Thrilling Story of a Wife's Revenge - A k Once Menntain Bellein a Georgia Prison -Anneal to Wamen for Her Vindication.

Cincinnati Commercial writes as follows: Five years ago there lived in Pickens ecunty, among the mountains, as fair a lass as such a region is proverbial for producing, a rosy-cheeked, brown-haired, blue-eyed maiden, with the form of a model and the grace of a gazelle. She was the daughter of a well-to-do farmer, and her smiles were courted by the brave-hearted young mountaineers, who engaged in honorable competition for a monopoly of her society. Among those was a dashing young man, handsome, of princely carriage, and whose fame for courage made him known in all the counties around. Dauntless in love as in all things else, he laid siege to the heart of this mountain belle, to whom she capitulated, and though but a girl in years-seventeen she wasthey were married. She idolized her husband, and clung to him with a worshipful devotion, happy only when with, and ready to sacrifice her life if need death sentence will be familiar, for be for him. And he, feeling secure in her love, repaid her attachment with indifference, and gave more attention to this country and in many out of it. The wooden building has been erected on the quay wall, in which a talk with the another, a former rival of his wife, than was consistent with his obligation as a husband. She bore this long in silence, and tried to persusde herself that there was nothing wrong in her husband's conduct. But the seed of jealousy was planted in her heart, and found nourishment in the buoyancy that once exher eye departed, her merry laugh was no longer heard, and the once light-hearted her confidence was misplaced; and at last, when one night a dancin ; party was given at her father's house, where she lived, and the source of her unhappiness was among the invited, she approached her husband, cand afhis neck, begged him for her sake not to dance with the woman she hated. Playfully chiding her for her jealousy, he gave her his promise that her request should be granted. She did not engage in the festivities, but pleading illness retired; though not to sleep, however, for she knew that her busband under the roof that sheltered her home, she watched the dance for awhile, her senses seeming to desert her, and then knife she returned to the room victs, and it is believed that the adopin which the dancing was going on, reaching it just as the last set ended, and going up to her rival, who was moving toward a seat, seized her by the shoulder, and frenzied with jealous rage, said, "You have danced enough I" at the same time drawing the open knife from the folds of her dress and plunging it deep into the woman's neck, making a horrible gash which penetrated nearly to the heart, and from which the blood spurted sevthe floor-dead. So quickly and so quietly was the awful tragedy enacted, that not until the woman fell, and the did any one know what had happened. Rather Enthusiastic.

The Wilmington (Del) Daily Republi-can lately contained the following item of popular interest: Dr. J. F. Speck, who is nnected with the Wilmington Every Evening, speaks rather enthusiastically of St. Jacobs Oil. Dr. Speck states that he uses the oil in his family as a household remedy, a sort of universal panacea for all aches and pains, and has always found it to act most happily. His attention was called to it by the many testimonials in its favor, and he one day used it upon himself for sore throat. Two applications were sufficient to effect a cure. He also used it on his little girl for sore throat with gratifying success The same child had scarlet fever this winter which left the tendons of one leg much contracted. The little prattler couldn't walk without assistance and suffered much inconvenience and pain. Several applications of St Jacobs Oil restored her limb to its normal condition, and she has not experienced any trouble since. Dr. Speck states that he has also seen the Oil act charmingly in toothache. He thinks St. Jacobs Oil is a sterling remedy, and does not hesitate to recommend it for rheumatism, etc.

In a neat frame cottage on a high elevation everlooking the East river and the islands in the stream below Hell Gate, dwell Mr. - and his wife. Three years ago the husband was prostrated by rheumatic gout, which, in the course of a few weeks, invaded every vulnerable part of his body. His feet and hands became not only useless but most unsightly members, his fingers becoming so swoilen, distorted and twisted that they looked like the tangled claws of a crab. Being the owner of his home, and having some money laid by from his former salary, earned while bookkeeper for a prominent commercial house, he sought relief from pain and utter helplessness from the best sources, and paid dearly for it. He obtained temporary relief from his pains, but no medical skill availed in straightening out his distorted limbs or enabling him to resume his former avocation. Thus he lay bedridden as the tedious months went by; meanwhile his stock of money was being rapidly exhausted, until only a small sum remained at his command. Among his kind and sympathetic neighbors, a few months ago, was one who came with a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil in his pocket and urgently insisted that it should be tested. But such was Mr. -- 's obstinate objection to everything bearing the name or suspicion of a proprietary medicine that he positively refused its use, and for a week afterward he lay groaning in his bed while St. Jacob's Oil stood untouched on the wife's dressing

One night his sufferings were unusually severe, and after a long entreaty Mrs. --- was allowed to anoint her wretched husband thoroughly with the Oll. When he awoke in the morning from the first easy and peaceful eleep he had enjoyed for many months, he saw before him a new lease of life. Repeated applications of this wonderful remedy, night after night, for two weeks, restored the man to his normal condition of health, strength and activity, and to-day he is occupying a position of no little labor and responsibility, and at a fine salary in a prominent business house in the lower part of the city. Learning these facts from his wife when I called at the pleasant cottage home above mentioned, the writer made an appointment to meet him the next day.

"I am happy to learn," I said to him, "that you have recovered your health after a long and painful illness. Mrs. -- informed me that you owe your present happy condition to a proprietary medicine."

"Yes," he answered, cheerfully. "I call it a miraculous medicine. The world owes a debt of gratitude to the discoverer of St. Jacobs Oil. which, with all its wealth, it will never pay, because it will never fully appreciate the great virtues of this remarkable remedy. Look at me, Do I look like a man who for three years has been an invalid and a cripple?" "You look like the picture of health," I replied, "and while I congratulate you, I must request that you allow me, as a press reporter, to make your case known to the public for the benefit of those who have suffered like yourself." "Excuse me, sir," he returned, "but I would rather not." Why, what objection can you have?" I naked 66 somewhat puzzled. "Well, you see," he said, "I am peculiarly situated, and, while I have a sympathy for all who suffer, I would, for cer-In seeking for a substance which tain reasons, be jeopardizing my own interests connection." "Very well," I said. "Your wishes shall be observed. But don't you think you are a little selfish in this matter?" "Perhaps I am," he answered, "but St. Jacobs Oil has so many other testimonials from prominent men in its favor, that mine would be of little consequence."

Although the writer regretted this refusal to allow another name to be added to the long list of testimonials to the efficacy of the Great German Remedy, it was felt that perhaps the gentieman's reason for such refusal might outweigh in lile's scale of economy what looks on its face as a queer case of selfishness .- New York Evening Telegram.
