A German physician speaks highly of the use of soft soap as a local application for sores or glandular swellings, abscesses, discharging canals and cavities, felons, etc. It is not a new remedy by any means, but one which seems likely to be neglected where it might be of real service. Quite a pleasant preparation can be made by dissolving the soap in a little cologne water.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

Milk and lime water are said to prove beneficial in dyspepsia and weakness of the stomach. The way to make the lime water is simply to procure a few lumps of unslacked lime, put the lime in a fruit can, and water until it is slacked and of the consistency of thin cream; the lime settles and leaves the pure and clean lime water at the top. A goblet of cow's milk may have six or eight teaspoonfuls of lime water added with good effect. Great care should be taken not to get the lime water too strong; pour off without disturbing the precipitated lime. Sickness of the stomach is promptly relieved by drinking a teacupful of warm water with a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in it. It brings the offending matter up all the better.

The following story is told of the Earl of Stamford, "a great sporting nobleman," who died recently in London:

He had unlimited faith in the power of money, the supremacy of the aristocracy, and the general worthlessness of all the rest of humanity. One day he and a few patrons of the turf were dining at the Star and Garter, at Richmond, where Thackeray says it will the waiter. It costs the earl someing the man insolent, he sprang up, and, to the horror of all present, sent the unfortunate man neck and heel crashing through the window down on the terrace below. Then a bright general news talker will describe the accidents and crimes. He will say, for example: "I went down to the house insuch-and-such a street where a husband had shot his wife with a revolver. The hair of the victim was such a color, the wounds were so deep. I ascertained all the facts myself." Then the legislative reporter will reproduce the debates, with the personality of the speakers and a description of the "scenes" and lively encounters. Quickly Cleaning a Horse by Steam. "We can make a horse as clean and sleek as a new pin in four minutes," said the stable boss of a Philadelphia street railway company, as a pair of brushes, operated by steam, were making the dust fly from a car horse in the stables. The stiff bristle brushes are attached to the revolving shaft by flexible arms, which permit the brushes to be applied to any part of the horse and at any angle. There are four sets in operation. The horse is placed between a set consisting of two brushes somewhat like a cannon swab, each of which is operated on either side of the horse at the same time. With these machines but a few minutes are required to clean a horse, whlle under the old style, with currycomb and brush, at least thirty minutes were required to do the work.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

e Shadaw Hanging Over New York City and the Emilie Country-A Tribane Opinion. The nation has been horrified at the burning of a Milwaukee hotel, whereby over seventy lives were lost. This event carried terror because it was sudden and appalling; but had the same disastrous results to life and limb come allently they would have been unnoticed, not only by the people of the land but also by the very community in which they occurred. Fatal events of a far worse nature have taken place in this very city, but they have attracted no attention, nor would they now did not the Bureau of Vital Statistics bring them to our notice. "Figures do not lie," whatever else may be uncertain, and the report on the deaths of this city is a startling comment on its life. During the past year the enormous increase of certain maladies is simply appalling. While the total number of the contract of the contain maladies is simply appalling. While the total number of the contract of th The nation has been horrified at the burnyear the enormous increase of certain maladies is simply appalling. While the total number of deaths has diministel, and the death rate on meet diseases has decreased, still it is far greater in one or two more serious disorders than wrsever known before. More people died in the city of New York in 1882 from Bright's disease of the kidneys, than from diphtheria, smallpox and typhoid feverall combined! This scarcely seems possible, but it is true, and when it is remembered that less than one-third the actual deaths from Bright's disease are really reported as such, the ravages of the malady can be partially understood.

The immediate query which every reader will make upon such a revelation of facts, is: What causes this increase? This is a difficult question to answer. The nature of the climate, the habits of life, the adukeration of foods and liquors, all undoubtedly contribute; but no immediate cause can be certainly assigned. tribute; but no immediate cause can be certainly assigned. Often before the victim knows it the disease has begun. Its approaches are so stealthy and its symptoms so obscure that they cannot be definitely foreseen, and are only known by their effects. Any kidn sy disorder, however slight, is the first stage of Bright's disease. But it is seldom that kidney disorders can be detected. They do not have any certain symptoms. Mysterious weariness; an unusual appetite; periodical headaches; occasional nausea; uncertain pains; loss of vigor; lack of nerve power; irregularity of the heart; disordered daily habits; imperfect digestion—all these and many other symptoms are the indications of kidney disorder, even though there may be no pain in the region of the kidneys or in that portion of the body. The serious nature of these troubles may be understood from the fact that Bright's disease is as certain to follow diseased kidneys as decomposition follows death.

It is high time the Doctors in this land.

ease is as certain to follow diseased kidneys as decomposition follows death.

It is high time the Doctors in this land who have been unable to control kidney troubles, should be aroused and compelled to find some remedy, or acknowledge one already found. The suffering public needs help and cannot await the tardy action of any hair-splitting code of incorrectly formulated theories. If the medical world has no certain remedy for this terrible disease let them acknowledge itand seek for one outside the pale of their profession. For the discovery of this remedy and for its application on to this disease, the people of this city of the whole land, not only the land of the suffering, but those who have triends in danger, are carnestly and lar angungly looking.

their insidious beginnings and frightful endings, and the acknowledged inability of physicians to successfully cope with them, may well awaken the greatest dread of every one who has the slightest symptoms. It is fortunate, however, that the surest relief is often found where, possibly, least expected, and that there is a specific for the evils above described we have come to fully believe. Within the past two years we have frequently seen statements of parties claiming to have been cured of serious kidney troubles even after hope had been abandoned; but in common with most people we have discredited them. Quite recently, however, a number of prominent and well known men have come out voluntarily and stated over their signatures that they were completely cured by the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Most people have een aware that this medicine has an unusual standing and one entitling it to be classed above proprietary articles generally; but that it had accomplished so much in checking the ravages of kidney disease is not so generally known. Its great worth has been shown not only by the cures it has effected, but also because a number of base imitations have appeared in the market, fraudulently claiming the valuable qualities of the original Safe Cure. If it were not valuable it would not be imitated. The above may seem like an ultra indorsement of a popular remedy, but it is not one whit stronger than the facts admit. Whatever assists the world toward health and consequent happiness, should receive the hearty indorsement of the press and all friends of humanity. It is on precisely this principle that the foregoing statement is made, and it merits the careful consideration of every thinking rerder.

A Farmer's Wife Kills a Wildcat.

F. L. Beacham is a farmer living two miles from Midland, Mich., and he has good reason to be just a little bit prouder of his wife than most other men. One forenoon recently Mrs. Beacham heard a commotion in the hen-house, and, in the absence of her husband, seized a muzzle-loading shotgun and proceeded to investigate. On reaching the spot an enormous wildcat emerged from the fowls' abode, and a big turkey gobbler appeared at the same time—with the assistance of Mr. Wildeat. This was a "fowl proceeding" which Mrs. Beacham did not approve of, and she snapped her gun at the intruder, but the thing missed fire. She then seized a sharp ax and endeavored to do some fancy carving, whereupon his felineship showed fight and drove the gallant woman backward to the house, she constantly striking at him with the ax and the animal as adroitly dodging every blow. Her screams, however, frightened the intruder off, and he disappeared un-harmed. When Mr. Beacham returned at dinner-time and learned of the occurrence, he reloaded the gun with a charge of buckshot that would go off upon easy provocation, and asked his wife to call him if the fowlhunter again appeared. Mr. Beacham was scarcely out of sight when the wildcat was seen by his wife to enter the hen-house. Taking the gun, the lady started to pass around the henhouse to give it to her husband, who was near by, when the wildcat came out of the door and, with mouth wide open, made straight for the lady, clepfing at one great bound a high wag new which lay in his way. When the lady was near by the lady clepfing at one great bound a high wag new which lay in his way.

Motions of Ships in a Calm.

A correspondent of Knowledge offers plausible theory to explain the onward motion of aship in a calm. If a wooden sphere of hemisphere, he says, be dropped from any height into the water, it will sink and rise alternately until it comes to rest on the surface at the exact spot at which it first struck the water. This is because the resistance its surface offers to the water is equal in all directions. however, the form be altered to that of a ship, it will not be found to remain in the same spot after repeated oscillations, because the bottom offers more resistance at one end than the other: and, of course, the ship moves in the direction of the less resistance. Now a ship is constantly being raised and allowed to fall again into the sea from a "swell" which exists even in calm seas. Thus it is always oscillating up and down, at one time a little more out of water than it would if the mass of water was perfectly still, and at another time a little deeper in than it would be under the above-mentioned circumstances. This up and down motion of the sea is always acting; but when the surface is rough, this action on the motion of the ship is infinitesimal, compared with that due to the action of the wind, and so is not noticed; but when there is a calm, there is no other force at work, and, therefore, that is the only one noticed.
