HIS INGENIOUS EFFORTS TO DE-

CEIVE CUSTOMS OFFICERS. Perlis that Environ Dishonest Diamond Im-

Sanuggiers Who Were Brought to Grief. "Diamond smuggling," said Agent Brackett, of the custom house, "is not so easy as you might suppose. Honest dealers lend very efficient aid in the detection of the smugglers. Of course, the chief object of smuggling is to make money by selling below regular rates, and this is very difficult to do without losing the goods. The price of diamonds is as well known to dealers as the price of any staple article. The moment any considerable quantity of diamonds is offered below the regular price, suspicion is aroused, and the chances are that the vender will be detained on some pretense until one of our officers is put on his track. "It sometimes happens that we are informed of the coming of a diamond smuggler, and are waiting on the pier for him. Such was the case with the French thief, Marriotte, who was recently caught with diamonds worth $75,000, which he was smuggling in a satchel. The jewels will not be forfeited, as the legitimate owner had nothing to do with the smuggling. Sometimes the smugglers are detected by fellow-passengers, who notify the custom house on the arrival of the vessel, and we receive the culprits with open arms. We have found diamonds concealed in cakes of soap, sewed up in clothing, concealed in the hair, packed away in letters, stowed in cravats. In one case a man had a false boot-heel, which was hollow. When we unscrewed it we found a handful of precious stones. There are some habitual European travelers who are narrowly watched. A prominent gentleman was once caught trying to smuggle diamonds in a bladder which was secreted in a cask of wine. The gauger might have poked around forever with his stick and not have found such a bundle."

Another detective officer said : " It is a common trick of pickpockets to call out in a crowd, ' Look out for your valuables,' Every man unconsciously puts his hand on his property, and the thieves then know the precise spot to which they must direct their attention. The placing of the hand over the watch or the pocket is involuntary. In like manner the smuggler who has goods concealed about his person will be likely to expose himself by his very anxiety to avoid detection. The eve of an experience: customs officer will detect at once the involuntary indications of this guilty fear. I remember one case where a passenger had his hand bandaged and his arm in a sling. My partner, who hal just been appointed, was really indignant when he found I proposed to ascertain what was in the bandage. He was not a little astonished when I discovered snugly stowed and inquired the trouble. away in the folds of the bandage some valuable stones. I had seen enough to convince me almost as conclusively as if the man had said, "Look out for me, I am trying to smuggle something." The philosophy of it is obvious. The smuggler knows that within a few moments it will be de- said: cided whether his illegal venture is to succeed or his property be confiscated. of good morals?" The more valuable it is, the more obvious will be his trepidacion. It would require a man of steel nerves to avoid all the signs that, under such circumstances, will betray him to the experienced officer. "One way of smuggling diamonds is to put them in a belt like a money belt, fitting closely to the body. But the practiced touch of the officer will generally detect this by passing the hands over the outer clothing. In cases of strong suspicion there is no hesitancy in stripping men and women in the search-room, the women, of course, being attended by female in tracts or chicken broth. searchers. Some very funny stories are told of the expedients adopted for concealing diamonds where they would not ordinarily be looked for. Few women, however, have the nerve to withstand search. The men sometimes show fight, but not often. The officers must, of course, be very cir-Twenty-dollar gold pleces in a belt about a man's body may be mistaken for watches, and then the officer gets laughe 1 at ; but he must take that risk. "Once I pickel out a man in a lot of passengers and determined to search him. My partner laughed at me, as he had not noticed anything suspicious about the man, and bet me a dinner I would not find anything. I found that under his outer clothing the man had a valuable set of furs, with cuffs, cost and muff, and he frankly admitted that he was trying to evade the duty. He was glad to buy the goods of the custom house at the appraised

"One way of diamond s nuggling is to wrap up the stones in a ball of yarn carried in a lady's pocket. But the gens may easily be found by piercing the ball with a long needle. It is not difficult for an expert to detect stones concealed in the lining of clothing. Long experience develops a marvilous delicacy of touch that reveals the in most of the waiting rooms of the smuggled goods as quickly chnost as ferry houses and railroad stations if they were of ealy di played. One push on the lining revealed the fraud. One fellow was observed with a hump on his back. Examination disclosed the fact that his deformity was occasioned by forty-two gold watches. His heart was almost broken when we seized the goods. Women have been detected smuggling valuables in their chignons, and it is a common thing for them to line their dresses with silks and laces, easily disclosed by quick external examination.

"The sense of smell often exposes the smuggler of attar of roses or oil of cloves, on which the duty is heavy. We caught one man who had tin cans made to curl about his body in crescent shape. He was making rather frequent visits to the ship, and we traced him to a place in Greenwich street where he had carried eight of these cans, containing about ten pounds of oil of cloves each. He was the most fragrant prisoner I ever saw."-New York Sun.

There was general joy among the Beasts, for the Lion had lorded it after his own fashion. The Elephant was squinting around, the Rhinosceros was pushing his nose into the crowd, and the Giraffe was doing a heap of thinking way down his throat when the Lion continued:

" After sérious reflection and solemn consideration I have decided that my own son shall succeed me. The office will not only be kept in the family, but the family will be kept in office. There being no further business before the meeting we will adjourn."

"But why the need of this convention?" protested the Rhinosceros.

"Well, there wasn't any particular need of it," replied the Lion, "but it is customary to call one in order to collect the expenses of nomination. Brother Giraffe, pass the hat!"

A Champion Glutton.

Alfred Mouchet, a Prussian by birth and residence, died recently. He was by occupation a horse-dealer's assistant. He was known for many years as "the bucket-man." But his title to fame serenely rests upon the fact that he was the champion glutton of the French capital. On one occasion he devoured at a single meal a whole turkey, a leg of mutton, a pound of cheese, several pounds of bread and a bucketful of wine. In 1876 he had an eating match with one Dietrich, who was only able to eat eight pounds of mutton, eight pounds of beef and several pounds of bread, and was therefore badly beaten. Dr. Lachat once stated in the Academy of Medicine that with the exception of a Basque named Lorion, who regularly ate fifteen pounds of bread a day, Mouchet was the greatest eater that ever lived.

I was at that time employed by the Maine Central Railroad, and had to give up work for a time. Fearing that it would sooner or later turn to that dreaded Bright's disease, I called in my son in Lewiston, who is in the drug business, and after consulting with him as to my case, he advised me to use Hunt's Remedy, as he knew of so many successful cures that it had made in Lewiston and vicinity. I at once commenced using it, and began to improve. I had less pain in my back and sides, my water was passed naturally with less color and no pain, and after using several bottles found that my pains were all gone and the weakness of the kidneys and bladder were cured, and I have no tromble with them now, and can attend to my business; and for one of my years I am enjoying good health, and thanks to Hunt's Remedy for it, and I consider it a duty and pleasure to recommend so good a medicine as Hunt's Remedy, and I have taken pains to recommend it to others in this vicinity.
