A neat iron fence erected in front of the Presbyterian Church, adds wonderfully to the handsome appearance of things thereabouts.

We neglected to chronicle the arrival of a girl at the residence of Mr. Wilber Grove last week. But all the same we'll smoke with you "Wib."

Mr. F. E. Mabie spent Sunday in Tionesta. The "Major" never fails to meet with a hearty welcome in his old home.

A very creditable and entertaining original poem will be found in this issue. "Sunrise" is very pleasantly and touchingly depicted by this local bard.

Rev. F. M. Small has brought his family on and now occupies the M. E. parsonage. A cordial welcome is extended to them by our citizens.

Mrs. Gaskill, of Alliance, Ohio, accompanied by her two children, is with her parents, Judge and Mrs. Reck. She expects to remain all winter.

Mr. W. H. King, one of Hickory townships successful gardeners, brought us last week a specimen of potatoes grown by him, three in number, that were the finest we have seen for many years.

The Messrs. Grove are engaged in moving the rig used in putting down the Council Run well. They expect to take the machinery to Portsmouth, Ohio, there to be used for the purpose of sinking a well for natural gas.

Worse and more of it. The Armstrong well, located near the Christie, in Butler county, was struck Monday, and commenced flowing at rate of 400 barrels an hour. This would make 9,600 a day, or the largest well that has been struck for "a week or more."

We learn with sincere regret of the serious illness of our friend John Thomson, of Stewart's Run, he having experienced another attack of the complaint from which he suffered so severely two years ago. We hope with his many friends that he may speedily recover from this affliction.

Oil market closed yesterday 68 1/2. Opening this morning at 70c.

The first snow fall of the season occurred last Thursday, 23d inst., but it melted about as fast as it fell. On Thursday night, however, "Old Prob." resumed operations, and Friday morning the ground was covered with nearly three inches of snow, sufficient to induce some of the more ardent to shoulder their Winchester's and scour the redbrush for deer tracks.

Mr. William Wray, one of the oldest settlers of Black's Corners, Clarion county, died on Friday last, and was buried Sunday at Tylersburg. Mr. Wray was 80 years of age, and has lived in that neighborhood upwards of 45 years. Rev. James Hickling, of this place conducted the funeral services, which were attended by nearly 500 people, showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held by his neighbors.

Mr. J. T. Dale, who has spent the past year and a half in the "land of the Dakotas," a la Hiawatha, has returned to his native heath, abundantly satisfied that Dakota is a good enough country for some folks, perhaps, but equally as good for others to absent themselves from. And that's about the honest opinion of all who have had a taste of it. Meanwhile the "Col." is looking as though the country agreed with him.

A Vermont farmer's boy has bought himself a bicycle, and wishes he hadn't. His thrifty father has utilized the thing by making it furnish motive power for the winning mill, corn sheller and grindstones. This he does by suspending it from the axle, removing the tire from the wheel, and connecting it by an endless rope to his agricultural machines; then making his son mount and do the propelling. The bicycle has a future.

The present is one of the greatest chestnut years since Columbus discovered us. Not only the grocers in town, but all sorts of traders, have been taking in chestnuts in trade, and many barrels are shipped to the city markets every day. Over 1,000 bushels have been shipped thus far this season from our neighboring town of Cochranton. The nuts this year are fine and unusually free from worms. The average price is about $2.50 a bushel. - Franklin News.

The friends of Mr. George Armstrong, of Tionesta township, will deeply sympathize with him in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred on Thursday morning last. Her disease was consumption, with which she suffered for many months. She was a kind mother, a faithful and devoted wife, and was held in high esteem by all her neighbors and acquaintances. Besides the husband she leaves four children, the oldest about 14 years of age, and a large circle of friends to mourn her departure. The funeral took place on Friday forenoon, and was attended by a large concourse of friends, her remains being laid to rest in Riverside Cemetery.

A Sad Accident.

Wednesday evening of last week Freddie, aged about eight years, third son of Mrs. A. H. Partridge, met with a most distressing and painful accident. With some other small boys he was at play in his mother's yard, they having a bow and arrow with which they were shooting. Freddie's next older brother, Joe, picked up the arrow and threw it to him, the blunt end striking him in the left eye, bursting the eye-ball. Dr. Morrow was summoned, and, although the injury was so painful that a thorough examination could not be made, he pronounced the eye destroyed. Dr. Arters, an oculist of Oil City, was sent for, and on Thursday came up and removed the ball, and Freddie is now gaining rapidly and will soon be around again. The disfiguring of this bright little boy is nothing compared with the loss of the eye, and it should prove an everlasting warning to all boys to be ever on their guard while at play.

Out of the 700 men employed in the North Chicago rolling mills 693 will vote for Blaine and Protection. The Republican majority, as we have repeatedly said, must come from the great centres of industrial energy. It is in the workshops and the mills of the land and around the blast furnaces that the campaign work must be done. Mr. Beecher and the Free-trade bolters from the Republican party say that the "laws of political economy" demonstrate that "the man who cannot live on bread and water is not fit to live." This same Mr. Beecher says $1 a day is enough to support a man, his wife and five children. He is supporting Governor Cleveland because Cleveland is a Free-trader also. In his declaration that the pilots of the port of New York were entitled to no higher wages than the pilots of any foreign port, Cleveland enunciated the principle of political economy that, applied to all industries, is Free-Trade. - Phila. Press.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

It is now drawing near the time, for the people to decide who shall be the next President. I take liberty of giving a woman's humble opinion on the subject: Selecting our Chief Executive, is a matter of the most important consideration because it is the best interests of the entire country that is to be considered, and personal feelings should be put aside to accomplished it. In electing Mr. Blaine the people will be fortunate in having an officer in power and trust of high integrity and undoubted patriotism. His labors as a public man have always been incessant and untiring. Ready in emergency, quick to note the public pulse a keen observer of men and things he controls the masses and imbues his countrymen with his own unswerving loyalty. He is emphatically the friend of the people, as President he will provide for their needs and further their interests. In all his acts as a statesman his labors have been incessant day and night, in season and out of season, he has never for one moment faltered in his duties and his entire public record has been distinguished for judiciousness, care, economy, and humanity. He has been able to win the highest opinions of his fellow citizens and to hold it. Most affable of men he makes hosts of friends among those with whom he comes in contact. Conservative and prudent in maturing measures, yet prompt and vigorous in action when occasion demands it. Mr. Blaine has qualities that especially fit him to be Chief Executive. He has already shown his power as a statesman, and developed an exceptional aptitude for the comprehension and management of the intricate and perplexing problems of our country's vast necessities. An earnest public spirited man, of good judgment, quick in perception, generally correct in his conclusions, prompt in his efforts to advance measures which he believes will prove for the good and welfare of his countrymen at large, and broad in his views of the requirements of the hour. Such a man is worthy of the high office of President of the United States, he has proved it, and why not show a proper gratitude by electing him to an office to which he is able to do justice, and give satisfaction to all. He has been well tried, all must know his ability. As a public servant, he has always dealt openly and honestly, and endeavored to perform all duties incumbent upon his public position, deciding carefully the best interests of all the people, with no disposition to evade any responsibility or ignore any reasonable demand made on him by his countrymen. This public term of service covers a term of years, full of active labor, and prompt, discreet, and decisive statesmanship. Such a man would prove himself to be a worthy color bearer, of the emblem that waves over our Great Republic. Under his wise statesmanship, aided by the Almighty, we will go on prospering, and be an honor to ourselves, and a noble example to the entire civilized world. AMELIA THORPE, 708 S. Washington Square, Phila.

SUNRISE.

BY A. C. J. Over the hilltops the sun Is rising, to brighten the day, Far out on the East, he is flinging, His banners of crimson away. Great bars of deep violet and gold, The bright azure of heaven adorning, While the ark, from the meadow is rising To welcome the sunrise of morning. The white clouds floating so idly Are bathed in a cascade of light, Like castles of fairy land seeming, Wove from a web of gold meshes bright. The hill tops he blesses in rising, And weaves them a chaplet of light, While from the river he's lifting, Its vapory shroud of the night. The birds from the verdant deep wild-wood Are singing their merriest lay; To welcome the sunrise of morning They sing their thanks all day. The yellow-topped mullen is nodding Its broad velvet verdure to him, To welcome the sunrise of morning In a silent through love-laden hymn. He kisses the dew-laden flowers, And bids their weeping to cease; Look up to heaven and smile, Ye emblems of beauty and peace.
