

A HUMORIST ON HOTELS.

BILL NYE GIVES HIS VIEWS ON HOTEL ETIQUETTE.

Touching Remembrance by the Calm Water—Contrast Between New York and Glendive, Montana.

Etiquette at hotels is a subject that has been but lightly treated upon by our modern philosophy, and yet it is a subject that lies very near to every American heart.

The hotel waiter alone would well repay a close study. From the tardy and polished loiterer of the effete East to that offhand and social equal of the budding West, all waiters are deserving of philosophical scrutiny.

The Bristol sisters have a very fine florist's business in Topeka, Kansas. Fringes in all colors are formed of twisted strands of very narrow fringe.

Ivory-white vests are worn with velvet, silk and fine wool basques of dark colors. Mohair trimmings have dots of tinsel through the centre, and are edged with tinsel.

An English writer of fashion gossip says that women are nowadays expected to dress to match their china.

Mrs. General Sheridan is very punctilious about returning calls. She devotes a portion of each day to this purpose.

High-post bedsteads with white muslin curtains, all of the olden time, are being revived in all their imposing stateliness.

At a Baltimore charity ball one lady wore a necklace, bracelets and fan chain composed of $2.50, $5, $10 and $20 gold pieces.

Considering the fact that all brides are beautiful, a curious inquirer wants to know where all the plain married women come from.

"Beauty spots" are now painted with India ink on the girl of the period's face, and she thinks it a great deal better than court plaster.

Bismarck's wife is described as a tall, aristocratic looking woman with decided but pleasing features and of elegant but simple taste in dress.

All sorts of odd and curious dress fads are carried by the fashionable women this season, some of which are apparently purely ornamental.

"Box robes" of satin, with broad and narrow embroidery, are of reddish blue with red embroidery, green with ecru, and tan with white needlework.

A cynic remarks that a Philadelphia woman wears a bustle so large that when she is crossing the street she is on one side before the bustle is half way over.

A French woman confesses to having attended 722 balls in the effort to catch a husband, and only having caught instead bronchitis fourteen times, pleurisy thrice and 120 colds in the head.

Push bodices over skirts of a different material and texture, and in some brilliant color that harmonizes with the skirt of embroidered or beaded tulle and lace, form charming toilets for the evening.

Ondine is a new cotton fabric of soft open weave closely resembling nun's veiling. It is as thin as grenadine and is to be had in all colors, with conventionalized figures, hieroglyphics and stripes.

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN.

Paris has eighteen practicing female physicians.

Fine shepherd's plaid is embroidered with black.

Black hosiery is worn by men, women and children.

Fussy, superfluous trimmings are going out of favor.

Scarfs of fine white lawn are again fashionably worn.

Open-worked silk stockings come to match ball toilets.

Wool canvass with satin stripes is shown in all colors.

Rich oriental embroidery is used for vests for silk dresses.

Ruchings of embroidered crepe are in all the evening colors.

"All over" embroideries are now made wide enough for skirts.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dickinson is a successful jeweler of Hartford, Conn.

The Bristol sisters have a very fine florist's business in Topeka, Kansas.

Frings in all colors are formed of twisted strands of very narrow fringe.

Ivory-white vests are worn with velvet, silk and fine wool basques of dark colors.

A small bonnet of princess shape has a crown of poppy-red plush. The coronet brim is covered with black astrakhan. A bow of black velvet ribbon arranged on top forms the only trimming. The strings are of black velvet.

There need be no further concern in the mind of the swain who would purchase a ring for his sweetheart, now that adjustable rings have come. Almost any size finger can be accommodated, unless the damsel come from St. Louis.

Queen Victoria's birthday present to the Crown Princess of Germany was a "full dress" carriage, the interior of which is lined with blue silk damask, trimmed with gold fringe and tassels. The outside is of claret color, with lines of crimson, and all the mountings are of brass. On the doors and panels the English and Prussian arms are emblazoned in relief.

Children's hair is rarely allowed to hang loosely, but is braided, and for growing girls is either tied with a ribbon a few inches from the ends and allowed to hang loosely below the tie, or has the end of the braid turned up to the head and tied there with a ribbon. The front hair is waved or brushed back plainly. A few straight bangs are seen, but they are not considered at all stylish.

A charming wedding dress has the bodice and train of white and silver brocade. The petticoat is of white satin, the front being covered with soft lace dotted with tassels of crystal beads. The lace is arranged in full folds caught together in groups. The front of the bodice is also veiled with folds of the beaded lace, held at the waist by a strap of white-satin. One side of the skirt is trimmed with a garland of orange blossoms.

Distinguishing a Bird's Notes.

The invalid son of a prominent physician up town has several canaries and mocking birds as well as pigeons, which he has studied so thoroughly that he claims to be able to understand all their different calls and notes, and by imitations to hold intelligent communication with his feathered pets. It would really seem as if these birds have a language of their own, for as he proved they have a different note or call for every condition or wish which on attention is recognizable.

A canary was taken into an adjoining room and put in a cage, and in response to several peculiar notes of the lad's, gave others that enabled him at once to exclaim: "It is in a cage and cannot come to me!" Immediately released the bird uttered several notes, and the lad exclaimed: "It is free and will come to me if I want him!" A bird in the yard below gave several shrill notes, and the lad said: "He is pecking at something which he cannot get." Glancing out the window in the yard it was discovered that the bird was trying to pick some seed that had become imbedded in some vane.

It did not—New York Star.

Pursued by an Avalanche.

Two sturdy miners started to ascend one of our neighboring mountains with the intention of working a claim that lay near its crest. They made the trip on Norwegian snow-shoes, on which they worked their way up a narrow gulch leading to their property. As they journeyed on, one of them got to be some two hundred yards in advance of the other, and it was while this distance separated them that the leader by an unhappy step overturned a top-heavy mass of snow and started a dreadful slide. He seized hold of a convenient tree and called to his companion to "look out!" The tree was small and bent over under the weight of moving snow. He let go and started with the snow. The long shoes by this time were firmly anchored in the moving mass, and he was hurried along with no power to stop himself by seizing the trees which he passed. Fortunately, he was on the tail end of the avalanche, and thus rode it in safety, with nothing coming behind to cover him up.

When he found he had thus to be an unwilling passenger upon the terrible train he looked ahead to see what had become of his partner. The latter, seeing that there was no escape on either side, turned heels to the roaring mass and started on a life-and-death run right down the gulch. Then followed a wild and thrilling chase. The man who was anchored on top of the snow yelled at the man in front to run, while he who was pursued strained every muscle to keep out of the jaws of the death that was close at his heels. The sight would have been amusing if it had not been of such a serious nature. The race was kept up for more than a mile, and during the entire distance the fellow who was on top kept yelling, "Run, run," and the hair of the fellow who was running held his hat poised four inches from his head while he headed for the valley. Often the rolling snow struck the heels of his shoes but it did not quite get him. More quickly than it takes to tell it the hunted man dashed out into the valley, and what he thought was safety. The valley, however, was more dangerous than the mountain, as an unseen gulch crossed it, into which the hunted man fell. Providence, though, was kind to him, for the slide had spent its force, and the snow piled up on the bank over which he had fallen.

When the two were able to look around one was lying at the bottom of the gulch, while the other was seated upon the crest of the snow bank that looked over its edge.—Apex (Col.) Times.

A Curious Climate.

One of the most curious results of my observation is that the climate of Dar-malard possesses what we might call an antiseptic character for several months of every year. The quality is an attendant of the long annual drouth. Every living thing suffers during that period from the excessive heat, and much comfort is impossible, even in the shade, while in places exposed to the warm winds the thermometer has risen to 120 degrees; and the sand, unmoistened for six months, becomes so hot that I have seen eggs hardened in it. This arid heat is opposed to the propagation of ferment, for it dries up everything that is exposed to the wind before it has time to sour. No manifestations of tuberculosis are known. Wounds of every kind heal remarkably quickly and well, without enough suppuration taking place to make the bandages stick. The manner in which large, neglected wounds heal of themselves would form an interesting study for a professional surgeon. I observed a case of a Herero whose right lower arm had been shattered in battle by a musket ball. The healing process had worked itself out in such a way that the whole lower arm, with all its muscles, had become withered and useless, while the upper bone was whole and covered at its lower end only with the brown skin. All the muscles and ligaments of the elbow joint had vanished, while the shoulder muscles remained, so that the unpleasant spectacle was presented of a man appearing to gesticulate with his bones. A woman lived at our station whose feet had been barbarously cut off in some war several years before, so that her captors might more easily get off the iron ornament which the Herero women wear on their ankles. Although the woman had to be helpless for a long time, her wounds eventually healed up, and now she has been hopping around on her knees for thirty years.—Popular Science Monthly.

SSS. Relieved at Last!

"We know a gentleman in this county who, six months ago, was almost a hopeless cripple from an attack of rheumatism. He could scarcely hobble across the room, used crutches, and said himself that he had little if any hope of ever recovering. We saw him in our town, last week, walking about as lively as any other man, and in the finest health. Upon our inquiry as to what had worked such a wonderful change in his condition he replied that S. S. had cured him. After using a dozen and a half bottles, he has been transformed from a miserable cripple to a happy, healthy man. He is now other than Mr. E. L. Lumbert, 201 Spring Street, New York."
