A naturalist just returned from a visit to South America, told a Sun reporter about his search for a peculiar bird in Colombia. The bird is about the size of a pigeon, and has a long, heavy, broad, hooked bill, and is of a brownish chestnut color, marked with indefinite black spots.

"When I first heard of the bird," said the bird man, "I was traveling in a mountainous, part of Colombia, and one night when I hulted in a native willage they gave me some strange dish, cooked in oil. I asked a native, who said it came from the oil bird or guacharo. He furthermore gave me to understand that the birds were not unlike bottles of oil; all you had to do was to put a wick in their mouths and light it, and you had a lamp. The native had nover seen the bird himself, he said, but bought the oil tribe away up in the mountains, and brought it down twice a year. "You may be sure I inquired about the guacharo of all the natives I met, and finally 1 came across a little village where the people knew about it. One man promised to take me where I could find the birds, but he was very reluctant about it. According to him, the hirds were of ill omen, and never came out of their hiding places in the daytime. He said that they lived in the ground, and that men who had gone after them never re-

"That settled it with me, and when I doubled my first offer, he put astraction scruples, and in two days we were off into the interior. At the end of two days we gave up our mules and began days we gave up our mules and began ing on to the platform of the last car country for traveling on the globe. The forest was absolutely impenetrable. In some places the lianes or vines formed a scene, with a bag of books as large as perfect wall that had to be cut through herself, which impeded her so much that unless long detours were made. I was an impartial judgment could not be tempted more than once to give it up, formed, and she seemed to care for her but we kept on, and finally, after nearly a week's work, reached the mountains, among which the birds were supposed to live. Our camp was formed at the foot of a low cliff, against which huge boul-ders were piled; the tent was formed of boughs thrust into the ground "and palm leaves thrown over the top.

"I remember we lay down at dusk, being tired out: 'T must have fallen asleep directly, as I was awakened by the native her son, who was seventy-two. "I expected it," she cried. "I never thought that I should raise him." grasping me by the shoulder. I started to m feet, thinking that I had either gone read or was dreaming. It was dark, and all about was the most terrific roaring and screeching mortal man ever heard. The only thing I can compare it to is a hurricane, without the wind. Now there was a wild roar, then a weird shrick, folvery young. It takes time." "What ! at your age Alexander the Great had been dead six years!" lowed by a low meaning that grew louder and touder until it reached an awful climax, and then died away, to return again and again. I can hear it now," said the naturalist, faking out a highly-colored Spanish bandanna, "and it makes me warm to think of it. Well, I was paralyzed for about a minute, and the native with him in his sad misfortune. was simply knocked out of time, but I grabled him, and in a moment he grapped out, "Guacharo," Then it came to me that we were among the birds, and, picking up my gun. I fired at random, directly up. Several birds fell within a few feet of the shed. The hird actually filled the air in countless thousunds. pigeon roosts in Kentucky, where they break down great trees. Well, this discounted the adjecon roosts in every reit. I sat up until one o'clock, and then the noise lef-up and the birds disappeared in some almost miraculous manner The birds I shot to'd the oil story at once. They were so fat that the oil could be fairly squeezed out. I took an old piece of flamed and proved the lamp story then and there by thrusting it into the bird. If readily lighted and gave if clear blue and yellew finne. I tell you it took nerve to go in. but; arming ourselves with clubs and lighting material, we pushed on. For some twenty yards it was easy enough, but then the path suddenly turned abruptly downward, changing our direction, and a walk of a hundred feet led as into a large inil, perhaps one hundred and fifty feet high. Up to this time I had only used a small bull's-eye light that I always carried, and as we saw no birds 1 thought I would have an illumination, so Lost off a red light. Well, sir, there same such a thundering scream and vollex of echogs that I thought the whole Antican chidn was falling on us. The native went on his knees, and I felt like following suit. The Pulse of A nimals.

The health of animals as well as that of human beings may often be guessed at very shrewdly by simply feeling their units. In a hear word and stream but pulse. In a horse a good and strong but quiet pulse hears forty times a minute, in an ox fifty to fifty-five, in sheep and pigs not less than seventy nor more than eighty for ordinary health. It may be felt wherever a large artery crosses a bone. In the horse it is generally felt on the cord which crosses over the bone of the lower jaw in front of its curved posi-tion, or in the bony ridge above the eye; and in eattle over the middle of the first rib. In sheep it is, perhaps, easiest to place the hand on the left slde, where the beating of the heart is felt. A rapid, hard full pulse in stock points to inflammation and high fever; a rapid, small, and weak pulse also to fever, but to fever accompanied by a poor and weak state of the subject. A very slow pulse in stock will often be found to indicate brain disease, while a jumping and an irregular pulse shows something wrong with the heart .-- Londons Graphie.

Some blood is bad because it is poor and weak. Some is bad because it contains impurities. Some men have such bad blood that the wonder is it does not poison the mosquitoes who come to bite them,

The rich red color of good blood is owing to the iron which is present, Blood which has not enough iron in it is always unsatisfactory. The person in whose veins it circulates cannot be said to enjoy good health.

The efforts of expert chemists to produce a preparation of iron which can be assimilated with the blood have resulted in that perfect preparation which is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters. It is the only one which freely enters into the blood. It is the only one which accomplishes the desired good.

Weak, poor, thin blood may be made rich and strong, and impure blood may be purified by the use of that Great Iron Medicine, Brown's Iron Bitters. 3
