HAPPY HOMES. The Manner in Which Women Become Habituated to its Use unit the Heinle Treat-ment Necessary to Cvr. Them.

Much has been published of late concerning the Chinese opium dens in Mott street, but little is known of the prevalence of the opium habit in all its forms and of intemperance among women of wealth and fashion. It is the popular opinion that the chief victims among women of there habits are actresses, opera singers, and other public characters, but that is not so. The spread of these two great evils, intemperance and the opium habit, among the women of the better classes, women who are the wives of merchants, politicians and literary men, women of education, refinement and even of religious training, is something alarming, and this statement any prominent physician will confirm,

Several well-known ladies of this city have lately interested themselves in the matter of the reformation and cure of the unfortunate victims of these habits. A number of reforma- ladies. tories had been esta lished for men, and there are several charitable institutions for women, but these ladies fashionable, believed that there was a demand for an establishment for women belonging to wealthy families, and whose friends | Kentucky bridemaids for dresses. would never send them to a charitable institution, or indeed to any place where they would be supposed to be under treatment for these habits. With the aid of the late William E. Dodge, therefore, these ladies established in East Fifty-seventh street a home for women of this class. That there is a necessity for such institutions as this is proven by the fact that it is filled with patients, most of whom are supposed by the society which they have left to be away either for treatsojourning in a foreign land. There are two classes able hotels. Patent leather ties are of women who become habituated to the use of liquor or narcotics. They are sur-rounded by all the luxuries which wealth can buy and all the safeguards which polite society ear throw around They contract a passion for drink generally in social frivolities. They begin with drinking beer and end in drinking enormous quant ties of alcoholic beverages. I have had one patient who contracted the habit at boarding-school where a number of the young ladies out of mischief used to surreptitiously smuggle in beer. Many of my patients claim that they

Almost stomach a chance. every physician has many cases of intemperance among his female patients. Some of the cases in my private prac-tice were peculiarly pitiful. Their recital in all their particulars would be horrible. It was only a few weeks ago that two ladies walking along an avenue in this city picked up a young woman, richly dressed and of refined appearance. She was intoxicated, Learning her address, they conveyed her to her home. She belonged to a wealthy family in this city. She has since been reclaimed. "In opium cases the drug is generally at first taken to relieve pain and then as soon as its properties are learned the habit generally fastens its hold upon the woman. There are three forms of the opium habit. It may be smoked or taken through the mouth or hypodermica'ly introduced. The latter is the most common form. Some take it but once a day, others several times a day, but the habit must be continued as it has been begun. The patient after taking the drug has an hour or two of stupor and the rest of the day is misery. If the customary dose is omitted the victim suffers terribly," "Can the habits be cured, and how?"

asked the reporter. "Its cure is possible. The patient must express a desire for a cure and then be placed under restraint and under social influences favorable to reformation. A Warrior's Hidden Wealth.

The Chicago News tells of a long buried treasure which is supposed to lie under one edge of the city, but which anxious fortune-seekers have never yet been able to resurrect. The story is this: When Mark Baubien sold the lake front for $200,000, and the Indian chief White Feather receive1 $20,000 of this money for relinquishing his claim on the land, another chief, belonging to a different tribe, earnestly laid claim to an equal share of the proceeds of the sale. It was decided, however, that he was not entitled to any of the money, whereupon he waxed exc eding wroth and vowed that he would have White Feather's money or his life. On hearing this White Feather gathered about him a few of his braves as a bodyguar l and fled, with his $20,000 in a bu kskin bag. The other chief, with a band of infuriated followers, gave chase. They overtook Whit: Feather and his warriors severa! miles southwest of the settlement and butchered every one of them in cold blood. But when they came to secure the coveted wealth they could not find it. It was not on the person of the dead chief or any of his followers, and, as not one of the hapless band had been spared eight grains of morphine is a fatal dose for one unaccustomed to its use. The it may be imagined that the avaricious fiends fe't sorry that they had made such a sweep with their tomahawks. It is believed—and there seems to be no other plausible theory-that White Feather sunk the bag of gold in swamp or slough somewhere in the vicinity of the present boundary line of the city on the southwest side. Many a white man has spent time and labor in searching for this lost treasure, but no trace of it has ever been found.

HOW CHOLERA TRAVELS.

THEORIES AS TO THE CAUSE OF THE TERRIBLE EPIDEMYC. The Terrible Outbreak and Faralliy a Frw

Yours Ago on a Railroad Train in Pen-gu'-How the Di case Begins. Cholera is a disease that comes and goes mysteriously. Although acting under some unknown law of nature, its movements are so erratic as to appear to be the mere result of chance. While leaving a long trail of death behind it as it sweeps over a long line of cities, it will suddenly pass over entire districts and reappear on the other side of them and renew its fatal progress. It has baffled the ablest physicians in the world. They cannot tell whether it is in the air or in the water. All they know is that it is,

The most general opinion held by men who have had an opportunity of studying its characteristics in its natural home, the East Indies, is that the malady is born of germs that have sprung out of masses of decayed vegetable and animal matter played upon by a blazing sun; that these invisible germs are borne over the earth by the air currents, and that they have an affinity for places characterized by the decay and corruption whence they sprung. This theory is at least as plausible as any other, though occasionally those who hold that it belongs to bad water have their theory supported by such awful calamities as the one that took place a few years ago in

On that occasion a train packed with natives started from Cawnpore for Lucknow, a ride of about six hours. When it arrived at its destination the sight presented to the officials was appalling. Hundreds of men and women were either dead or dying from cholera. Some survivors testified that the disease broke out almost immediately after a native passenger had handed round to a few of his acquaintances a drink of Ganges water from his letah. For four hours these wretched people had been packed in that train, surrounded by the revolting agonies of the dead and the dying, and several were taken out of it stricken, not with the disease, but with insanity.

The observations made by well-informed Egyptian correspondents are suggestive of the fact that the rulers of Egypt are greatly to blame for the epidemic. The lakes around Damietta produce enormous quantities of fish, which are imperfectly cured, dried in the sun, and eaten in an almost putrid state by the poor fellaheen.

Vast quantities of dead and rotten cattle are cast into these lakes as food for the fishes, and trayelers have been frequently filled with disgust at the spectacle of bloated carcasses floating on the waters. The fellaheen would probably gladly bury their dead animals, but, true to the characteristics of Egyptian misgovernment, one of the taxes of the country is raised on buried cattle. What is the result? Rather than pay the tax each fellah throws his dead animals into the canals or shallow lakes and takes no further heed of the transaction.

The New York Times gives the following particulars concerning the dis-ease: The first cases are generally widely scattered and sporadic, and no connection can easily be traced from one to another, and the whole thing seems a great mystery. A most productive source in obscure outbreaks is the introduction of soiled clothes, either sent to washerwomen or to relatives, or sold as old clothes. These cases are often obscure, for the washerwomen, if robust, do not die first, but some delicate person or child in the same house or neighborhood. In the meantime the healthy washerwoman may merely have choleraic diarrhes, and may recover entirely and never be suspected, or may finally die when five, ten, fifteen or even twenty whom she has infected have gone to their graves. The initial case is not always the first fatal one-far from it. The least common occurrence is when persons absolutely and greatly affected by the disease come into a place with such evident signs about them that none but the least informed can mistake them, and die quickly, and thus really furnish not only the initial case of every kind, but the first fatal one.

Our Best Families.

I have been troubled for over six years with a severe kidney complaint, also a weakness of the urinary organs, with its attendant troubles. My water needed constant attention, some days as many as twenty times, with severe pains in the bladderens well as in the back and loins. At times I passed a limited quantity of urine, highly colored with unnatural heat and sediment; frequently evacuations would be very painful. I concluded that I must do something for it, fearing that more serious trouble would follow. I went to the druggist and was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy, as it had been used with wonderful success in several severe cases of dropsy and kidney and bladder affections here in Bangor. I concluded to try it, and before I had used one bottle found it was helping me beyond my expectations. My water became more natural, less color and sediment, the pains in back and that heavy feeling gore, with a general toning up of the system; and I continued to use it until I used six boit es, and it has completely cured me. Others of my family have used Hunt's six bott es, and it has completely cured me. Others of my family have used Hunt's Remedy with equally as good success, and we do not hesitate to recommend it far and near, believing it a duty as well as a pleasure to recommend so good a medicine as Hunt's Remedy. You are at liberty to give my testimony to the public. D. T. Hododes. Ossington, Me., May 19, 1883.

BAD, BAD, BAD BLOOD.

Some blood is bad because it is poor and weak. Some is bad because it contains impurities. Some men have such bad blood that the wonder is it does not poison the mosquitoes who come to bite them,

The rich red color of good blood is owing to the iron which is present. Blood which has not enough iron in it is always unsatisfactory. The person in whose veins it circulates cannot be said to enjoy good health.

The efforts of expert chemists to produce a preparation of iron which can be assimilated with the blood have resulted in that perfect preparation which is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters. It is the only one which freely enters into the blood. It is the only one which accomplishes the desired good.

Weak, poor, thin blood may be made rich and strong, and impure blood may be purified by the use of that Great Iron Medicine, Drown's Iron Billera
