—On Monday Mrs. A. H. Partridge received the sad intelligence of the death of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Althea, wife of Albridge Partridge, Jamestown, N. Y. —One of the attractive features of the late temperance campaign was the excellent music furnished by Prof. Henry Weaver, who for three nights entertained the audience with his charming music. —Think of one cow giving nine and one-half tons of milk in a year. That's the feat performed in the past year by the imported Holstein cow Violet, belonging to Edgar Huidekoper, of Meadville. He was able only to do light work occasionally in the garden. Mr. Saul came to Tionesta from Philadelphia about the year 1865, and for some years followed his trade of harness making at which he had few equals. He was always jovial in conversation and well thought of by our citizens, and the family he leaves, a wife and four children, have the sympathy of all. He also leaves a grown son by his first wife, who has always lived in Philadelphia, and who we learn is quite well-to-do. Mr. Saul, we judge was about 55 years old.

A., that five headstones, weighing 800 pounds, were shipped for Tionesta from West Rutland, Vt., on May 19. The freight charges are paid by the U. S. but it is expected that the friends of the deceased soldiers will set up the tombstones. It is recommended by Col. B. as follows: "with reference to the erection of the tombstones furnished by the U. S. for soldiers graves it is suggested that they be placed in the ground so that about two feet will be above ground when set. Experience has shown this to be the best method to adopted in the erection of stones of this pattern and size. But if a solid stone foundation is adopted they will be higher, but more expensive to set." Friends will be notified by postal from the Adjutant.

—A copy of the Tucker county, West Va., Pioneer having reached our sanctum, we find in its columns the following personal mention of the Hulings boys, who are now located there: James Hulings has christened his new skiff "Ethel May."—Will Hulings, has gone to take charge of the lumber camp on Shaffer's Fork. —J. The owner may call at this office for them.—The Hulings Firm are commencing an extensive business in Tucker. They are from Pennsylvania, and are buying large tracts of timber lands, and will shortly have their force of men at work. Tucker needs them and as many more like them as will come. We have not, among ourselves, sufficient capital to develop our resources as fast as should be done, and all capital that we can induce to come from other parts is that much direct gain to our county.

OIL NOTES. —Oil market closed yesterday at 79 1/4. Opened this morning at 79 1/4.

A gauge was taken of the Cooper and Balltown fields last Friday, May 23d, which showed the number of producing wells and production in these districts to be as follows on that day:

Table with 3 columns: District, No. of Wells, Production. Cooper.....219 3,698; Balltown.....88 2,124

Total.....307 5,822

The previous gauge of these fields was taken April 10th, and was as follows:

Table with 3 columns: District, No. of Wells, Production. Cooper.....196 4,833; Balltown.....78 2,553

Total.....274 7,386

A comparison of these reports shows an increase in the two fields during the last forty-three days, of thirty-three new wells, and a decrease of 1,565 barrels in the daily production.

In the Cooper district there were twenty-three new wells completed and a decrease in the production of 1,135 barrels. In Balltown there were ten new wells completed, and a decline of 420 barrels in the production. The figures for the Cooper tract include the Henry's Mills district. This decrease of 1,564 barrels in the daily production of these two fields in forty-three days has not been made up by the increase in any other districts of the middle field or lower oil country, so that there must have been a decline in the total production in these divisions of the oil region.

Grandin & Kelley's No. 25, at Balltown was drilled in the sand Friday afternoon. Its first day's production is estimated at close to 100 barrels.

For Sale, A car load of 32 buggies, 16 set of harness, 5 head of horses, one pair black horses, closely matched and good drivers; one fine bay horse, weighs 1200 lbs., good driver or worker. Call at the Lawrence House, Tionesta, Pa. J. H. WILSON.

From Michigan.

ED. REPUBLICAN:—

Thinking a few notes from the Lake State might not prove uninteresting, I will endeavor to spread myself a little in that direction.

We left the Keystone state on the morning of April 14th, and after an uninterrupted ride of six hundred miles arrived here the evening of the 15th. The weather was fair and warm when we left Oil City but when we arrived here a snow storm was in progress and there has not been a day since that we did not need our overcoat.

Manistee is a city of ten thousand inhabitants situated on a river and in a county of the same name, one-half mile from the eastern shore of Lake Michigan and about one hundred miles north east of Milwaukee on the opposite side of the lake.

It is emphatically a lumbering city and in this consists the chief and in fact the only wealth of the place.

Immense forests surround the city on three sides from which millions of dollars worth of the article is manufactured yearly and shipped to Chicago on the waters of lake Michigan, which comes up almost to the city.

The inhabitants are composed of people from many different countries among which, Holland, Denmark, Poland, Germany, Ireland, and Norway and Sweden are represented the strongest.

Among the numerous wealthy mill owners, R. G. Peters is one of the chief. This lumber king, recently went to Canada to invest in timber lands. He purchased, as he supposed, a large tract of several thousand acres of fine pine timbered land, but when he attempted to erect some mills on the same the polite officials of the Canadian government modestly informed him that he only owned the soil and that the timber belonged to the government. He has the consolation of paying taxes on some thousands of acres of wild pine land. The only other occupation of any importance besides the lumber business is the salt works which are located on a river a short distance above here. It is carried on in quite a primitive state and some enterprising man from Pa. might get rich by contracting to drill here. They drill about 1600 feet and it actually takes from ten to sixteen months to complete a well. Now prepare to open your eyes contractors, when I tell you that they pay $5 per foot for drilling. These are facts as told to me by men who are engaged in the production. Well as I have already occupied too much space I will close hoping that your patience will not sustain too great a strain in deciphering the scribbling and correcting the orthography of your unworthy correspondent.

E. P. WILLIAMS.

Manistee, Mich., May 23 '84.

Western Notes.

On the 12th inst. I took the D. & R. G. R. R., for Leadville, meeting Messrs. Horton and Cray with their respective families at Colorado Springs. "The Springs" has not grown very much since I was here before. We dined at South Pueblo, and about four o'clock p. m., had the pleasure of viewing the grandest morsel of mountain scenery that man can wish to be behold. The "Royal Gorge" or Grand Canon of the Arkansas. The first word of its title explains it all. Several hours later we saw an incidental sight that beggars description. The sun was about twenty minutes above the mountain tops and shone down on the snow-clad summits, while a thousand feet below those shining crests were the dense clouds incident to a Rocky Mountain snow storm, that was raging in the gorge. Words of mine fail to give any idea of its beauty and any attempt to do so would be but to give a very faint idea of its grandeur, so I will leave it to the readers to imagine. At 10 p. m., we arrived at Leadville,—the same old Leadville I wrote you from several years ago. Times are very dull there at present and on about every other door you see either "For Sale," "To Let," or "To Rent," which would indicate that times are dull.

During my short stay the next day I called on Hous. A. K. Dunkel and Lucius Rogers, formerly Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Internal Affairs of Pennsylvania. They are interested in the mining business and have some excellent prospects. I met Mr. A. Bloodworth, formerly of Oil City, and my head chairman on the Rio Grande engineer Corps, and with him visited the Chrysolite mine; he showing me "entirely around." I then took the Denver South Park & Pacific R. R., for Gunnison City. This road reaches the highest point reached by any railroad, even that of Mr. Merg's in Peru. At Alpiue Tunnel the enormous height of 11,552 feet above sea level is reached. There you descend as you ascend, by a grade of 251 feet per mile, to Gunnison City. Here is one of the best of the Colorado mining camps. A Town of about 3500 inhabitants in the "midst of the hills." Here we again come to the Rio Grande R'y which I took for Salt Lake and Ogden, traveling over again the territory now by steam that three years ago I passed over foot-sore and weary. Where then there was not a single sign of civilization and we traveled and labored days to get a few miles, we now glided along two slender ribbons of steel, in an elegant "sleeper" at the rate of 30 miles an hour.

The solid granite of ages had yielded up a roadway to the engine that hauled us with an easy, painless motion, where with us every step was a pang. Rauches and villages had sprung up all along the route. Delta Montrose and Grand Junction were the most notable. On our way to Grand Junction we passed through the Black Canon of the Gunnison, and one of the most terrible canyons in the west. At Grand Junction is where the Denver and Rio Grande and Denver and Rio Grande Western Rys meet when under construction, and where Mr. John Hardie drove the "Last Spike" from Denver to Ogden.

The D. & R. G. W. R. crosses both the Grande and the Green rivers, and follows the Price river up almost to its source. Along the Price river is some very fine scenery such as Castle Gate, entrance to Price Canon &c. In the Salt Lake Valley are some fine farms and residences. At Salt Lake City I stopped off and visited between trains, the Tabernacle, the Temple and "Brigham's Tomb." From there I went on to Ogden. After having finished what business I had there, I telegraphed Gen'l Manager A. N. Towne, of the Central Pacific, who very promptly telegraphed me "pass" to San Francisco and return. Taking the fast express at Ogden I left for "Golden Gates," but as I did not have an opportunity to "climb the Golden Stairs" I will write you again about the Pacific and some things I saw there. WHITEKIN.
