Be Just to the Legislature.

The letter in yesterday's Press protesting against the indiscriminate censure of the Legislature was in many respects just and timely. The newspapers have become so accustomed to abusing the Legislature that this faultfinding has with many of them become chronic. It is indulged in so continuvania our full share and more than is black enough, and the popular discontent which has characterized its

No suspicion of jobbery attaches to the present Legislature. It contains a greater number of members of conceded ability, integrity and force of character than any recent General Assembly of this State. Yet this wholesale newspaper censure includes these men with the others. Even if the roosters were not merely obstructionists, but were able to have their own way in the Legislature, justice would demand in passing judgment that some discrimination be made between the two classes.

While it is true that the present Legislature has seemed more or less disorganized and has proceeded bitherto in a some-what aimless and haphazard fashion, these are evils which time and experience would cure. There is an unusually large proportion of new members who compel all Legislative business to drag while they are learning it. Bills cau no longer be railroaded through the Legislature as in the olden time. The dilatory course which all bills are now compelled to take before they can become laws is in accordance with the will of the people, expressed in the new Constitution. If the present Legislature was content to receive its bills ready-made from some outside source and pass them under instruction and with but the minimum of debate there would doubtless be less friction in the proceedings and less delay in legislation. Nevertheless, we think most people will agree it is better as it is, and that our present Legislature has by no means deserved the wholesale and indiscriminate censure that has been so freely bestowed upon it .- Philadelphia Times, Ind.
