NOW THE MAILS ARE CARRIED IN DIFFERENT LANDS.

Palm Lenf Letters in India-Camel Express Messengers—Buffaloes as Mail Carriers.

In my furthest wanderings, writes C. F. Gordon Cumming, the celebrated traveler, in Cassell's Magazine, I have never yet treached any point so isolated as to be beyond the ministrations of the postoffice, but strangely varied have been its emissaries. I had heard of a settler axle. in a wholly uncivilized island, who, while building himself a boat, required some tool which he had left at home, so he selected a smooth chip of wood and thereon wrote a message, which he bade one of the bystanders carry to his wife. Of course the man on seeing her look at the chip and then deliver to his care the needful tool attributed the whole to magic. - Nevertheless, he had unconsciously been a letter-carrier of the most | single file.

primitive type.
Slightly in advance of this is the system of writing with a sharply-pointed instrument, on long strips of firm green palm-leaf-a substitute for paper-which is in common use in Ceylon and on the seacoast of Hindoostan, and wherever the cocoa-paim flourishes-or still better, the broad-leaved taliput or Palmyra palm. Whole books are thus inscribed, but for letter-writing it is particularly useful, and the missive is folded and tied up with a trail of natural string plucked in the forest, and is slung from a light stick and so carried to its destination.

In my travels in the Himalayas we found a truly useful friend in the native work. Thenceforward as we journeyed in the wilds he forwarded all our letters common thing among his vegetables, by a very lightly-garbed special runner, Signs in Cuba being taxed five cents a children carry sweet violets in the end at length delivered as clean as when it

"The commonest type of Indian post-runner, or 'Tappal wallah,' wears a long white coat, very tight trousers inclose his lean legs, and his headdress is a huge light blue turban. His letter-bag is slung on his side, and it is necessary that he should be a good linguist and be able to read a great variety of strange crabbed characters, for several of the multitudinous languages of Hindoostan are written in quite distinct characters, all of which are alike incomprehensible to our untutored eyes. The rural letter-carrier of Hindoostan carries a long stick with a sharp iron point, which can be used as a weapon in case of need. This stick is adorned with six little brass bells, which serve to frighten away reptiles and dangerous animals and also to give notice of the approach of the post. The danger from wild beasts is, in some districts, a very real one, the 'tappal' runners through the forest districts in the south of Ceylon havin g occasionally had very narrow escapes from 'rogue' elephants and other wild beasts.

Of all varieties of Indian letter-carriers, clothed or unclothed, none are so picturesque as the Camel express mes-The men wear a serviceable red uniform and large green turban emtheir girdle hangs a curved sabre in a rapid trotting, sometimes at the rate of taken from the mouth of some large eighty miles a day, is so trying to the animal. riders as to shorten their days. In very strange contrast with this extraordinary rapid postal development in the little island empire of Japan, is the equally wonderful stagnation in the vast empire of China, where, even to this hour, there is no government institution for the transmission of posts.

But as regards letters, a considerable proportion of the 400,000,000 Chinamen do occasionally exchange letters-those who cannot write for them-selves hiring scribes to do so. These the receiver.

On the death of the Emperor Hien-Fung, intimation thereof was sent from his country palage (a distance of 600 li, which is upward of 200 miles) in twentytour hours, which is the highest speed attainable in China. But the placid of vulgar impatience, and to whom telegraphs are an abomination, are content that all ordinary communications should be conveyed either by slow paddling or poling boats, or else by foot-runners, whose high-sounding title of "the thousand-mile horse" does not quicken their pace beyond about twelve miles in twenty-four hours. They carry a paper lantern and a paper umbrella, and their letter-bag is secured on their backs by a cloth knotted across the chest. But though the rise and fall of nations in the outer world of barbarians are topics wholly without interest to these millions, there are some subjects which call forth enthusiasm and an eager desire for early information. Foremost among these is the deciaration of the list of sixty successful candidates for literary degrees in the Confucian classics at the manned by half a dozen strong rowers, the poor and ignorant, is a ways improv-

Duty of every kind has in it the elements of pleasure, and, if we do not discover and appropriate them it is our own fault. If we study the principles of our life-work, dwell upon its details, and strive to perfect it as much as possible, we shall insensibly learn to love it, and feel no sacrifice for it a burden.

One means of confirming and establishing one's affections is by serving the loved. Nothing endears one person to another so much as aiding and serving him, especially if self-sacrifice is in-volved. Giving what is valued always increases affection to the recipient, even if it be only material benefits that are conferred, much more when it is our time, our labor, and ourselves.

THE BUAST-LIKE LIFE LUD BY A Fastened to a Tree by a Collar and Chain-Approached Only by his Mother.

A Sperryville (Va.) letter to the New York World says; For years there have been stories told of a wild man living in the fastnesses of the Blue Ridge mountains, the son of one of the small mountain farmers, who is jealously guarded and protected by him; but the description given of the monster have been so vague that I determined to test their truth for myself. A rough ride of several miles directly up the mountain from the village of Sperryville brought our party to a little farm which had been cleared on the mountain side. In the field an old man, evidently the farmer himself, was at work. As we stopped to speak to him our ears was startled by a series of the most appalling and unearthly shricks and yells coming from a clump of trees which surrounded the log farm-house, a little distance off. For some moments the quiet country roadside seemed a veritable pandemonium. Only those who may have visited what are know in a mad-house as the "hollow squares," were the more violent patients are confined, can form any idea of the horrible Then cooked it was palatable and filled impression made upon the mind by the large breakfast dish.

Young chicks come into the world the air. The old farmer, informing us with the yolk of the egg stored away for | that it was his son that we heard, led the way to the house. I looked and saw a from the house. wild, brutish looking creature, whom it would be meckery to call a man, under the tree, to which he was fastened by a collar and chain. . He was the veritable impersonation at last, of Caliban, a strange, uncouth monster, neither man nor brute, but with the characteristics of both painfully blended. He was entirely naked, though his body was covered with a short growth of shaggy black hair. Around his neck was a heavy iron collar of home-made manufacture, and to this was attached a heavy chain, fastened in the tree trunk by a staple. From the constant attrition of his neck the collar had been worn perfectly smooth and bright. He kept up a steady walk -the monotonous, unreasoning trot of a caged animal. In his hand he carried his chain to keep the weight of it off his neck, precisely as a monkey may be seen of piercing screams, accompanied by such horribly grotesque contortions of face Paris is cleared of rats by her munici- and limb that one was forced to turn skins. was a runner who first came into notice by running from Paris to Mcscow, a distance of 1,760 miles, in thirteen days and eighteen hours. In 1836 he ran through Central Asia from Calcutta to Constantinople, bearing dispatches for the East India company. The distance

fifty-nine days, one-third of the time taken by the swiftest caravan. A favor-walked, but always ran. Invariably he took the direct route to his destination,

climbing mountains, swimming rivers,

and guiding himself through forests in a way known only to himself. His food was a small quantity of biscust and rasp berry syrup. His rests he took twice in twenty-four hours, when he usually leaned against some support, covered his face with a handkerchief and slept.

If he was compelled to remain quiet any length of time he complained of giddi-ness and rush of blood to the head. In 1842 he was employed to discover the source of the Nile. Starting from Silesia in May, 1843, he ran to Jerusalem, thence to Cairo, and up the banks of the Nile into Egypt. Just outside the village of Lyang he was seen to stop and rest, leaning against a palm tree, his face covered as was his wont. He rested

The Hon. John Kelly, the head and front of Tammany Hall, a man of strict integrity, an indefatigable worker, early at his office, inte to leave, so burdened with business that regular meals were seldom known by him, with mind in constant tension and energies steadily trained, finally broke down.

The wonder is that he did not sconer give way. An honest man in all things else, he acted unfairly with his physical resources. He was ever dawing upon this bank without ever depositing a collateral. The account overdrawn, the bank suspends and both are now in the hands of medical receivers.

It is not work that kills men. It is irregularity of habits and mental worry. No man in good health frets at his work. Bye and bye when the bank of vigor suspends, these men will wonder how it all happened, and they will keep woodering until their dying day unless, perchance, some candid physician or interested friend will point out to them how by irregularity, by excessive mental effort, by constant worry and fret, by plunging in desper than they had a right to go, they have produced that loss of nervous energy which almost invariably expresses itself in a deranged condition of the kidneys and liver, for is a well known fact that the poison which the kidneys and liver should remove from the blood, if left therein, soon knocks the life out of the strongest and most vigorous man or woman. Daily building up of these vital organs by so wonderful and highly reputed a specific as Warner's safe cure, is the only guarantee that cur business men can have that their strength will be equal to the labors daily put upon them.

Mr. Kelly has nervous dyspepsia, we learn, indicating, as we have said, a break down of nerve force. His case should be a warning to others, who, pursuing a like course, will certainly reach a like result.—The Sanday Herald.
