Fall Turning Up of Garden Soil.

Professed gardeners well understand the fall management of these important little family farms. It is needless to tell them how much the success of next year's crops depends upon turning up the ground (say in November) intended for such crops. But there are many others--those who have small gardens--and in this class are many of our regular well-to-do farmers---who only raise half crops of vegetables, and these of the advice that if they will use the garden fork, and turn the soil up full fork deep, allowing it to remain in lumps all winter exposed to the frost, it will put the soil in excellent condition and tend greatly to add to the production of next year's crops. This is especially the case with ground not so treated frequently, and we would mention that every other year is best, instead of every year as some gardeners do. Gardens, and especially old ones, should also be limed about once in five years, and salted about every other spring, applying of lime at the rate of about thirty bushels to the acre, and of salt from eight to ten. In applying salt keep it from coming in contact with box-edging and all other evergreens, very small trees, etc. Such a course will bring up your old gardens in a surprising manner. Turnips, radishes, etc., will grow as well as they ever did, and all other vegetables be largely benefited.--[Germantown Telegraph.

The Best Food for Egg-Producers.

It has again and again been demonstrated that wheat is the best of all the cereals for the production of eggs. But next to that is milk, and especially sour milk; and if we add to those a third substance, namely, gravel produced from broken granite, of suitable size and quantity, we have as nearly a perfect food as can be furnished for egg-producing fowls. But there are some details which ought to be attended to in order to obtain the best results. Thus, in hot weather and in all weather but that which is very cold, the grain should be previously soaked twenty-four hours and the water salted, but only moderately so. But shrunken wheat, or mill screenings, when they are not musty and when they do not contain rotten or unsound grain, are quite as good as clear wheat, and plements to other grains, but when fed alone they are unsafe; the former because it is too stimulating, and the latter because it is too fattening and difficult of digestion. Meat, offals and scraps, broken victuals, vegetables and the like, are valuable additions to the daily rations, but they are unsafe if fed in large quantities, for they not only injure the health of the fowls, but impair the quality and flavor of the eggs. One essential point which must not be forgotten in the make-up of the daily rations-in case they are not principally and sour milk—the constituent element of bones and egg shells must be furnished in the shape of burned bones, broken small, or ground oyster shells.

HouseholdEHints. To clean long hair beat up the yolk of an egg with a pint of soft water. Apply it warm, and afterward wash it out with warm water.

Do not allow your milk pans to be used for all sorts of household purposes. To cleanse ivory ornaments, rub them well with fresh butter, that is, without salt, and put them in the sunshine. If troubled with wakefulness on retiring to bed, eat three or four onions; they will act as a gentle and soothing narcotie. Onions are also excellent to eat when one is much exposed to cold. Crackers that are not fresh can be made to appear so by putting them in a hot oven for a short time. Watch them carefully, as a minute too late will serve to brown and spoil them.

Mica in stoves (often wrongly called "isinglass"), when smoked, is readily cleaned by taking it out and thoroughly washing with vinegar a little diluted. If the black does not come off at once, let soak a little.

The Reason Why.

Why does the young man, who whilom greeted you with unaverted gaze and a pleasant good-morning, now veil his eyes you by without a word, either good, bad or indifferent? Why is his countenance sicklied o'er with the sickly smile of allcontrolling self-consciousness? Why his beseeching, appealing look when his young acquaintance is about to address him? Why dodges he quickly down the ide street rather than meet the throng of young fellows it was once his But Dr. Cuyler couldn't help telling the chiefest pleasure to meet and be with? Why consorts he exclusively with his elders. and why does he avoid his contemporaries as he would a pestilence? The answer is easy to find. The horse plunged and reared desperately in his terror, and by struggling to free himself inflicted upon Miss Porter fatal wounds. The ill-fated girl was taken into the house of a neighboring physician, and died a short time afterward.

In the meantime the runaway horses attached to the carriage had hurled it violently to the pavement. The four ladies who were within, as well as their colored coachmen, escaped serious harm, but all came within a hair's-breadth of destruction. The same may be said of Miss Porter's three companions, neither of whom received physical injury. All this miserable chapter of accidents is directly attributable to a bicycle which had been spinning swiftly along Seventh avenue, and at which the horses took fright. It is to be hoped that the rider of that bicycle has now learned a lesson which may last him his lifetime.- [New York Evening Post.

The Order of Cleavers.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., was in attendance at the Presbyterian couneil. One day in the week the butchers had a festival of some kind, and were to have a grand parade. That morning Dr. Cuyler visited a barber shop to get shaved. When the knight of the razor had stretched his customer's neck and pushed his head as far back as possible, and filled his eyes, nose and mouth with lather, he said to him interrogatively, and speaking as a friend:

"Well, you're going to turn out to-

The Right of Way.

There was a Detroiter among the trio of officials who passed over the route of the Butler road to secure the right of way. In some cases farmers cheerfully signed off; in others money had to be used, but in one case the committee found a most determined opposition. The road would divide a widow's farm, trains, and she wouldn't listen to argument. In this emergency one of the committee said:

" Madam, do you know of any widow in this neighborhood who would be willing to board a gentleman connected with the construction of our road? He s a widower, and prefers to board with widow.

"No, I don't know as I do. Is he a nice man?" "Splended man, and has money in the
