STUDENTS FLOORED.

A Lexington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal tells a good story of old father " Raccoon John Smith," who was noted for his sharpness at repartee. He was frequently quizzed in order to hear his replies. On one occasion three students of Georgetown college, Ky., saw him coming at a distance. and arranged that they would walk about twenty yards apart, and as they passed e first one was to say : "Good mornhim the ing, Mr. Abraham," the second to call him "Mr. Isaac," and the third "Mr. Jacob." So the first called him "Mr. Abraham," and the old gentleman only scemed a little surprised that anybody there should not know him. The second one called him "Mr. Isaac," and the old gentleman evidently suspected something. His familiarity with the Bible made him anticipate what the third was going to say, and he got ready for him. "Good morning, Mr. Jacob," said the third student. "Stop, young man," said the old gentleman, "I am neither Abraham, Isaac nor Jacob; I am Saul the son of Kish, in search of my father's asses, and behold, I have found three of them."

BISMARCK'S CHERRIES.

The Paris Figaro publishes the following amusing incident, which is said to have taken place during one of the state dinners at Berlin, and at which the late Lord Beaconsfield and the marquis of Salisbury were present:

Prince Bismarck, who is well known to be a great eater, filled his plate with cherries; the marquis of Salisbury ob-Berved it.

"Prince," said he, suddenly, "what you are doing is very unhealthy." "What?" said Prince Bismarck, in astonishment. "You have swallowed two cherrystones.' "You are mistaken," said the prince, with marked coldness.

"Never!" replied Salisbury, with that hauteur which characterizes the proud English aristocracy.

'Monsieur le Marquis!" said Bismarck, his eyes shooting fire. It was at this moment that Lord Beaconsfield came to the rescue,

"Perhaps," he insinuated, in his soft-est voice, "you are both right; your would hop back and pick it up. I was very anxious about the instep, but my fears were soon allayed, for it was shaped off as perfect as anything you ever saw. At last, when the performance reached the toos, hanged if I didn't think that I would itch to death, but I couldn't scratch, for that would have spoiled the work. When the job was completed I could walk as well as any man in town, and I even ran a race with an old negro down on the river bank." "Did you walk around while the growin' was goin' on?" asked the man from Bear Wallow, regarding the governor with curious gaze.

"Oh, no. I had to remain perfectly quiet and allow my leg to lay on a kind of cot which I had prepared for the occasion

"Did you talk to any of the doctors about it?

"Yes, but they did not regard it as remarkable. One of our leading physicians said that election to office was very frequently the cause of legs and arms growng out, and gave it as his opinion that this was the reason crippled men were always after offices," "It may not have seemed strange to the doctor, but dinged if it don't seem mighty strange to me."

" It did to me at first, but I soon got used to it; and let me remark that when a man is elected governor of Arkansas he will soon get used to a number of things he never heard of before." "Now, when I go home an' tell the folks that the governor's leg has growed out, they'll believe it, for they don't think anythin' impossible with him, but when I tell 'em that I've seed the governor an' sot down and talked to him familiar-like, they won't believe it. Can't you give me some sort of receipt showin' that I have seed you. Jest say: 'This here is to certify that John Killprune, of Bar Waller, has this day had a prune, of Bar Waller, has this day had a two angels as supporters, and the inscrip-conversation with me. I axed John to tion: "Here lies the noble and mighty set down and make himself at home, which he done, an' I found him mighty entertainin', an' wush he'd come agin and fetch his folks.' Jes draw up them words exactly an' sign 'em, please.'

"Pll do it, sir," and the receipt was drawn up and signed. Greatly elated, the man from Bear Wallow, went down. At the state-house gate he met the watchman, who asked :

"That feller gone down from up yonder yet?"

"What feller?"

"That feller in the governor's room." "Ain't he the governor !"

"Governor, the deuce. He's a jack-leg lawyer from up the country and is here tryin' to get a pardon for a hog-thief. The governor's been dodgin' him all day .- Arkansaw Traveler.

Stories of the Bench and Bar.

Ministers enjoy telling anecdotes about the cloth; doctors-Oliver Wendell Holmes is a conspicuous example-overflow with stories at the expense of their brethren; and lawyers and judges, when they get together, make the rafters ring with inextinguishable laughter. Mr. Croake James, whose name is a singular illustration of the old proverb that names go by contraries, when he retired from the law after half a century's practice, dedicated to his companions a repertory of stories which he had been long pre-paring, selections from which he had often read to them in grand divan assembled.

Mr. James first gives Lord Brougham's definition of a lawyer as "a learned gentleman who rescues your estate from your enemies and keeps it to himself," and then far more satisfactory than those of miligoes on to recall an old story of Lord tary life in England or France. But it highness must be so occupied with se-rious thoughts that you might indvert- habit of interrupting counsel. Thus Cur-Avonmore, who had fallen into the bad may be suggested that some other imran was often stopped short in his argument by his lordship, who would say: 'Mr. Curran, I know your eleverness, but it's quite in vain for you to go on; I see the drift of it all, and you are my dear lord and colleague, enjoy such good sight that nothing escapes you, Now, prince and marquis, will you allow ing too often stopped in this way, thus addressed the judge: "Perhaps, my lord, I am straying, but you must impute it to the extreme agitation of my mind. I have just witnessed so dreadful a circumstance that my imagination has not yet recovered the shock." The judge was all attention: "Go on, Mr. Curran." "On my way to court, my lord, as I passed by one of the markets, cycs were now fixed on him. With his long, bony, agile fingers, covered with precious stones, he began to arrange what looked more like a child's game than an -I see the life blood gushing out stillthe poor child's bosom was under the butcher's hand, when he plunged the knife into-into-" "Into the child!" cried out the judge, with great emotion. Your lordship sometimes anticipatesit went right into the neck of the calf !' Judge Wiles once sentenced a boy at Lancaster to be hanged, with the hope of reforming him by frightening him, and he ordered him for execution next morning. The judge awoke in the middle of the night, and was so affected by the notion that he might himself die in the course of the night, and the boy be hanged, though he did mean he should suffer, that he got out of bed and went to the lodgings of the high sheriff and left a reprieve for the boy, or what was to be considered equivalent to it, and then, returning to his bed, spent the rest of the night very comfortably. When Lord Mansfield once exclaimed

M. du Sommerad, the director of the Clay museum, of Paris, was one day in a restaurant in St. Denis, when he noticed hanging on the wall a copper drippingpan of unusual shape. He looked at it closely, and saw under a thick layer of rust and smut engraved letters. Without comment he bought it of the surprised owner. It proved to be the plate from Louis XIV,'s coffin. It bears the united arms of France and Navarre, surrounded by the collar of the order of St. Louis, Prince King Louis the Fourteenth, King of France and Navarre, etc. Requiescat in pace." It was probably torn from the coffin in 1793, when the mob broke into the burial-place of the Bourbon kings at St. Denis.

Mortality in Armies.

A learned professor of the university at Pavia has compiled and published a statistical account of the proportionate number of deaths in European armics. He finds that in every 10,000 men the comparative mortality amounts to only fifty-seven in Prussian armies, whereas in the English it is eighty-four and in the French ninety-two, while in the Austrian and Italian it rises as high as 112 and 116. This very moderate number recorded to the credit of Prussia is the more remarkable inasmuch as it is said to have been ascertained that in her armies a considerable number of deaths are the result of suicide. There are, however, some other very curious anamolies in the table thus made out. For instance, the tendency of soldiers to die appears to increase almost in inverse proportion to the rate of mortality among civilians. Thus, among the latter, the number of deaths in every 10,000 amounts to 217 in England, 244 in France, and 269 in Prussia. This would make it appear that in the last-mentioned country the warriors are about five times less likely to die than the civil population; whereas, in France and England they are only twice as unlikely to pay the debt of nature. The professor is obliged to infer from this that the sanitary conditions under which Prussian soldiers live are very

AN IMPORTANT OFISION BY AN EMINENT NEW YORK A correspondent of the Syrncuse (N. Y.) A correspondent of the Syracuse (N. Y.) "In the spring of the year I make it an invariable rule to help nature 'clean house' by using a standard blood purifier, and to this I attribute my extraordinary vigor. I am nearly soventy years old."
This man is a philosopher as well as a jurist. The early spring is nature's ''house-cleaning'' time. Then the blood is full of the impurities of the long winter. Nature needs assistance in this work, for if the purification be not complete the system is fiable to attacks of pneumonia, chilts and fever, malaria, rheumatism, liver and kidney and blood disorders, headaches, howel decangements, and the debilitating effects of summer heat. The use of a pure vegetable, non-alcoholic preparation is then all-important.
"No, I should not like my name to be used mublicly, but you may say," said the jurist.

"No, I should not like my name to be use! rublicly, but you may say," said the jurist, "that the only medicine" I use is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. "Or two," continued Lord Beaconsfield, as calmly as possible; "and you, me to decide this difficult question?"

"How?" murmured Bismarck.

HOW THE GOVERNOR'S LEG GREW ON.

An old fellow from Bear Wallow visited the executive office the other day to talk with the governor and secure something to "blow" about his neighborhood.

"Come in," said a pleasant-looking gentleman.

"Are you the governor?" " Yes sir,"

"Wall, then, I've allus been mistaken about you. I had heard that you left one of your legs on the battle-field, but I see you've got two legs. How do you account for that?"

"Easy enough. When I took my seat as governor I had only one leg with me, having, as you say, lost the other one in A short time after I took my seat battle I noticed that another leg had begun to grow out. At first I was alarmed, having never heard of such a performance, but after awhile I decided to await developments. The leg kept on growing until the ankle was reached. portant considerations ought to be admitted in explaining the difference between the three armies. Frenck, and still more especially British soldiers, are exposed to all sorts of risks in the unhearthy districts to which they are liable to be sent, even in times of peace, whereas Germany, with its lack of colonies, has no occasion to send the children of the Fatherland to such outlandish and uncomfortable quarters.
