Wooden Wedding.

In the evening of June 7th, 1886, ual performance of a wooden wedding. Chairman S. D. Irwin. N. R. Groves | About seven o'clock the guests began was crowded with people and presents. The presents were quite numerous, but I being only an uninterested spectatress, failed to get an exact list of Harmony, lower, John Thompson, them. To the best of my knowledge Harmony, upper, John A. Peterson. each of the following named persons gave a valuable present: Mrs. Lovell, Miss Anna Osgood, Miss Verna Heath, Mr. John Osgood, Mr. George Weller, Miss Carrie Ablers, Miss Maud V. Osgood, Mr. H. E. Lovell, Mrs. Amos Cooper, Mr. C. O. Rudolph, Miss Mary Ledebur, Miss Minnie Ikenburg, Mr. John Burhen, Miss May Weller, Miss Vina Zuendel, Miss Emma Ledebur, Mr. Amos Ledebur, Mr. A. L. Weller, Mr. Will Gillespie, Miss Libwho did not give other presents gave an equivalent sum of money but I failed to get a list of their names.

After the guests had all assembled and the presents were disposed of, the most delicious refreshments were prepared, which all seemed to relish. Last of all some of the young people stepped lightly to most excellent music, furnished by Messrs. McMillen, H. E. Lovell, Ed. Gillespie and others. At quite a late hour all departed feeling that they had been highly entertained. JAKE AND I.

A Brace of Fortune Tellers.

It does seem that modern enlightenment has made but slight progress in doing away with the superstitions that have place to a more or less extent in the human mind. The desire good citizens to the end that these to anticipate the future is as prevalent well tested doctrines may be victorious now as in the times when necromancy at the general election in November and witchcraft was one of the accepted facts.
