

THE PRESIDENT REMOVED TO LONG BRANCH. WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—It is decided to move the President from the White House to Long Branch to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock. At this writing, nine p. m., everything about the White House indicates that the removal will be made before six o'clock to-morrow morning.

It was decided at a consultation of the attending physicians to remove the President to Long Branch, where it is hoped the pure, bracing sea-breezes will have a beneficial result on his system. The important step was found necessary on account of the malaria arising from the Potomac river, and from which the President was beginning to suffer.

From this morning's Derrick we take the following: The removal of the President from the miasmatic air of the White House to the health giving breezes of Long Branch, has been successfully and expeditiously accomplished.

THE National debt was decreased $14,181,127 during the month of August.

THE Mrs. Garfield fund has reached $157,000, and $125,000 of it has been invested in 4 per cents for her benefit.

WHEN Mrs. Garfield can take her husband's arm and walk around the house at Mentor, then the jubilee day will have come. And God grant she may have this extreme pleasure.

GOVERNOR HOYT issued a proclamation Saturday last appointing Tuesday (yesterday) as a day for prayer, and requested "the people to assemble in their respective houses of worship between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 m., and unite in public prayer and supplication to Almighty God, for the restoration to health and strength of the President of the United States."

SECRETARY WINDOM has outflanked the National Banks by his order of Monday, which directs that the interest to October 1st will be paid at any time after presentation for any of the five per cent. registered bonds on that interest will cease at that time.

Notes Along the Sea Shore. Our correspondent, S. D. I., writes a good account of the Signal Service along the Jersey Shore, to the Franklin Press, from which we cull the following:

This coast though plain as it appears, contains every element of coast danger to the mariner, and it has been said that this section is one of the worst for shipwrecks on the coast line of the United States.

My surroundings caused me to become interested in the Life Saving Service, and obtaining through the courtesy of Mr. Frick an introduction to Captain Reid, who had supervision of several of the stations along the coast, I learned something about it.

Wasted Sentiment. The editors of some of the city papers are disgusting the public with homilies on the duty of the government to protect Guiteau from mob violence.

of. True to his sailor taste, his yard is ornamented, not with any of your common trash such as conk and clam shells and such valuables as can be procured at any variety store, but with a great skeleton of a whale, carcasses of sharks, porpoises, sea turtle shells big as a copper kettle, id omne genus, calculated to make one think of the deep sea and its perils, and not of what a curiosity hunter would pick up along the shore or get as a prize at a corner grocery for buying a pound of tea.

Then, too, he has saved many of the figure heads and boards that contained in gilt letters the names of ships that once existed but that no more plow the treacherous main—relics that evince the dangerous character of the Jersey coast, a record that cannot be disputed.

Let all who intend to teach in the County the coming winter be in attendance; bring paper and pencil; also, references, recommendations and old certificates. Let directors, patrons of the schools, all friends of the cause educational attend.
