DEFRAUDING THE CUSTOMS.

PEOPLE OF SOCIAL STANDING WHO SMUGGLE DUTIABLE GOODS.

An Ex-Inspector Narrates some Queer Experiences—The Use to Which a Pug was Put.

"A vast amount of smuggling goes on at this port every day," said an ex-inspector of customs, "and you'd be astonished if I were to tell you the names of the people who attempt to bring in dutiable goods without paying the charges. As inspector has many queer experiences. I have known men who are wealthy and would scorn to do an act that they considered dishonorable attempt to evade the customs duties on articles which they knew were dutiable. The professional smuggler is easily detected, and it is not often that one successfully evades the inspector's scrutiny. The smuggling is done by people that you would least expect to do that sort of thing. One case in particular I call to mind.

"A gentleman well known in social and financial circles arrived here on one of the American line steamers. He cheerfully consented to the examination of his baggage by the inspectors, and was willing to pay the charges on everything that we pronounced dutiable. He walked about while we were inspecting his baggage and freely gave up his keys. He had strapped over his shoulders a small Russian leather bag, and, after we had passed on his trunks, I requested permission to look through this bag. He flushed scarlet and explained that it only contained toilet articles. I suspected that there was something else in the bag and he reluctantly allowed me to examine it. There were toilet articles in it, it is true, but it also contained a package of jewelry, principally diamonds, which the appraiser valued at $12,000. The gentleman excused himself by saying that he did not know that articles intended for personal use were dutiable, but I know that this was all gammon. These cases are never heard of, because when detected the amateur smuggler always pays up.

"Ladies of the highest social position make continental trips and return loaded down with dutiable goods, which they successfully smuggle ashore. They don't consider it any disgrace to evade the customs—in fact, they rather pride themselves on their cunning. They wrap expensive laces about their forms, secrete diamonds in their pockets, the hems of their dresses and even in the heels of their shoes and tell the barefaced falsehoods unblushingly to evade paying the customs dues. We can't search them because of their high social position, but we know that they are smugglers.

"A young lady whose father is one of the wealthy men of the city, went abroad last summer in company with two relatives. They sailed from this port and returned hither. They allowed their general baggage to be inspected without protest. The young lady carried a diminutive pug dog in her arms. The animal was particularly ill-natured and vicious, but the young lady appeared to be very fond of the brute and carried him in her arms all the time. He wore a blanket and had a collar around his neck.

"I got close enough to see that the blanket was a mass of expensive lace tacked on to the blanket, to enable her to evade duty on it, and that the collar was literally studded with diamonds. What could we do? If we had held the dog there would have been a great howl over the indignity, and the girl's father had influence enough to have us all discharged. We consequently allowed the $10 pug, with his $2,000 blanket and his $10,000 collar, to pass free of duty. Ladies and gentlemen of wealth, refinement and high social position do not scruple to evade the customs. They have trunks made with false bottoms, and in the receptacles thus provided bring in hundreds of dollars' worth of dutiable articles.

"All the sailors smuggle. They secrete goods all over the ship and derive a profitable trade by bringing in dutiable goods without submitting them to the appraiser. False lockers are made in the cabins and a thousand odd nooks and corners on a ship are utilized to conceal smuggled goods. They do not attempt to remove these while the vessel is discharging her cargo, because a great majority of the inspectors are vigilant and honest and the goods would be apt to be confiscated. They wait until the cargo is discharged, and after the inspector has gone over the vessel and certified that no dutiable goods remain on her they bring out their hidden treasures and carry them ashore. All sorts of goods are smuggled, and there are lots of common sailors who are in league with professional smugglers and bring in contraband goods on every trip.

"Occasionally goods are smuggled in through the connivance of a dishonest inspector, but these cases are rare, for the majority of the customs officers are honest and incorruptible. I have no means of estimating just how much dutiable goods annually escape appraisement at this port, but I should judge it was several hundred thousands of dollars' worth. Very often smuggling is done unconsciously. Men and women buy presents for their relatives and friends abroad and bring them safely through the customs under the apprehension that they are not dutiable because they are not intended to be sold. A man, for instance, will make a hurried business trip to England and will bring home a cousin of thousand dollars' worth of presents for his family and friends. We know him to be a man of high character and don't subject his baggage to rigid scrutiny. He assures us that his trunks contain nothing dutiable and we pass them without examination. His honesty means what he says, but the government is cheated out of its dues all the same."—Brooklyn Chron.

A storehouse belonging to the Mohave Indians, situated on the bank of the Colorado river, opposite Fort Mohave, Arizona Territory, fell recently, killing one Indian and severely wounding two others. The accident was caused by piling several tons of mesquite beans and corn on the roof. The Indian who was killed was immediately placed on a couple of canes of wood and burned to ashes, after which the Indians proceeded to burn everything belonging to him, and he will be buried and have a big feast.

Learning Law by Experience.

In removing a piano from the college, just before Christmas, the legs were not removed, and in coming down College Hill it fell off the wagon and was badly damaged. Professor Dunbar says he did not know the legs would come off. His ignorance cost him $40. Ben Walton says that the episode reminds him of a case at the last term of our superior court, where a party was convicted of shooting off a gun on the public highway between sundown and sunrise—a new law. "Have you any reason why sentence should not be passed?" asked Judge Willis, as the prisoner stood up.

"Judge, I didn't know it was against the law."

"You are fined $50 and costs," interrupted the court.

"I know it now," inquiringly remarked the culprit.—Hemphis (Ga.) Journal.

Catching Wild Geese With Opium.

Widespread Commotion Caused by the Terrible Confession of a Physician.

The story published in these columns recently, from the Rochester, N. Y. Democrat and Chronicle, creates a deal of comment here as it has elsewhere. Apparently it caused even more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well-known not only in Rochester but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper a few days ago which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal inquiries which have been received at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed necessary.

With this end in view a representative of the paper called on Dr. Henion, at his residence on Andrews street, when the following interview occurred: "That article of yours, doctor, has created quite a sensation. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued, such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. I was brought so low by collecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches, but used most of the time, could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull pains and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious. The medical profession has been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of kidney disease more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"Then, then, is what you meant when you said that more than one-half of the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it, doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of diseases are terrifying people to-day, which in reality are Bright's disease in some of its many forms. It is a hydra-headed monster, and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints, which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter, and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also."

Mr. Warner, who was visited at his establishment on North St. Paul street, spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease had increased wonderfully, and we find by reliable statistics that from '70 to '80 its growth was over 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off, and is taking off every year, for while many are dying apparently of paralysis and apoplexy, they are really victims of kidney disease, which causes heart disease, paralysis, apoplexy, etc. Nearly every week the papers record the death of some prominent man from this scourge. Recently, however, the increase has been checked and I attribute this to the general use of my remedy."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it?"

"A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the same test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—the color and command left him and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery. I have Bright's disease of the kidneys.' And in less than a year he was dead. The slightest indications of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes. I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful, is it not?"

"No more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured?"

"Unquestionably. I know it from my own and the experience of thousands of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience; what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope, and so did the doctors. I have often remarked that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day saying: 'There goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I honestly state words would have proved true if I had not providentially used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Cure."

"But you made a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, doctor?" was asked Dr. S. A. Lattimore, one of the analysts of the State Board of Health.

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner would recover?"

"No, sir. I did not think it possible."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"I have chemically analyzed it and found it pure and harmless."

Dr. Henion was cured five years ago and is well and attending to the professional duties of his office. The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question, and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. Dr. Henion's experience shows that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, but it is exceedingly certain, and can be cured if taken in time.

An English statistician shows that since the wars among the civilized nations have ceased the death rate has increased. A large majority of these deaths have resulted from wounds, inevitably unfollowed, the number actually killed on the field being comparatively small. The bloodiest battle in the period named was Sebastopol, where 250,000 men were engaged, and 80,000 were killed and wounded.

A Brave Bride.

When the Apaches attacked the Black Rock ranche of William Johnson, a week ago last Sunday, only Johnson and his young bride were on the premises. They took refuge in a chicken house, from which the fight was kept up for an hour, the husband doing the shooting and the wife loading the guns. Johnson was shot through the body and thigh and had one arm broken. When the red fiends drew up the fight and left, Mrs. Johnson hitched up a team, placed her wounded husband in the wagon, and drove twenty miles to Fort Thomas.—New Mexico Paper.

A remarkable importation at Victoria, B. C., lately was 600 pounds of shavings, all the way from New Jersey. The apparent incongruity of such an importation into a country full of saw mills is explained by the fact that the shavings are of red birch, to be used in the manufacture of vinegar.

There is a family of twenty-three persons at Adams, Mass. Of the twenty-nine children the oldest is said to be only twelve years old.

The Professor

Of an Academy in Vermont was cured of catarrh by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and writes the following interesting statement:

"I cheerfully give my experience in the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had been troubled with catarrh to some extent for a long time, and had used various medicines with no good results, when I was so affected that speech was somewhat difficult, and my voice was entirely unnatural. I then began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy, and with such good effect that in a few weeks speech was easy, the voice natural, and my general health was much improved. Sometimes a return of the disease is induced by taking cold, when I resort at once to the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I keep by me constantly, and always find relief. I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as an invaluable remedy for catarrh, and judging by its effects upon myself I cannot say too much in its praise."—J. S. CILLEY, Bethlehem, Vt.
