

GUITEAU SENTENCED.

The court assembled on Saturday and after some time spent by counsel in making motions, &c., Col. Corkhill said "it is now my duty to ask for the sentence of the court."

The prisoner then arose, pale, but with compressed lips and a desperate determination stamped upon his features.

Judge Cox—Stand up. Have you anything to say why sentence should not now be pronounced against you?

Guiteau (still sitting)—I ask your honor to postpone sentence as long as possible.

Judge Cox—Stand up. Have you anything to say why the sentence should not now be pronounced upon you?
