Indians with Faces that Would Scare a Mule—Their Strange Life and Habits—A Curjous Postofilce.

A letter from Punta Arenas, Patagonia, to the New York Sun, says:

The glaciers of Switzerland and Norway are insignificant beside those which can be seen from ships passing the straits of Magellan. Mountains of green and blue ice, with crests of the purest snow, stretch fifteen and twenty miles along the channel in some parts of the straits. They are by no means so lofty as those of Europe, but appear more grand, rising as they do from the surface of the water in a land where winter always lingers, and the sun sets at 8 o'clock in the afternoon. The line of perpetual snow begins here at an elevation of only 2,000 leet, and at night water always freezes, even in the summer time. The highest mountains in Terra del Fuego z.'e supposed to reach an altitude of 7,000 or 8,000 feet; but the eye of man has seldom seen them, covered as they are with an almost perpetual haze or mist, and presenting difficulties which the most ardent and experienced climber cannot surmount. The highest mountain known in this region is Mount Sarmiento, one of the most imposing of the Andean peaks, which rears a cone of spotless anow nearly 7,000 feet almost abruptly from the water at its feet.

The Terro del Fuego Indians, the ugli-est mortals that ever breathed, are always on the lookout for passing vessels, and come out in canoes to beg and to trade skins for tobacco. The Fuegians, or "Canoe Indians," as they are commonly called, to distinguish them from the Patagonians, who dislike the water, and prefer to navigate on horseback, have no settled habitation. They are a simple people, with a dirty and bloated appearance, and faces that would scare a mule. They have broad features, low foreheads. over which the hair hangs in tangled lumps, high check bones, flat noses, enormous chins and jaws, and mouths like a crocodile, with teeth that add to their repulsiveness. Their skin is said to be of a copper color. They consider it unhealthful to bathe. They are short in stature, round shouldered, squatty and bloated, a physical deformity said to be due to the fact that most of their lives are spent in cances. Their women are even more repulsive in their appearance than the men, and the children, which are uncommonly numerous, look like young baboons. Their intelligence seems to be confined to a knowledge of boating and fishing, and they exercise great skill in both pursuits. Scientists who have investigated them say that they are of the very lowest order of the human kind, many degrees below the Digger Indians.

Although these people live in a perpetual winter, where it freezes every night and always snows when the clouds shed moisture, they go almost stark naked! The skin of the otter and guanaco are used for blankets, which are worn about the shoulders and afford some protection; but under these neither women nor men wear anything whatever, except shoes and leggings made of the same material, which protect the feet from the rocks. There is some little attempt at adornment made by both sexes. in the way of necklaces, bracelets and earrings made of fish bones and sea shells. which are often ingeniously joined together. The women will sell the skin blankets that cover their backs for tobacco.

Their food consists of mussels, fish, sea

the channel, but secluded from the Indians, is a tin box known to every seaman who navigates this part of the world. Every passing skipper places in this box letters and newspapers for other vessels that are expected this way, and takes out whatever is found to belong to him or his men. All the newspapers and books that seamen are done with are deposited here, which are picked up by the next vessel to arrive, and replaced with a new lot. It is a sort of international postal clearing house, and sailors say that the advantages it offers have never been abused during the half century the system has existed. Every time a vessel passes through the straits the Fuegian Indians come out in their canoes to show their sociability and trade what property they are fortunate enough to be possessed of for tobacco and rum. The passenger steamers seldom stop, but freight boats usually do, and hold interviews with the natives. The steamer we were on ran through several fleets of dugouis, greatly to the danger of those who occupied them, as they paddled across our course in the most reckless and excited manner. In each of the frail canoes were three or four people and several children, who screamed and gesticulated in the most violent manner. They came so near the ship that we could distinguish their features and hear their words, which were elamors for "tabac" (tobacco) and "galleta" (food). For a plug of navy they would exchange a guanaco blanket that could not be bought in New York for $75, as the guanaco is one of the rarest and finest of skins. The anger and disgust that was pictured upon the faces of these creatures when they found that the vessel was not slackening her speed would have furnished a model for the expressions on the souls that are lost. The passengers were about as much disappointed as they, for we had all read and heard of the Fuegians, and anticipated much gusto, as the Spaniards say, in making their acquaintance. We knew that steamers usually stopped to let passengers have a look at the cannibals, and had read in Lady Brassey's "Voyage of the Sunbeam " and other descriptions of travel in these parts of the interesting encounters they had with them, and we had prepared ourselves with tobacco and other articles for the purpose of bartering for skins and other mementos of savage life.

Work that Deaf Mutes Can Do.

"The number of deaf and dumb persons in the city, exclusive of those in the institution, is about eight hundred, "said Principal Crouter, of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumo, to a Philadelphia Times reporter. "Last year a committee took a great deal of trouble to trace the lives of graduates for ten years back and the figures obtained are very gratifying. It was found that eightv-eight out of every hundred are self-supporting, working at various trades in which hearing is not an absolute requisite. Deaf and dumb people can be found at work in carpenter shops, machine shops, and in similar industrial establishments. That lithograph on the wall is the work of a graduate. I know of four lawyers who are deaf mutes-two in Ohio and two in Canada. The late Chief Examiner of Patents Parkinson was a dear mute, and a number of the government clerks in Washington are atflicted in the same way. These cases show that speech and hearing are not absolutely essential for comparative success in various walks of life. A large number of those known as deaf and dumb can speak, however, thanks to the education received in institutions of this char-

and several other places there are schools elected his successor. for higher education, where graduates from the ordinary institutions may continue their studies to almost any desired

TRICKS ON THE TRACKS! Oangers from which Engine rs Save the Public and The maives.

The Raileag Review. One who is accustomed to railway travel-ing can scarcely realize how much he is de-pendent for safety upon the engineer. Added to the responsibility of their station, engineers to the responsibility of their station, engineers are also in constant danger of accidents caused by the tricks of jealous rivals. This rivalry, it is said, sometimes prompts to the doing of utterly mean tricks. A Nickle Plate engineer after his very first trip was laid off because he had "cut out" all the bear-ings of his engine. He was re-instated, how-ever, after he proved that some rival had alled his offingen with emerge Another new ever, after he proved that some rival had filled his offing can with emery. Another new tangineer was anspended for burning out the flues of his boiler. Through grief at the loss of his position he died, and then a conscience stricken rival confessed that hs had put oil in the tank so that it foamed and showed water at the top guage, when in reality there was scarcely a quart in the boiler!

was scarcely a quart in the boiler! These intense jealousies, together with the terrible anxiety incident to their work, has a iterribly straining effect on the nerve, and statistics tell us that, though Locomotive En-gineers may look strong and vigorous, they are not all a bearty class. Ex. Chinf Engineer A. S. Hampton, Indianapolis, Ind., (Div. 145) was one of those apparently hearty men, but be says: "The auxiety, strain and jolting camo near finishing me." His sufferings lo-calized in catarrh of the bladder, but he used Warner's safe cure faithfully for twenty weeks and now exclaims, "I am a well man." T. S. Ingraham, of Cleveland, Ohio, assistant Chief engineer, and other prominent members are also emphatic in its praise. The Lacomotive Engineers' Brotherhood

The Lacomotive Engineers' Brotherhood has 17,000 members and 240 divisiona. Its headquarters is in Cleveland, Ohio, where Chief Engineer Arthur for twenty years has exercised almost dictatorial sway. It was organized in August, 1863, by the employees of the Michigan Central. It has given nearly two million dollars to the widows and orphans of december. of deceased members.

animals, and flesh of similar sorts, which they catch with the rudest sort of implements. Their fishing lines are made of grass and their hooks of fish bones. For weapons they have bows and spears, the former having strings made of the entrails of animals, and the latter being long, slender poles, with tips of sharpened bone. They also use slings with great dexterity, which are made of woven grass, and are said to bring down animais at long range.

During the day they are always on the water, in cances or dugouts made of the trunks of trees, the whole family going together, and usually consisting of a man, two or three wives, and as many urchins as can be crowded into the boat. When night falls they go ashore and build a fire upon the rocks to temper the frigid atmosphere. Around this they cuddle in a most affectionate way. The name of the islands upon which they live came from these fires. The early navigators, when passing through the straits, were amazed to see these fires spring up as if by magic all over the islands every night at sundown, and so they called them Terra del Fuego, or the Land of Fire, The English shorten the appellation, and thus the place is known as Fireland.

No one has ever been able to ascertain whether they possess any sort of re-ligious belief or have religious ceremonies. Across the straits the Patagonians, or horse Indians, are of a higher order of creation, and perform sacred rites to propitiate the evil and good spirits, in which, like the North American savages, they believe, but the Fuegians are too degraded to contemplate anything but the necessity of ministering to their passions and appetites. They cat fish and flesh uncooked, and appreciate as dainties the least attractive morsels. Their language is an irregular and meaningless jargon, apparently derived from the Patagonians, with whom they were, sometime in the distant past, connected. Bishop Sterling, of the Church of England, a devoted and energetic man, who has charge of missionary work in South America, with headquarters on the Falk-Indistands, has made some attempt to benefit these creatures, but with no great success. He has a little schooner in which he sails around, and has succeeded in ingratiating himself among the Fuegians by giving them presents of beads and twine, blankets and clothing. They use the first for ornaments, the second for fishing gear, but trade off the other things for rum and tobacco the the darkness. Out of seventy head of first chance they get. As long as his horses only ten survived the sudden gifts hold out he will be kindly received. no doubt, and his devotion will meet with encouragement, but if he should land among them without the usual plunder, they would probably kill him at breakfast time and pick his ribs for leech" means to treat with medicine and Junch.

extent, "Teaching the deaf and dumb is very difficult work, requiring great experience and indomitable patience. It is, perhaps, twice as difficult as teaching the blind. It is comparatively easy to reach the understanding of the blind, because they can hear. But in the case of a child born deaf it is an entirely different matter. Where the deafness is accidental or occurring through disease, say at eight, ten or twelve years of age, the work is not so hard. The fact that the child has once had the sense of hearing is a great foundation. In this institution we use both the sign or manual system and the oral or lip-reading sys- myths. "You hear," he says, tem. The former is the French idea and the latter the German.

"Of the total number of deaf persons about one-third can be made to speak, but of those who are born deaf the proportion is very much lower-in fact, I would not like to reduce it to figures. We have oral classes here beside those at the branch oral school at Eleventh and Clinton streets. Industrial education is receiving more attention each year. We have now carpenter shops, tailoring shops and a printing office. The girls are taught all the forms of needlework, cooking and the various other feminine occupations."

A Wonderful Change of Weather.

The Denver Opinion recalls to the recollection of its readers an extraordinary storm which once visited that region. It was about the middle of July. party of herders started out with the stock of the company to which they belonged. Having to cross a river to get to the grazing ground, they halted when about 500 yards distant to refresh themselves, the day being excessively warm. They improvised shelter by hanging blankets over the sage brush and thus protecting themselves from the scorching herders it developed into a most terrific snow storm, equal to anything witnessed in mid-winter. The herders hastened to drive the stock back to the fort, but had great difficulty in finding their way for change in the weather.

Plain skirts are in favor, and are likely to remain so, as they are found to be exceedingly convenient and most economical. Beside, their lightness is a great argument in their favor. That jackets will continue to be short in the basque throughout the autumn is a fair inference to be drawn from the general aspect of the present style. Another point to be noticed is the sensible length of the dress sleeves, which fairly reach to the wrist,
