker, as well as to Bolton's knack of narration; and it was only broken after some minutes had elapsed by interjectional expressions of the intense indignation of every man present. The baker wondered how a British baker could so disgrace himself and the highly honorable calling to which he belonged; and the others indulged in a variety of wonderments connected with the subject; among which not the least wonderment was that which was awakened by the genius and information of Mr. Robert Bolton, who, after a glowing eulogium on himself, and his unspeakable influence with the daily press, was proceeding, with a most solemn countenance, to hear the pros and cons of the Pope autograph question, when I took up my hat, and left.

The Family Purse.

The money question between husband and wife is one of the most serious drawbacks to married happiness, and it is time it was adjusted on a more just and equal basis. The life of utter de-pendence which some women lead is crushing and degrading. Men do not realize the utter helplessness and vacuity to which the system condemns woman. Now, does anybody believe that it is necessary for the welfare of the family that she should go to him for twenty-five cents every time she needs it for car-fare or a spool of thread? Is writer, as he termed himself-a bit of | it right or just to take her imbecility in money matters for granted before she has been tested? Is it not just such women, who are left by the failure of some speculative craze to their own resources, with the burden of a family upon their inexperienced shoulders, who often display wonderful powers of energy and calculation, in addition to ought to put all such men to shame? Women, as a general rule, can make one dollar go as far as two in the hands of men; and many conceited individuals, who now consider that social system bounded by four walls of their dwelling would cease to revolve if they were taken out of it, would find great happiness and great pecuniary advantags in putting the control of all the interior details of their homes in the hands of stiffness, while his tout ensemble was their wives, with a division of the income equal to the requirement .-Woman's Journal.

> In Morgan county, near Hazle Green, Ky., a most borrible outrage was committed recently. A young man aged eighteen, named Buchanan Caywood, a resident of Hazle Green, induced young girl aged seventeen, named Est'ar Jane Oldfield, to take a drink of peach brandy which was so strongly impregnated with cantharides that she was immediately seized with vomiting; the interior of her throat and stomach sloughed off, and was thrown up, with great quantities of blood, which caused her death in a few hours. The young lady was of good family and highly respected. Yourg Caywood was arrested and tried before an examining court and committed to jail at West Liberty without bail, on a charge of murder. The testimony showed that he gave her liquid with mean intent and was aware of its fatal tendencies, and said "he didn't care if it did kill her." Few men die of age. Almost all die of disappointment, passion, mental or bodily toil, or accidents. The passions kill men sometimes, even suddenly The common expression, choked with passion, has little exaggeration in it; for even though not suddenly fatal, strong passions shorten life. Strong-bodied men often die young; weak men live longer than the strong; for the strong use their strength and the weak have none to use. The latter take care o themselves, the former do not. As it is with the body to it is with the mind and temper. The strong are apt to break, or like the candle, to run; the weak to burn out.
