On perfectly new land in Kansas red clover seven feet high has grown this season, and white clover five feet six inches high. Natives of Borneo eat monkeys and tie the skins around their waists, letting the tails hang down behind. This is said to be the origin of the existence there of men with tails.

It was the boast of the West some years ago that a bonanza man of some sort had drawn a check on a shingle for $500,000. Down in Texas the other day it was decided that Hugh Bennison's will scrawled on a candle-box should stand.

The Patagonians, including both sexes, have an average stature of five feet ten inches, according to Mr. II. Hale, who considers that the adoption of equestrian habits has shortened the legs of the people two inches in two centuries, their former heighth averaging six feet.

Evidence of the prevalence of cannibalism among the pre-historic inhabitants of Portugal has been discovered on the Peniche peninsula, where also has been found a skull on which some early surgeon appears to have used his stone implements in the delicate operation of trepanning.

There seems to be some foundation for the superstition that it is unlucky to be one of a social party of thirteen. The Lancet and Clinic quotes Quetelet as saying that, taking thirteen persons of different ages, the probabilities are that one death will occuramong them in the year. Of course the circumstance is likely to take place whether the thirteen persons meet together or not.

Jacob Bayer, a little whitehaired, tottering German, told the justice in a Chicago court how he made his living. Early in the morning he starts out, shoving in front of him a little cart. As he passes from one street to another he keeps his eyes open watching for stones, Building stones that have fallen from passing wagons, cobble stones, pebbles, or bricks are his especial prey. By nightfall his cart is usually filled with a load worth a dollar or so at least.

Lee in Pennsylvania.

Up to Monday evening, June 29, neither Lee nor Longstreet knew of the whereabouts of Hooker's army. But late in the evening on that day a ragged, weather beaten Confederate soldier was seen lurking around Longstreet's head-quarters. The appearance and conduct of the man excited some suspicions, but on his claiming to know General Longstreet, and that he had important communications to make to him, he was at once taken to Longstreet's tent. As soon as Longstreet put his eyes on him he grasped the poor soldier by the hand, and, shaking it heartily, said: "Good Lord, I am glad to see you! I thought you were killed!" He proved to be the brave and faithful scout, Harrison, that Longstreet had sent into the Federal lines while his corps was still in Culpepper county, Virginia. Longstreet examined him on the spot, and from this man he received the first information that the Federal army had crossed the Potomac at Edward's ferry, and its advance had reached Frederick City, Maryland. He sent the scout to General Lee, by a staff officer, and followed himself soon after.

Longstreet, in one of his contributions to the "Annals of the War," page 419, in speaking of this very man's appearance on the night as stated, says:

tain information, while our army was yet in Culpepper county, Virginia, came to my headquarters at Chambersburg, and reported that the Union army had crossed the Potomac at Edward's Ferry, and his advance was at Frederick City, Maryland."

General Longstreet saw at a glance that the information brought by this scout was of vast importance, and might involve momentous consequences. In this connection, a little further on,

Longstreet says: "We had not heard from the enemy for several days, and General Lee and myself were in doubt as to where he was. Indeed, we did not know that he had yet left Virginia. In the absence of all knowledge of the position of the Federal army, General Lee had issued orders to General Ewell for an attack on Harrisburg, a part of whose corps was, on that very night, Monday, June 29, near the intrenchments, on the west bank of the Susquehanna; but on receiving the information brought by this scout he at once countermanded the order and directed Ewell and all his other generals to concentrate at Gettysburg."

The work of concentration was begun at once. We thus see that the capture of the capital of Pennsylvania was one of the objects contemplated by the commanding general. He knew that no regular or efficient force was there to defend it. And he also knew that the raw militia could effect little or nothing against Ewell's veteran troops. - Southern Bivouac.

White Men at a Discount.

In some respects the natives of India appear to possess a greater aptitude than the European, but it is something new to hear of white men disguising themselves as Hindoos in order to obtain employment. This, however, has actually taken place in Australia. The ship-ments of horses thence to India are large, and Indian Syces are in request for their care upon the voyage. The other day an Australian shipper of horses had been unable to obtain Indian grooms. The horses were on board ship, and the vessel was to sail in two days' time. He was thus delighted to see a boat coming off with two black men. They were brought into the cabin to sign the usual agreement, when it was discovered they were white men, with their faces and hands artistically blackened after the fashion of the negro minstrel. The runner, or man-catcher, thought the ship was just leaving, and that he could run his men through in the hurry. There must be a dearth of employment indeed in Australia when white men are found willing to color their faces in order to obtain situations at the by no means and rate of wages paid to Hindoos. -

For coming wear the hair is dressed in fluffy curls in front, Pompadour style, and the back hair in wavy loops, not too large, but long, ending in two or three graceful curls falling on the neck. Fancy pins in gold and silver, studded with brilliants or Rhine stones, are much used as ornaments.

Feather triaming of all kinds is to be worn, and the odder it is the more fashionable it is. Some which looks like an elongated feather duster is to be worn on wraps. The marabout edge, which was so pretty until it became the possession of every woman, is still made and worn on some expensive dresses and outer Wraps.

The eye is at last relieved from the severity of tailor made suits by the introduction of checked goods and railroad stripes. The stripes are in white on a black, dark brown or blue ground. These are more appropriate of course for young ladies than for older ones. A trimming of galloon is de rigeur on such costumes.

Nothing is truer than that there is nothing new under the sun. Here we are in the latter half of the nineteenth century and we are wearing the self-same styles for evening which were worn in the time of Marie Antoinette. The old brocades, of which tiny bits are extant, are being copied in the looms of Lyons, coloring and design complete.

BLOOD PURIFIERS and "invigorators," "tonics," and "alteratives," have been palmed off upon the people, but, after a brief season of experiment, have disappeared because of their utter worthlessness. Dr. Walker's famous Vinegar BITTERS are not of this class. Many million bottles have been sold, and still does the demand continue to increase.

They are the victims of sleeplessness, of droway days, of apoplectic tendencies, whose blood is set on fire by uric acid. Some day they will reel no more—they will drop dead, just because they haven't the moral courage to defy useless professional attendance, and by use of the wonderful Warner's safe cure neutralize the uric acid in the system and thus get rid of the "drunkenness in the blood."—The American Rural Home.

Making a Bollar.

At the corner of Chestnut and Juniper streets, in Philadelphia, is a square, ugly building with a bed or two of red geraniums in front, and a United States dag flying overhead. In the centre of this building, in an open courtyard, are piled-up crates covered with stout wire net, and guarded by men under arms. These crates contain partially refined silver ore from Colorado, and the value of each is about a thousand dollars, Some thirteen or fourteen thousand pounds of silver is melted every day, and comes out of the grimy smelting-room in glittering ingots. These long bars are held each in turn under the topping machine, which is a heavy steel shaft with a knife edge that smooths off the ends of the metal bars as easily as if it were paring an apple. The ingots then have the shape, and a good deal the appearance, of a bar of white cream candy in the confectioners' jars. Each one is next put under rollers, like dough, and fiattened out to the thickness of a dol-The precious dough is then heated and handed over to a gigantic cook made of revolving wheels and steel bars, who swiftly cuts it into tiny biscuit, two hundred and fifty in the minute. These little cakes are seized by another machine which mills the edges, and then pass into a trough filled with acid to wash them, and from that to a revolving tub of sawdust. They are now smooth, bright discs of silver with milled edges. The press which makes them into coins is like a monstrous dumb, intelligent creature. It is waited on by a pretty young girl who drops the discs into a long tube, from which this dumb monster (who seems to be thinking of something greater than its work) picks each one out with its claw-like fingers, places it between its lips, on one of which is a head of Liberty, and the other an eagle. The mouth shuts on it with terrific force, and spits it forth, a dollar.

Each dollar is weighed, and if too light or too heavy, is rejected, and sent back to the melting furnace.

The government is a thrifty manufacturer; the fragments, we may be sure, are carefully gathered up, that nothing is lost. The pieces out of which the coins are cut, and the silver fillings from the milling machine, all go back, of course, to be melted over. The floors and walls of the mint are covered with iron grating, through which the scrapings and precious dust sift. These amount in value to thirty or forty thousand dollars a year. At certain intervals the grating itself is melted down, and yields its prey of the precious metal .- Youth's Com-

Disagreeable---Dangerous

Catarrh is an exceedingly disagreeable disease, its varied symptoms—discharge at the nose, bad breath, pain between the eyes, coughing, choking sensation, ringing noises in the ears, &c.—being not only troublesome to the sufferer but offensive to others. Catarrh is also dangerous, because it may lead to bronchills or consumption. Being a blood disease the true method to cure is to purify the blood. To purify the blood take Hood's Sarsaparilla, by which many sufferers from catarrh have been cured.

"I suffered three years from catarrh, and my general health was poor in consequence. When I took Hood's Sarsaparilla I found I had the right remedy. The catairth is yielding, as Hood's Sarsaparilla is cleansing my blood, and the general tone of my system is improving. My case is of such long standing that I did not expect to be cured in an instant."-

FRANK WASHBURN, Rochester, N. Y.

"I suffered with catarth fifteen years; tried all the catarth remedies without benefit, and was about to try a change of climate when I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I would not take any money consideration for the good one bottle did me. Now I am not troubled any with catarth."—I. W. Lalles, Chicago, Ili.
