

Announcements.

Announcements will be published at the following, strictly cash in advance, rates: Associate Judge, $10; District Attorney, $3; Representative Delegate, $2.

We are authorized to announce EDWARD KERR, of Barnett township as a candidate for Associate Judge, subject to Republican usages.

We are authorized to announce JOHN A. PROPER, of Tionesta, as a candidate for Associate Judge, subject to Republican usages.

We are authorized to announce JOHN THOMSON, of Harmony township, as a candidate for Associate Judge, subject to Republican usages.

We are authorized to announce P. M. CLARK, Esq., of Tionesta, as a candidate for District Attorney, subject to Republican usages.

The Illinois Democrats seem to have been Black Jacked out of existence.

What a ticket Bayard and Vilas would make in 1888! Platform: Blunder and plunder.

HORIZONTAL BILL MORRISON is not feeling well since Logan downed him. William's case of swell-head has been reduced, and his surroundings don't seem to fit.

ANOTHER Missouri man has received an office. It must not be forgotten, however, that Colonel Frank James and Tom Crittenden are still unprovided for.

ROSWELL PETTIBONE FLOWER is after the Democratic nomination for governor of New York, but we hope he won't get it. Mr. Flower is a nice man, weighing about an eighth of a ton, and we should dislike to see him run over by the Republican wagon.

The death of Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State under President Arthur, occurred on Wednesday afternoon of last week, 20th inst. He had suffered for some time from liver complaint, and for the past six weeks had been in a critical condition. He was nearly 68 years of age and had held many distinguished political positions.

It is announced that Mr. Sam Randall will not throw any obstacles in the way of Speaker Carlisle's re-election and the Philadelphia Record girds and writes over it as if it had been bitten by a snake. If the hearty hate of one's enemies is high distinction, Sam must have very nearly reached the summit of his ambition, for the hate the holstein heifer bears him, and her grotesque ways of exhibiting it is beyond measure diverting.

Nobody catches Secretary Manning making blunders like those of which Bayard and Vilas have been guilty. Colonel Manning runs things on a strict business schedule, and when he wants to put a man like Higgins into office, he does so on the broad ground that the man is hungry, and the Government has more provender on hand than it can use. Gentlemen who do not like Colonel Manning's style have a standing invitation to get right up in meeting and explain what they are going to do about it.

MONDAY the Democratic Administration at Washington removed three Union veterans from their positions in the Treasury Department. Tuesday the Republican party had an office to bestow—the senatorship in Illinois—and it gave the honor to a general of the volunteer forces of the Government who proved his bravery and loyalty on many a hard fought field of battle. These two incidents show in a clear and forcible manner the spirit which pervades the Republican and Democratic parties.—Phila. Press.

SINCE Sam Randall declared that he is in favor of tariff revision the mugwumps, Horizontal Bill men, Carlisle, and Hurd, and Beck men and all, even the Holstein heifer, are strutting around him, cocking their eyes, and craning their necks like a flock of turkeys at the advent of a rat in their midst. They do not know whether Sam is a convert to be received with acclamation, or whether he is working a traverse on them which is to throw them into confusion, and so they fight shy of him. It is well. They had better give Sam a wide berth. Sam is sly, sir.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 23, '85. Mr. Cleveland has established a very systematic routine at the White House. He has so arranged his time and his affairs that there is no clashing. He has his hours for working and when they are over he stops work. He rises at a reasonably early hour, and is always ready for breakfast, which is fixed for nine o'clock. He has never missed his morning's meal, nor been even late to it since he has been in the White House, and he expects the same punctuality from those who sit at table with him. Almost immediately afterwards he is ready to begin the business of the day, and after attending to important letters or other matters which are brought to his attention, he begins to receive callers. At half-past one o'clock lunch is served, and no one is afterwards admitted to his presence except by special appointment. Thus he has time at his disposal to see special delegations, or to shut himself in his office for the consideration of important matters, requiring his attention, and to take his customary afternoon drive. Dinner is served promptly at seven o'clock. The evenings are devoted to the relaxation of conversation, or to the consideration of business, just as it happens.

The President himself has been enabled to stand the strain upon him for the past few months remarkably well. He is looking well and seems perfectly so. He is a good strong eater, and is fond of a good table. It is his wont to invite an intimate personal friend or a cabinet officer to stay to dinner with him, but as yet he has not given either a state or a private dinner party, and probably will not until next season. Wine is served at the table and the President enjoys it. As soon as the meal is concluded the table is deserted, and the President with his guest, if there happens to be one present, goes up stairs to enjoy an after dinner smoke in private. The President likes a cigar, but he is a light smoker, and no one about the house has yet seen him with a cigar in his mouth during the day. His cigars like President Arthur's are all imported, but they last longer. The same steward and the same french cook have charge of the culinary department of the White House as during President Arthur's administration, and as much care is taken to have the table supplied with the best the market affords as then. It is comparatively easy to secure an audience with President Cleveland. A great deal of credit for this systematizing of affairs at the White House is due to Col. Lamont, his private secretary, who worked himself sick in a couple of months. His ways are the President's ways, and the two understand each other perfectly.

The long and serious illness of ex-Secretary Frelinghuysen, beginning so soon after his term as Secretary of State expired, and followed by his death Wednesday, and the illness of his wife and lameness of their eldest daughter at the same time, has naturally excited much sympathy in Washington, and been discussed as a most tragic conclusion of the brilliant part that family took in the social life of Washington during the three years Secretary Frelinghuysen served in the Cabinet of President Arthur. This has evoked the comment that in the four years covered by the Garfield-Arthur administration, 1881-'85, so many tragic episodes have occurred in connection with those most prominent in it at some time during the period, beginning with Mrs. Garfield's illness, so soon followed by the assassination of her husband, the President, and his long, cruel illness and death. Hunt, Garfield's Secretary of the Navy, died in a foreign land three years later, while Minister to Russia, after a protracted and most painful illness, which began a year before his death. Howe, President Arthur's first Postmaster General, and Folger, his first Secretary of the Treasury, both died in office, the latter after being an invalid most of the time he was in the cabinet. Secretary Lincoln's mother, widow of President Lincoln, and his wife's mother, the wife of ex-Senator Harlan, both died while he was Secretary of War.

One day last week Senator Vance visited the Postoffice Department to look after "the interest of his constituents," and also several postmaster-ships in North Carolina. One of his friends in the department asked him how he liked the new administration. He hesitated for a minute and then said: "Before I answer your question, I want to call attention to one of Mark Twain's stories in which he writes about the fellow who, meeting a friend, asked him if he was married, and if so, how much, and how did he like it as far as he had gone. Now," continued the Senator, "how do you like the administration as far as it has gone." The clerk remarked that he was highly pleased with it, because he had not yet been removed from office. "Then you like it much better than I do," said the Senator as he walked away down the hall toward the Postmaster General's room.
