A Timely Arriole that Ought to be Read by Everybudy.

I wish to show how drowning might, under ordinary circumstances, be avoided, wholly ignorant of what is called the art of swimming. The numerous frightful casualties render every working suggeshere offer I venture to think is entirely

When one of the inferior animals takes the water, falls, or is thrown in, it instantly begins to walk as it does when out of the water. But when a man who cannot "awim" falls into the water he the other hand, treads water, remains on does, and that is to tread or walk the theless, any man, any woman, any child who can walk on the land may also walk | then the beauty of it is that we can in the water just as readily as the animal does, if only he will, and that without any prior instruction or drilling time and pain, entails considerable whatever. Incredible Inhumanity.

A short time ago a young Italian named Montinari tried to cross the Adriatic in a skiff. A storm came up struggled against winds and waves and contrived to keep his tiny craft afloat, although he lost an oar early in his involuntary cruise and sustained severe hurts upon his head, right foot, chest and hands. Toward sunset of the second day, when he had given up all hope of human aid, he espied afar off the smoke arising from a steamer's funnel. By almost superhuman effort he succeeded in approaching the steamer within hailing distance and piteously implored the captain to take him on board. The latter, addressing him in French, asked him "how much he would give to be saved," to which barbarous question Montinari replied: "A thousand francs.

"That is too little," rejoined his inhuman interlocutor, and the steamer proceeded on her way. Eleven hours later he was rescued by the Russian bark "Jenny."

Queer Advertisements.

Some of our advertisements are as comical as Punch. One landlady, en-tirely innocent of grammatical knowledge, advertises that she has "a fine airy, well-furnished bedroom for a gentleman twelve feet square;" another has "a cheap and desirable suite of rooms for a respectable family in good repair;" still another has "a hall bedroom for a single woman 8x12." An English widow became rather mixed by her grief, but when amouncing the death of her husband she was not so mixed that she lost sight of the main question: "His virtues were beyond price, and his beaver hats were only seventeen shillings. He has left a widow and a large stock to be sold cheap at the old stand. He was snatched to the other world just as he had concluded an extensive purchase of felt, which he got so cheap that his widow can sell felt hats a fraction less than any other house in London. Peace to his ashes; the business will be carried on as usual."

> A Liar Himself. Travelers are privileged to draw the long bow when they return from their wanderings, but sometimes they find those who are not quite ready to swalabout, returned to his home. There was a gathering round the stove in the village store that winter evening, and he was listened to with open-mouthed wonder as he related his experiences. But there was one in the company who sat apart, smoked his pipe in silence and gave no sign either of interest or astonishment .- At last one of the party, ruffled by his evident apathy, turned to him and said: "What's the matter with you? You don't seem to warm up a bit." "No," he answered, slowly removing the pipe from his mouth, "I'm a liar myself!"—Boston Cultivator.
