Guarding the Gold.

Every morning except Sunday an Adams express wagon, loaded with deliver the precious coins to its different owners. The gold and silver, which is made up of all denominations, comes principally from New York, Washington and San Francisco, and is consigned to the different banks and brokers' offices about town, Some bags contain twenty-dollar gold pieces, while other bags are simply filled with copper pennies.

vagon starts out about 9-o'clock in ti morning, and by 10 o'clock its treasure has all been delivered. The floor of the wagon is generally covered with the bags, and the springs are borne down to the axles with the preclous weight of the much-coveted metal. The route is down Chestnut street; all the banks along the street are visited, but the majority of the gold is unloaded after the wagon turns into Third street. In this way millions upon millions of dollars are carried every year from the express office to the bankers and brokers, without any apparent guard against loss. The men who ride about on the wagon every morning are the trusted employes of the company, who have be-come so accustomed to jerking bags of gold about that they handle it much the same as they would a bag of salt or a box of merchandise. The express company uses the utmost precaution to guard the precious treasure. Four men are in charge of the wagon; one man drives and two sit on the seat with him. They are armed to the teeth, and always on the alert for highwaymen. The fourth man sits on the tailboard in an apparently careless manner. He is also armed, and sees everything about him. Beside this guard two detectives follow closely behind the wagon, and the detectives are not twenty feet

One man carries the bags into the bank and the detectives guard him, while the driver and the two other men remain quietly at their posts on the wagon to keep off thieves. Expert thieves, the boldest in the country, are continually following this wagon, trying to devise some plan to rob it of the fortune it carries, but the precautions of the express company have proved too much for the daring of the boldest highwaymen.

If the Adams Express company send a man upstairs in their own building with a package of money or a bag of gold a detective is at his heels to prevent a robbery. Oftentimes the man with the money doesn't dream that the man going in the same direction with him is one of the company's detectives,-Philadelphia News.

Shot-Gun and Fish-Hook.

The New York Forest and Stream. which is a weekly journal devoted to zhooting and fishing, has been reviewing the growth of these pastimes in America during the last ten years of the paper's publication. The editor claims that anglers and hunters have increased in a ratio almost incredible to those who are not familiar with the subject; and that these pastimes are held in much higher repute than formerly. The use of rod and gun is no longer an indication of shiftlessness. The Forest and Stream says that its correspondents and contributors are largely distributed among the professions. Clergymen, lawyers, physicians, editors, teachers, business men, farmers, and, in fact, all classes of the intelligent and industrious workers of the day are falling into the very commendable custom of taking a week or two off in the woods every summer.

Gentlemanly Brigands.

A Constantinople letter to the London Standard says : Mr. Alexander Corpi, who reached the capital this morning after twelve days' detention among the brigands in the neighborhood of ismidt, gives the following narrative of his misadventure; "On Thursday after noon I was giving orders for some alterations outside the building occupied by my silk factory, when suddenly I was surrounded and seized by nine individuals of suspicious appearance. I asked what object they might have in securing my person, whereupon they stated that they wanted money. I remarke! ples' eccentricities. But say, I want to that I had none on me, but if released ask you it you have seen anything of I would give a promissory note for a my man that delivers groceries. Satwatch everybody who attempts to reasonable amount. This the brigands, urday night I sent him over to your "dog" it. When the wagon stops to for such they were, declined, and finally house to deliver some things about 10 deliver a portion of its load of gold they hurried me off on foot to a spot o'clock, and he has not showed up eight hours' di tent, where a ha't was since. What do you think has beordered by the chief of the party. The come of him?" brigands then formed a council to decide upon the most suitable place to take me for the purpose of communicating with my family, in the near vicinity. Ismidt was selected, as offer ing every facility in this respect. Or Sunday, the 7th instant, we reached the spot agreed upon, which is situated in a mountainous district some twe hours from the town of Ismidt, Ne gotiations then commenced for the pur pose of fixing the amount of ransom. The first figure named was £50,000. but finally, after several days bargaining, they consented to take £1,000. Means were ther found to dispatch a messenger to my family with the news of my whereabouts and a request that they would forward the last named sum in order to affect my release. According to the agreement, I had explained in my letter that the amount of the ran som was to be accompanied by not more than three men. These formal ities being complied with, two trusted servants of my family in charge of the money at length reached the scene of my captivity. The gold pieces were and went one way and pa was scare! counted, and I was declared a free and went the other. Won't they be man. Indeed, from first to last I had no reason to complain of my treatment. A man ser vant and a woman cook were told off for attendance on me. I had many cha's with the brigands, who were all forethought for the welfare of the rural population by expressing the hope that my misadventure would not lead me to give up working the silk factory, as such a decision on my part would entail misery upon a number of villagers who depended upon their employment there for their daily bread. You need have no fear in future? they added, 'we will guarantee your safety.' Before separating from the band we became such excellent friends that the chief hinted he had an important capture in view, and that, if successful, he would return the whole of my ransom." ant Has an Adventure. "Hello," said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he came in with a black eve, leading a hungry-looking dog that was walking on three legs and had one leg tied up with a red silk handkerchief. "What is this? a part of your amateur theatre? Now you get out of here with that dog mighty quick. A boy that hurts dogs so they have to have their legs tied up is no friend of mine," and the grocery man took up a broom to drive the dog out doors.

"There, you calm yourself," said the boy to the grocery man, as the dog got behind the boy and looked up at the grocery man as though he was not afraid as long as the bad boy was around. "Set up the crackers and cheese, and sausage, and pickles, and everything this dog wants to eat. He is a friend of mine. That dog is my guest, and those are my splints on his broken leg, and that is my handkerchief that my girl gave me wound around it, and you touch that dog, except in the way of kindness, and down comes your house," and the boy doubled up his fists as though he meant busi-

"Poor doggie," said the grocery man, as he cut off a piece of sausage and offered it to the dog, which was declined with thanks, expressed by the wagging "Where did you steal him?

"I didn't steal him, and he is no cannibal. He won't eat your sausage," and the boy put up his elbow as though to warn off an imaginary blow. "You see, this dog was following off a pet dog that belonged to a woman, and she tried to shoo him away, but he wouldn't shoo. This dog did not know that he was a low-born, miserable dog, and had no right to move in the society of an aristocratic pet dog, and he followed right along. He thought this was a free country, and one dog was as good as another, and he followed that woman and her pet dog right into her door yard. The pet dog encouraged this dog, and he went in the yard, and when the woman got up on the steps she threw a velocipele at this dog, and broke his leg, and then she took up her pet and went in the house so she wouldn't hear this dog howl. "Well, by gum, that accounts for it. Saturday night about 10 o clock we heard somebody in the back yard, around the kitchen door, just as we were going to bed, and pa was afraid it was a burgiar after the church money he collected last Sunday. He had got to turn it over the next day to pay the minister's expenses on his vacation, and it made him nervous to have it around. I pecked out of the window and saw the man, and I told pa and pa got a revolver and began shooting through the wire screen to the kitchen window, and I saw the man drop the basket and begin to clicab over the fence real sudden, and I went out and began to groan, as though somebody was dying in the alley, and I brought in the basket with the mackerel and green corn, and told pa that from the groaning out there I guessed he had killed the grocery delivery man, and I wanted pa to go out and help me hunt for the body, but he said he was going to take the midnight train to go out West on some business, and pa lit out. I guess your man was scared on the other side of the world? Pa if he gives pa any sass. Pa says when he gets mad he had just as soon eat as to kill a man. Well, I must go home now. I run the family since pa lit out. Say, send some of your most expensive canned fruit and things over to the house." And the boy took the lame Greeks. My wife was troubled with catarrh of the bladder, suffered intense pain in the kidneys and loins, and urination was accomplished with the greatest of agony. My friends thought that she could not recover. We tried doctors and medicines, and although better at times she would grow worse again. She was obliged to use the urinal as many as fifteen times in a night, and was growing worse daily. At this time my attention was called to Hunt's Remedy, and I concluded to try it; and after using one bottle she was a good deal better, the inflammation was reduced, and the water more natural. She began to gain in appetite and felt no pain in the back and kidneys. She could attend to her household work without pain, and this had been a great burden to do, even the lightest kind of work. "I find that in addition to the pure spirits contained in their composition, they contain the extracts of hops and other well known and highly approved medicinal roots, leaves and tinctures in quantities sufficient to render the article what the makers chain it to be, to wit, a medicinal preparation and not a beverage—unfit and unsafe to be used except standicine. From a careful analysis of their formula—which was attested under oath—I find that in every wineglassful of Hop Bitters the active medicinal properties, aside from the distilled spirits, are equal to a full dose for an adult, which fact, in my opinion, subjects it to an internal revenue tax as a medicinal bitter."

A Sure Curs for Epileps; or Fits in 24 nours. Free to poor. Dn. Knuss, 2844 Arsenal st., St. Louis, Mo. Reasons Why You Feel Badly.

Because your stomach is not doing its work properly. Because your liver is out of order, and wants righting. Because your blood is thin, and needs iron in it.

Because you are troubled with nervous aches and pains. Because you are vexed with languor and debility, All these Reasons Can be Set Aside by the Use of Brown's Iron Bitters, which will Tone up your enfeebled stomach, and help it to digest. Refresh your wearied liver and put it in splendid order. Enrich your watery blood, and give it a rich red color. Calm your worried nerves, and give them restful peace.

Strengthen your whole system and drive debility and languor out. Considering that any man who has a dollar may buy of the nearest druggist a bottle of Brown's Iron BITTERS, there is no reason why people should continue to feel badly, just for the fun of it.
