A KENTUCKY COURT SCENE. HOW A LOUISVILLE JUDGE PRE SIDED IN A LAWLESS REGION.

Eringing in a Non Complying Witness on a Litter-Where Nerve Carried the Day.

Chicago Herald, says: The chief trouble attending the conviction of the desperadoes whose acts of violence in somesections of Kentucky have for years produced a reign of terror, and a cause which is not understood by those who only read accounts of the crimes committed, has been the failure on the part of the prosecuting attorneys and criminal judges to do their duty. This failure is to be attributed to what may best be called "local influences," If a judge belongs to one faction, or owes his election to a particular party, his opponents at once declare their inability to receive fair treatment at his bands, and will fight rather than be tried. In one of the counties where scores had been killed who betonged to opposing factions, and where houses were barricaded, the law abandoned, where women and children were armed, and the extermination of the entire population a matter of early possibility, the governor requested Judge William L. Jackson, of the Louisville Circuit, to hold court. Nobody thought the Louisville judge would comply, but in this they were mistaken, for he proceeded forthwith to the scene of bloodshed, quietly announced his presence and made known his mission. These facts excited the greatest curiosity throughout the county, and when the day of trial came on the whole populace appeared in the court house with but little exception. The first case, one of murder, was called, All the witnesses responded to their names save one. "We must have that witness, Mr. Sheriff," said the court, firmly. "If your honor pleases I can't get him," said the county sheriff.

"That's no excuse, sir; have him here without fail in four hours. Let the court atand adjourned until 2 o'clock." And as Judge Jackson finished speaking he arose from the bench with dignified ease, calmly put on his hat and walked from the court room alone, to the great astonishment of the natives, whose regular judge would have remained until perfeetly satisfied that no enemy was near. At 2 o clock court again convened. The bawl of the sheriff, "Oh yes, oh yes, court is now open," had scarce died out before Jackson asked sternly: "Mr. Sheriff, have you brought that witness in court?

The sheriff, answering in the negative, gave as his reason for failure to obey the court that he found the house of the witness barricaded and full of armed mountaineers, who swore they would kill any man who attempted to "Mr. Sheriff," said the court, very sharply, "such an excuse is not to be thought of, and will not be entertained. I want the witness here at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, if you have to bring him on a litter. Mark you, sir, a failure to comply on your part will compel this court to fine and imprison you to the full extent of the law. Do your duty, sir."

To say that the natives were astonished does not convey the slightest idea of their true feelings. All that afternoon and next morning there was a universal desire to see the "city Jedge close," and the fellow who got to shake hands with him had all the free drinks

Court opened promptly at 10 o'clock. "Mr. Sheriff, have you that witness?" asked the court. "Yes, your honor," spoke the sheriff, excitedly; "he's coming." A curious sight presented itself now. Half a dozen stalwart men appeared carrying another, who was the missing witness. One arm hung limp at his side, a leg refused to do its duty, blood trick-led from all over his head, and an immense bandage concealed one eye. "Stand up, sir," spoke the court, and, with the aid of his captors, the fellow assumed as fair an upright position as his wounds would permit.

"What do you mean by evading the law?" asked the judge. "I didn't know it was your court, sir.

I thought they wanted to take me to Louisville for moonshining. I knew as how there were deputy marshals about,

The clerk said there were and that they had warrants for the civil witness, whereupon he directed the sheriff to bring every one of them into court, an soon complied with. United States marshals faced the court. "Gentlemen," began the judge, "have you warrants for any of these witnesses? "Yes, sir, for nearly all of them, and four for this chap," answered a marshal, indicating the wounded man, "Well, gentlemen, I am holding court here now, and if you interfere with me in any manner whatever. I'll put you all in jail for a year-every one of you. Let this case begin."

The trial proceeded, and more convictions followed than had happened pre-viously in the whole life of the county of Breathitt, which is now one of the best in Kentucky and where capital is now finding the richest cannel coal in the world. England not excepted.

Judge Jackson recently went to Letcher county at Governor Knott's request. "Will you need a hundred men?" asked a local friend of justice who well knew the desperate affairs which had marked every previous trial of the ac-

"No," thundered the Judge. "this court is equal to a hundred men itself." This remark went the rounds like wildfire, and during the long trials which followed enabled the court to conduct its business without the slight-

As has been maintained by the Times, in dealing with Kentucky feads the only thing necessary to make peaceable and good citizens out of the lawless men of the mountains of Kentucky has been the need of men like Judge Jackson, whose nerve and firmness find respect as quickly with desperadoes as with pesceable citizens. Governor Knott expressed himself as much pleased with the manner in which Judge Jackson has conducted court in the mountains. "I would rather send him to try these lawless pco-

No article of common food has been more abused than the humble potato. Yet no other vegetable is capable of being put to so many uses. It is the A recent letter from Louisville to the rival of bread, and shares with it the honor of always being found in its place on our tables. Everybedy, except some dyspeptics, can eat potatoes, but it is not every one who knows the best way of eating them or of cooking them, A baked potato is always nutritious. Boiled potatoes are searcely worth their salt if they are left to soak in the kettle, Mashed potatoes are good if served with milk, pepper and salt. Fried potatoes, sliced and fried in fat or butter, are palatable, but much harder to digest than baked ones. The popular 'Saratoga chips' do not retain the distinctive potato flavor, and have lost most | plains. of its nutriment.

The most easy and effectual way to secure the genuine flavor of the potato is to cook it according to this rule:

Pare the potato and slice it up, but not too thin; place the slices in a large pie-dish, as if you were to make an apple pie; pour into the dish a very little water, drop a few slices of butter upon the potatoes, sprinkle them with salt and pepper, cover the whole with another late and set the dish in a hot oven. Twenty minutes' time is sufficient for the baking. The writer has tried this rule and always with success. The potatoes have a distinctive flavor to be gained by no other method of cooking.

The history of the potato exhibits the strength of prejudice and the case with which a trifling circumstance will often remove it. The introduction of the potato into the gardens and on to the tables of the people of Europe encountered for more than two centuries, such opposition that the philosophers of the age were powerless to persuade the people to use the tuber.

Louis XV, of France one day wore a bunch of potato flowers at a court festival. Then the people obsequiously acknowledged that the potato might be useful, and in a few years its cultivation as an article of food became universal.

The potato's stalk produces in Austria a cottony flax. In Sweden sugar is extracted from its roots. By combustion it yields a quantity of potssh. Its apples, when ripe, ferment and yield vinegar by exposure, or spirit by distillation. Its tubercles made into a pulp re used as a substitute for soap in bleaching. By different manipulations it is made to furnish two kinds of flour, a gruel, and a cellular pith which in times of scarcity may be made into bread or applied to increase the bulk of bread made from grain. Its starch is little, if at all, inferior to the Indian arrowroot.

The potato is a native of South America; but the cultivated plant yields a product infinitely superior in quantity and quality to its wild brother. the sentences in a Dakota orator's speech eulogized the potato. He said:

"Very often an entire family in Dakota sits upon one end of a potato while the other end is roasting in the

An Expensive Chronometer.

The following anecdute is very characteristic: One of Astor's best captains had made six voyages to China without a chronometer, but just before sailing on his seventh voyage he suggested to Mr. Astor that it would be safer to have one. "Get one," said the millionaire.

The captain did so, and entered its cost on the account current. When Astor's eye fell upon the item he drew his pen through it. The captain ex-

"Deuce take it, man," said Astor, "I told you to get one, but I did not say I would pay for it."

The old seaman left Mr. Astor's employment at once and went down-town, and before night was in command of as fine a ship as ever floated. In three days he set sail. At the same time Astor's ship, under a new commander, also set sail. The voyage to Hong Kong was very close, but the captain who, as he used to say, had 'discharged John Jacob Astor," by keeping the men at the "Mr. Clerk," said the judge, "are braces, took advantage of every breath there any United States marshals in this of wind and won by three days. The ship was loaded in the shortest possible time, and before Astor's vessel, which had arrived in the mean time, was half loaded our captain weighed anchor, and with a full cargo of tea sailed for New York. He arrived in good time and hoisted out the cargo, which was sold at auction on the spot. The market was thereby overstocked, and when Astor's ship arrived the price had fallen. Some time afterward, as the captain was walk ing down Broadway, he met Mr. Astor. 'How much did that chronometer cost you?" the latter asked. "Six hundred dollars." "Well," said Astor, "that was cheap;

it cost me $60,000." Mr. Astor was actively engaged in business for over forty years. he retired with a fortune of $20,000,000, which in the next eighteen years doubled itself by the simple process of compound interest. Mr. Astok's last years were passed at his town residence, on Broad-way, opposite Niblo's Garden. Towards the close of his life his body became feeble, but his mind retained much of its original vigor. On the 29th of March, 1838, he died, in the 85th year of his age. The bulk of his fortune was left to favorite child, William B. Astor, who was already worth four millions. More than half a million was left for benevolent purposes. Besides $400,000 to the library, $50,000 were left to the poor of his native village in Germany, $30,000 to the German Society of New York, 30,000 to the Home for Aged Ladies, $5,000 to the German Orphan Asylum,

Fifty-Two Children in Nineteen Years

The most extraordinary case of fecundity that I ever heard of came to my knowledge last week, says a Naples (Italy) letter to the Paris Register. About twenty-five miles from here, and by rail two or three stations beyond Pompeli, is the historical city of Nocera (the Nucera of the ancients). In the rione, or ward, of Liposta lives Maddalena Granata, aged forty-seven, who was married at the age of twenty-eight to a peasant, just nineteen years ago. Maddaiena Granata has given birth to, either dead or living, fifty-two children, forty-nine of whom were males. She enjoys florid health, is robust, and twenty-four hours after her last accouchement was ready to go out to her accustomed labor in the field. She has no hesitancy in conversing with any one about her extraordinary prolificness. Her physician, Rr. Raphael de Sanctis, of Nocera, says that there is not the least exaggeration in these statements. Has any one ever heard of such phenomenal fecundity in the whole history of ma-ternity-fifty-two children, alive or dead, in ninctoen years! She has had triplets fifteen times.

The New York World says a child in that city was poisoned by a cough syrup containing morphia or opium. There is no such danger in Red Star Cough Cure It is purely vegetable, prompt, safe and sure. Twenty-five cents.

Something About Bracelets,

Bracelets have at all times been much in use among barbaric nations, and the women frequently wear several on the same arm. The finer kinds are of mother of pearl, fine gold or silver; others of less value are made of plated steel, horn, brass, copper, beads, etc. This species of personal ornament was exceedingly common in Europe in prehistoric times. The bracelets of the Bronze Age were either of gold or bronze, allver being then unknown. In shape they were oval and penannular with expanding or trumpet shaped ends, having an opening between them of about half an inch to enable them to be easily slipped over the wrist. Those of gold were generally plain, hammered rods, bent to the requisite shape, but those of bronze were often chased with elegant designs, showing a cultivated taste Some forms of spiral armlets of bronze, peculiar to Germany and Scandinavia, covered the whole forearm, and were doubtles intended as much for defence against a sword stroke as for ornament. The Etruscan and early Roman forms of bronze bracelets were for the most part cylindrical, with overlapping ends, or spiral or serpent-shaped. There were also the common forms in the Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life. In this vicinity all know L. L. WRIPPLE, Druggist, Kintner, Mich., March 4, 1885. Iron Age of Northern Europe, while silver bracelets of great elegance, formed of plated and intertwisted strands of silverware, and plain penannular hoops, round or lozengeshaped in section and tapering to the extremities, became common towards the close of the pagan period. In the Middle Ages bracelets were much less commonly used in Europe, but the custom has continued to prevail among Eastern nations at the present time.
