Meeting of Republican County Committee.

There will be a meeting of the Republican County Committee on Monday evening, May 17, 1886, at 8 o'clock, at the office of the Chairman. Let there be a good attendance of the Committee on said occasion.

S. D. IRWIN, Chairman.

Let us admit that Brother Henry Beecher is right in calling the Democratic party "a double eared ass." Then let the waddling Mugwump—which is an Eastern bird—keep away from the animal's heels.

That money was used in the election of Senator Payne, in Ohio, is daily made more apparent. Senator Kemp's declaration on the floor of the Senate that he was offered enough money to buy a farm if he would vote against Sherman is only one fact that confirms the opinion of all who have given the case any attention.

GEORGE TICHNOR CURTISS is one of the great lawyers, and that is doubtless the reason why Lorenzo Snow hired him to defend him in his appeal to the United States Supreme Court against the judgment of the Territorial court of Utah, in which he was convicted of being seven times too often married. If blue blood is respectable, Snow may have been wise to hire Curtiss, but since he made his plea for Snow it is doubtful whether he will ever rank as so respectable again, at least among the Yankee people.

SENATOR LOGAN must feel himself exceedingly tired when he realizes that he is regarded in the Democratic mind very much as William Lloyd Garrison used to be in the old time, when one who refused to accept the gospel of slavery was held to be the chief of sinners. Up to the time the Rebellion broke out, Mr. Logan was a pro-slavery Democrat, and his conscience had never been aroused to the moral, or rather immoral, features of slavery until the attempt to destroy the Union to conserve it was made.

WITH the sentiment of opposition growing hourly against the Morrison Tariff Bill, it is folly for Democrats to declare the measure a harmless one, and one in the line of tariff revision. It is nothing of the kind, and the men who framed the bill know it. It is an attempt to break up the protective system, and no man in favor of that system can consistently vote for Morrison's bill.

issue is a tariff for revenue only. No Protection, whatever, for American labor or home production. The man who votes for Morrison's bill, be he Democrat or Republican, does so because he is in favor of the British system and because he is willing to hand American labor and American industry over to our rivals. There is no escaping from this, and the people will hold every man accountable for his vote.—Phila. Press.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1, '86. The House was thrown into a wild state of excitement over the personal antagonism between Mr. O'Neil the chairman of the labor committee, and Mr. Foran, who is next on the committee. Mr. O'Neil, in a speech some time ago, spoke very significantly of "some one" who pretended to represent labor organizations on the floor of the House, who wanted to see labor troubles settled by bloodshed. They have been growling at each others heels since then, and it has been generally understood that Mr. Foran would force the fighting on the floor of the House.

When to-day Mr. Foran arose to a question of privilege every body knew what to expect, and the ring was formed about the contestants. The whole House closed in around them. Every seat on the republican side of the House was vacant, and the members had crowded over to the scene of strife. Before Mr. Foran had finished his explanation a point of order was made and he was ruled out to order, upon the grounds that no charge had been made against him affecting his character as a Representative.

Mr. Beach would not allow unanimous consent to be given for him to proceed, and he was taken off the floor. The disappointment of the members who had expected to see a fight was painful. Suddenly Mr. Collins quick wit suggested a way out of the difficulty, so that the fight could go on. "Mr. Speaker," he said; "if I now charge directly against the gentleman from Ohio, what the gentleman from Missouri implied, can be then claim the privilege of the floor?" It was held that he might arise to a question of personal explanation if anything had been said affecting his character as a member. "Then, Mr. Speaker," said Mr. Collins, "I will make any charges necessary to give him the floor." This raised a laugh, and Mr. Foran thanked him.

But the Speaker would not allow any trifling, and after Mr. O'Neil had had about ten minutes' talk in reply to what Mr. Foran had already said, the matter was hushed up, and the House fell back to its customary quiet. Mr. Morrill called up in the Senate this week the bill to appropriate $300,000 for the erection immediately south of the Executive Mansion of another building of equal size and similar exterior, connected with the present building by a corridor, and creating the President, Secretary of the Treasury and Secretary of the Interior a commission to select material and make contracts for the erection of the building.

Mr. Morrill pointed out the contracted quarters of the President now for residence purposes. He said the Executive had only six rooms, and the servants have to go outside to get lodgings. Besides, he said the lower portion of the mansion is not properly drained. Mr. Morrill added that this bill has the approval of the present Executive, as it had of his predecessor four years ago.

Mr. Hawley did not think the arrangement satisfactory. He would be sorry to see the present building turned into mere offices. It ought to be preserved from that because of its historical associations. The business ought to be done outside of it, and he favored the erection of a building just west of the present mansion, and be tween it and the War, State and Navy departments, for the official use of the President's residence.

Mr. Morrill replied that Mr. Hawley had not examined this subject as attentively as the public building committee. That committee unanimously favored the bill, and many Senators who had been consulted approved it. He said it was unjust to any President to confine him in the present building as it now exists; that he is there in his office from half-past 9 a. m., and cannot get away from his office and his duties when he desires to escape. He could not assent to the idea of buying another site, and erecting another building. Besides, he called attention to the fact that under the bill the present mansion would be preserved intact. The bill passed with a few dissenting votes.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Edmunds in the Senate yesterday, and agreed to, requesting the President, if not incompatible with the public interests, to send to the Senate any information or correspondence in the possession of the Government touching the arrival and landing at San Francisco of the new Chinese Minister.
