ALEX SWEET WRITES AN OPEN LETTER TO GEORGE W. PECK.

Why the "Siftings" Man Would Dearly Like to Meet the "Bad Boy" Humorist.

Alex Sweet, editor of Texas Siftings, publishes in his paper the following letter to George W. Peck, of the Milwaukee Sun and "Bad Boy" notoriety:

MY DEAR PECK: While you were in New York a couple of weeks ago you called at the office of Texas Siftings, but I did not get to see you, as I was not in at the time, but I found your card on my return. I mean on my desk, where you left it when you, yourself, left. In justice to you I will also state that I did not miss anything out of the office. It seems you did not improve your opportu-

I was very sorry that I did not get to see you, for I wanted to thank you personally for a favor you did me about eight years ago, when I was on the editorial staff of the Galveston Notes.

There are some doubt among the people of Texas as to my veracity. Some few people intimated that I didn't have any at all, but the general opinion was that I could tell the truth if it was to my interest to do so, and I made an earnest effort. Just at this crisis I received the following letter from you, which I published for my own vindication. After requesting in the letter the temporary loan of ninety cents, to enable you to purchase a pair of new pants, you went on to say in your letter:

"I have never in my wildest dreams thought of competing with the Sifter as a truth crusher. I am an ordinary Wisconsin liar. I have never had the advantages you possess. My surroundings are not good for the development of genius in lying, as the community in which I reside is pious, and I have no competition. No person can succeed unless he has some competition to bring out the talent that lies hidden in him. Now, it is different down in Texas. You, although you may be the champion, are not the only liar there. You have competitors. Every man you meet has some claim to prominence, and your talent is constantly being burnished. I would be only a nine-spot in Texas. I was there in 1866, and I know what I am talking

I fully appreciated this compliment, From that time on my status as a truth wrencher was fixed. Everybody in Texas had heard of Peck and his endorsement was all that was needed to be regarded as a talented journalist.

I have often longed for the opportunity to take you by the hand and thank you, and ask you when you were going to pay back the ninety cents I sent you. This is why I am sorry I was not in when you called the other day. However, you can remit either by postal note or check or both, if you see proper.

I have to express my obligations to you for another favor.

A few days ago, while putting on my new sixty-dollar overcoat, a disagrecable odor assailed my nose. I noticed it even after I got into the street. On meeting me, people would gasp, hold their noses. and cross over to the other side of the street. Several dray horses shied and a mule fainted. When I entered the office of Texas Siftings everybody present snorted, and looked at me pretty much as a Texas pony does when it hears a brass band for the first time. There was a vociferous smell in the office strong enough to drive a dog out of a slaughter house.

I received several kindly suggestions gentleman who was about to sign a $2,000 advertising contract, dropped the pen and fled in wild dismay. He has never come back. I think he has left New York for his health. We have lost $2,000

Owing to the warm air in the office I reached into my pocket to get my hand- but it certainly disarms it. kerchief to fan myself with it. When I pulled out my hand there was adhering to it a sticky mass which said "Limberger" very plainly. It spoke right out.

How do you suppose that Limberger got into my pocket? You don't know, eh? Well, let me tell you. I have a boy at home of about rine years of age. late he has been reading a book called "Peck's Bad Boy." Ever hear of it? My boy, Norman, got that Limberger suggestion out of that book. He it was who put that old cheese in my pocket. He said that was what Peck's Bad Boy did Well, he don't read that book any

He can't read even his Sundayschool book now without lying on his abdomen to do so. I don't feel safe for my life unless I know that boy is at school or asleep. If you read of my falling down the stairs and breaking my neck in consequence of the steps being lubricated, or if I come to any other sudden and mysterious end, you may close your eyes at night with the consciousness of knowing that the diabolical suggestion that shoved me into the tomb originated in that infernal book of yours.

When you send me that ninety cents, include in it the $2,000 ad. we lost through the Limberger cheese.

I'd like to known when you are coming to New York again. I want to meet you at the depot when the train comes in. You will be able to identify me by a large club which I shall wear in my right hand. How the coroner will be able to identify you after I get through with you is not very plain.

Oh, come to the hower I've shaded for you, And I'll make an effort to be there too.

Your true friend and future benefactor, ALEX SWRET.

An interesting experiment has been made in Germany with compressed paper—capable of high polish—as a material for piano-cases. The tone of the instrument is reported to be not loud but very sweet; and, unlike the short broken note of the ordinary piano, the sound is soft, full and slightly continuous, resembling somewhat that of the organ. The modification of tone is ascribed in the evenness of texture of the compressed paper.

The pull stroke of 3,000 years ago is the best for thin and narrow saw blades.

In his new work on anthropology Topinard says that there are only two types the blonde and the dark; that the other so-called types-yellow and red in particular-can only in a very minor deree serve to distinguish races, and that the color as a rule is an uncertain character, liable to alter in individuals and difficult to determine and express. As a concession, however, to the general practice, he gives a table of classification of races by their color under the three denominations-white, yellow and black.

In an article on "The Use of Oil at Sea," by Lieutenant John P. Holditch, R. N. R., the author says: "The results I have obtained are these: Fish or colza oil only is of any good; it does not matter how dirty it is as long as it is not thick. Paraffin is too thin; paint oil too thick. Running before a gale naturally expends much more oil than 'laying to, you have so much more water to oil. Carefully expended, one quart in three hours for running and one pint in four hours for laying to will be sufficient, The means I used was a canvas bag (No. with large holes stabbed with a needle. I have heard of a bundle of oakum being saturated with oil and then put in a coarse gunny bag, which I think would admit of a thicker oil being used for the time. The place for towing is undoubtedly forward, not aft. Whether in head-reaching oil could be used successfully I cannot say, but I doubt it. When running dead before the wind, tow er. A from each cathead, and the ship is as safe as anything can be at Lea."

A New Tanning Agent.

The discovery of a safe and efficient tanning agent to take the place satisfactorily of the costly hemlock bark has long been a desideratum, notwithstanding the various substitutes which have been brought forward. Recently considerable has been said of the discovery made some time since by an Arizona tanner of a plant which carries a large proportion of tannin, and which, when used in the manufacture of leather, is found to give extra weight to the article produced. This plant is of annual growth, indigen-This plant is of annual growth, indigenous to the deserts and dry uplands, and is known as gonagra. It has a root somewhat longer and more scraggy than the cultivated beet, though resembling it in appearance, and practical use has demonstrated its tannin properties to be about three times as great as the ordinary oak bark, and that in all essentials it is superior to such bark in the manufacture of leather. It has now been in use for of leather. It has now been in use for this purpose a considerable time, proving beyond question its superior adaptedness, while in respect to cost, as compared with bark, it has immense advantage over the latter. #### "Snickersnee."

The allusion to his "snickersnee" made in Ko-Ko's song in the "Mikado," when he tells how artistically he performed an execution, puzzles many people. The majority, no doubt, think the word is merely a fanciful one introduced by the author to designate a Japanese sword, but this is not the case. In Washington Irving's "Knickerbocker History of New York" it is related how, when stout Peter Stuyvesant assembled the train bands, they came in motley array, bringing with them all sorts of firearms, and bearing also "swords, hatchets, snickersnees and crowbars." The dictionary says that "snick" means a cut, and that "snee" is a contraction of a Dutch word meaning practically the same thing. "Snick and snee" is defined as a combat with knives. A "snickersnee" is really a kind of sword. -- Chicago Tribune.

The following story which is attracting wide The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press—is so remarkable that we cannot excuse ourselves if we do not lay it before our readers entire:

To the Editor of the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat.
Six:—On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only know the across of the second of knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet if a few years pre-vious any one had told me that I was to be vious any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I abouid have scoffed at the idea. I have always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 2M pounds, and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I telt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken a rold which would soon pass away. Shortly after which would soon pass away. Shortly arrest this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic pain in one side of my head, but as if would come one day and be gone the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would be a soon of the party of the next get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and acum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

I consulted the best madical will in the lead

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physiciam agreed as to my malady. One said I was treather than the contract of the contra troubled with spinal irritation, another, dyspensia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common eases, the symptoms of many of which i really had. In this way several years passed during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become piti-able. The slight symptoms I at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stamach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was un-controllable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet, and prayed for death! Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs con-stantily! My water was filled with tube-casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages. While suffering thus I received a call from my postor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city, I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation for Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observa-tion. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any mediof the schools, I derided the idea of any medi-cine outside the regular channels being in the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to directions. At first if sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debili-tated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than for merly. I was so rejoiced at this improved con dition that, upon what I believed but a few days before was my dying hed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an op-portunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that row. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 38 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition whelly to Warner's safe cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, that I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to verify it fully. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in symptoms of nearly every other common com-plaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Pheamatism," "Pneumonia," and the other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steams into the system like a thier manifests its presence if at all by the common est symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings doath suddenly, from convulsions, apoplexy or heart

As one who has suffered, and knows by hitter experience what he says, I implore every one who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances.

I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all the professional and personal con-J.
