THE Democratic organs were a little previous in complimenting the present "reform" House of Representatives upon the fact that it had defeated the proposition to print 10,000 additional copies of Smull's Legislative Hand Book. The virtue was spasmodic, and after sleeping over it the goody-goody party reconsidered their reform action and agreed to squander a few thousands for the dear people's sake .- Brookville Republican.

THE Philadelphia Record says: On the 20th of May next the torpedo mouopoly expires by legal limitation, and there is talk of celebrating the event in the oil regions by appropriate explosive demonstrations of joy, taking the form of orstory, bonfires, and bilarity, solid and liquid. The petreleum well-diggers may be excused if they make the 20th of May an annual holiday. It is a delightful sensation to lay down a load you have been obliged to carry for years and to step along without it. Who shall blame the oil men for kicking up their heels?

that he is now ready to carry into effect the act of Congress increasing to thirty dollars per month the pensions of disabled soldiers, and to twentyfour dollars per month the pensions of such soldiers as suffer from the loss of a hand or foot, or corresponding disability. As soldiers have been so outrageously gouged by parties calling themselves attorneys, the Commissioner desired it to be understood that in no case whatever will attorneys be recognized in the cases. The only requirement is for the pensioners to send in their pension certificates.

-P. GRAY MEEK, editor of the Bellefonte Watchman, and Chief Clerk of the House at Harrisburg, is writ. ing "pen sketches" of the members for his paper, among which we find the following of our representative, which, coming from such a strongly Democratic source is very complimen free trade element that will chiefly compose it and which will doubtless control its actions, it is safe to predict that it will endeavor to still forther reduce the rates of tariff. The new bill also abolishes all internal revenue taxes, except on tobacco, cigars and whiskey.

is the full text of the bill as it was adopted :

tary to Mr. Davis and ought to be highly appreciated by that gentleman:

"On the front circle just out from my left sits Mr. Ephraim L. Davis, from Forest county. He is about fourtyfive years of age, but looks much younger. His tall form, long brown hair and flowing beard and moustache give him au impressive appearance. His voice is not strong, but it is clear, and he is a strong and ready debater. He is the author of the bill to compel railroad companies to fence ver to push his measure through. He was at one time engaged at oil producing, but is now a lawyer. His earnest, sincere manner makes him a formidable antagonist, and he is not easseccond session, and an honest, usful member of the legistature he is."

BEFORE adjourning, Congress, contrary to the expectations of the people, succeeded in passing the tariff bill. It was the creature of a Conference Committee to whom the Senate bill was committto whom the Senate bill was committ-ed, and by this committee several very important amendments were inserted, generally in the interest of the manu-facturers of iron and steel. The meas-ure was finally accepted as a compro-mise, the best that could be secured with the determined opposition of the free traders and obstructive Demo-crats. Although the bill is not such an one as this country needs and an one as this country needs and ought by rights to have, it was thought best to accept it as the least of two evils, as a general belief prevails that in the next Cougress with a large Democratic majority, protectiop to American labor would fare very badly, and a settlement at this time would prevent dickering with the question for some time to come, and allow business a time of repose in which to recuperate and adjust itself to the new conditions imposed by the present revision of rates of taxation.
