FOR THE LADIES.

Evolution in Hairpins,

The hairpin of to-day is no more .ike its ancestor than is the onlightened man of science like the primeval monkey. Hairpins have "evoluted" out of the old-fashioned straight wire into various shapes, sizes and designs. Most of them are enameled. They are of varying length, from the gossamer forks with corrugated limbs, used to hold in place puffs and curls, to the long pins required to keep on the big hats whose broad brims present great temptations to the wind. They are made by machinery, and are so cheap that the poorest women may enjoy the greatest variety. What becomes of the hairpins? They drop on floors; they get swept up and lost ; they become bent and useless ; they disappear and are replaced, and great factories are employed in making them. ,

Courting Under Dimeulties.

A Cleveland (0.) gentleman, who is fond of a story, related to a reporter an incident of hypochondria which came under his notice when he was considerably younger than at the present time. His narrative was something like this : When I was a boy there lived near our house, in a on part of Cleveland that was then almost in the woods, a maiden lady who was in very poor health. In girlhood she was not strong, and as years advanced she imagined herself growing more and more delicate, till at last she took to her bed, where she afterward remained in daily expectation of death. Her nerves were very delicate, and in my days the schoolmaster used to warn us urchins to keep quiet when going by her house, as we might disturb her if any noise was made. My youth and boyhood passed, and with the coming of manhood I discovered that a young sister of the invalid was a very pretty girl, and when, after coming home from church or singing-school with her, an invitation to come in was given, it was always accepted. The short and awkward visits made at first soon gave place to the old-fashioned sitting up. One evening several of the young people came in, and the talk and laughter grew hilarious. It was checked instantly by a heavy thump on the floor in the room directly overhead, where the sick woman lay. One warn-ing was enough, but the frequency of the same signal afterward tended to lessen our respect for it. It seems that she kept a big cane at the side of her bed, and by rapping with it she indi-cated her wants-and her displeasure. Finally one night, after being cautioned several times in the usual manner without effect, the parlor door opened suddenly upon the assembled party, and the bed-ridden woman stood before our eyes holding the awful cane in hand. It was the first time she had moved in twenty years. Her entrance was so sudden that she was able to give two or three stinging blows to those sitting near her before an escape could be made. In a moment a shout of laughter went up, and the supposed invalid was not slow in finding that she was the cause. Her mother and sister fixed her up with suitable clothes, and downstairs, and the day following she went about the family housework. I

For a debutante in society sixteen years of age, a dress for family or ordinary reunions is of white veiling trimmed with breton lace or with silk plaitings. For large balls the dress of white surah, with small floral designs. A pretty style is the "Dauphine" dress of surah, with small bunches of flowers. It may also be of silk batiste, with alternate bunches of myosotis and rose buds. In Paris young girls of twenty wear almost everything in fashion, with the exception of diamonds, heavy fabrics and the richest trimmings.

A Matter of "Interest."

Many carelessly infer that the increase of money at six per cent. is just twice as rapid as at three per cent.; but in reality the increase is vastly more rapid than this. In 100 years, at six per cent., the increase on any given sum is about eighteen times as much as at three per cent. If $1 be invested, and the interest added to the principal annually, at the rates named, we shall have the following result as the accumulation of 100 years:

There are probably few, however familiar with the subject of the rapid increase of capital put at interest, who would not be startled at the announcement that the cost of the outfit of Christopher Columbus in his first voyage of discovery, put at interest at six per cent., would by this time have amounted to more than the entire money value of this continent, together with the accumulations from the industry of all who have lived upon it. If any doubt this, let them reckon the amount, estimating the entire outfit to have cost only the small sum of $5,000, and remembering that money doubles, at six per cent., in a little less than twelve years, or accurately, in eleven years, ten months and twenty-one days. Allowing it to double every twelve years, this $5,000 at interest at six per cent since 1492. it will be found, would have amounted to $17,895,700,000,000; which, estimating the population of the entire continent of America (North and South) to be $5,000,000, or 17,000,090 families, averaging five members each, would give more than $1,000,000 as the possession of every one of these. The interest upon $1,000,000 at six per cent, is $60,000, which would now be the princely annual income of each of these 17,000,000 families from the accumulations up to this time upon so small a sum as that named for the outfit of the discoverer.

In Hildreth's "History of the Uni-ted States," it is stated that Manhattan Island-afterward called New Amsterdam, now the city of New she spent the remainder of the evening the Indians, for sixty guilders or $24, York-was bought by the Dutch from and this only about 250 years ago, And yet, if the purchasers could have securely placed that $24 where it would have added to the principal annually interest at the rate of seven per cent., the accumulation would exceed the present market value of all the real estate of the city and county plercing a fester-I, who have pierced of New York. Again, if a man at the age of twenty-five should commence business with a capital of $100,000, and could by any possibility add thereto at the rate of seven per cent. annually, the result would be (in round num-

Traits of Pacific Coast Chinese,

In an article on "Features of the New Northwest" in the Century, E. . Smalley says: There is a mistaken notion in the East that the Chinese are always humble and submissive and much put upon and abused by the whites of the Pacific coast. There was a time when the hoodlums of San Francisco maltreated the Asiatic emigrants shamefully, but that time has gone by. Now the Chinaman appears to be as secure in his rights of person and property as anybody. Instead of being deferential and timid he is often pushing and insolent. He does not give way in the street. He hustles you as mers; makes a boot or shoe last twice as long.

rudely as an English navvy. A body of Chinese laborers marching down a narrow street will crowd ladies into the gutter. The Chinese merchants, doctors and others belonging to the better classes, are as polite as Frenchmen, but the masses of the Chinese population on the Pacific coast are rude and brutal. The chief thing in their favor is their habit of personal cleanliness. The railroad laborers, who are the poorest and most ignorant class, wash themselves from head to foot at the end of each day's work. All classes are frequent customers of the barber, who gives minute attention to their heads, faces, ears and necks. Among the common laborers there is little sympathy for sick and injured comrades. If a man is likely to become a burden the other members of his gang want to get rid of him as soon as possible. It is commonly believed by the white bosses on the railways that the Chinese doctors put sick men out of the way by poison when they think they cannot be speedily cured. A case was told me in Oregon of a Coolie railway laborer who had an arm broken. It was set by the company's doctor, and was doing well, but the man's comrades insisted on bringing a Chinese doctor to attend him. The doctor came from a distant camp and gave the patient a dose. In an hour the poor fellow was dead. In such cases there is no investigation; nobody cares that there is one Chinaman less. The death of a cart horse is of much more consequence. One great difficulty the employers of Chinese labor have to contend with is the superstition of these queer people. Their religious worship consists chiefly in propitiating the malevolent spirits of the dead. If a Chinese domestic fancies there is a ghost in the house he departs at once, and leaves an inscription behind to warn his successors. It often happens that a family will be unable to keep a servant more than a single day. Man after man will come and go without giving any reason for his abrupt departure. At last the warning sign is found in the kitchen or the servant's room and expunged; then there is no more trouble. Not long ago two Chinamen were killed in Oregon by the premature explosion of a blast on a new railway line. One of their fellow workmen declared that just before the explosion he saw two devils come to the opposite bank of the river and heard them talking. Thereupon the whole gang of forty men dropped work, and could not be induced, by threats or persuasions, to return to the spot.
