NEW YORK'S VAST ARMY OF PED-DLERS AND HUCKSTERS.

Venders of Innumerable Articles. and How They Work-Flower Girls and Newsboys.

A vast plodding army of people in this city live by peddling all sorts of mer-chandise in the streets and by keeping stands at the street corners. The battle of life constantly being fought in these strange trafficking communities is full of hardship, suffering and privation. Thousands of people thus engaged live from hand to mouth, and a stormy Saturday often means to them a dinnerless Sunday, and a week back in their rent.

Most of the hucksters of the city start on their perambulations early in the morning, and are untiring in the prosecution of schemes to make a living. They may be divided into four classes-those who have horses, those who have hand carts, those who have to hire hand carts and those who have baskets. Early in the morning, and before sunrise, appears the milkman, who leads the vanguard of the bucksters.

Next come the dealers who live by hawking all sorts of vegetables, fish and fruit for the breakfast and dinner table. They are numerous and hard working. Their trade is one of constant labor and full of those discomforts and risks which arise from the inclemency of the weather and the losses resulting from the perishable nature of much of their stock in trade. They attend the early markets down town from 3 to 5 o'clock in the morning, while others have to travel from distant suburbs. Yet they are regularly on their beats, going their rounds in every part of mighty New York, some even before the breakfast

You cannot fail to notice that those who announce articles in season only for a short time are more intelligible in their promulgation than those who peddle the same article all the year round. The hucksters who sell vegetables, flowers, and summer fruit have not time to become indistinct. One day they offer rhubarb and asparagus, then strawberries, gooseberries, and the short-lived ry; whereas fish, clams, oysters, and potatoes last longer, some being always in the market

The fish business is both the most regular and the most profitable branch of the trading industry of the street ped-dlers. But whether they deal in fish, vegetables, or fruit, they are benefactors to the great body of the working people. They not only serve the people with what they require at their own doors, but they supply them at prices below what the ar ticles can be purchased for in the stores.

The voices of some of the hucksters can be heard all day long in the thoroughfares of New York, in winter, in summer, in fair weather and in foul. Some of them confine their peregrinations to certain districts, while others go where they think to succeed best. Oysters, clams, and fruit employ a goodly number of people, both young and old, who hawk these articles about in handcarts and baskets. From the ups and downs of fortune among them, not a few, instead of having horses of their own, are obliged to hire them, and, as a consequence, the profits are reduced very considerably by the sum paid for the horse and cart.

Other peddlers trade tin and iron ware for old clothes. A very good cooking not may be had for a pair of old trousers. The articulation of a man who frequents the upper part of the city is admirable. His respect for the consonants is very great. "Any old-d clothes-es or bootses; any umbrellas, however old-d!"

He drawls the invitation out, but is always distinct, walking slowly in the middle of the street, and addressing the upper windows of the houses on either

The neighborhood of lower Brodway, Fourteenth street, Grand street, and Bowery swarms daily with a heterogeneous tribe who deal in a variety of miscellaneous articles. Many of the things offered for sale are neatly gotten up, and some are of ingenious construction. Few a river, evidently forgotten by a fisherof these, however, range above five cents man. The Brahmin then went to the apiece, but how they can be made for the fox, who immediately went in search of money must seem a mystery to most per-

The poor people who struggle for a living by attending the fruit stands in left by a herdsman. The Brahmin at the streets have in most cases a hard battle to fight to enable them to keep their him. The hare said: "Friend, I eat sonls and bodies together. They are nothing but grass, which is, I think, of obliged to attend to their business daily no use to you." Then the pretended in all weathers from year to year, until they fall like withered leaves.

women and girls, though many are employed in it. Those among the latter ment of colors have their little flat baskets very prettily decorated. Most New Yorkers have a love for flowers, and few feet of ground which can be turned into a miniature garden by its holder,

The army of newsboys and newsdealers may be classed as street peddlers. The New York newsboys have the reputation of being the smartest in the world. They are brought up to no trade, and little capital is needed in their business. They are often drawn from respectable circles, many of the little fellows belonging to families in which it is deemed the duty of every member, however young, to earn something. The remainder are usually the orphans of laborers or mechanics, who are compelled to choose between this work and destitution. The earnings of a newsboy on an average day are small. They seldom exceed a dollar. In winter they are sensibly lower. An exceptional day comes no and then, when profits are doubled. Railroad or steamboat accidents, sensational murders, and the death of notable persons yield by far the richest barvest. Of course such cases as the Ward, Jachne, and Shaler trials make a little difference, while the investigation by the Senate months materially augmented sales. copies of an evening paper under his arm, a copy of him, then, is no longer to give him his few pennies. It is to give him the whole price of the paper. It is all profit to him, and is to encourage hard, very hard work.

Much better are the venders situated who offer the papers at fixed news stands. These stands are selected on distinct principles, the chief of which is that the oot passengers are very numerous and are business men. Some of these stands yield a handsome income. A favorite spot of this kind is at the foot of the staircases which lead to the elevated railroad station at the City Hall Square. Some of the women who sell papers there are said to have accumulated a fortune. At the west staircase entrance a mother and daughter are stationed, "Mary," the daughter, a brunette of sixteen summere, is quite a favorite with the male passengers. She sells more papers than any other single street vender in the city. -New York Sun.

Letters Oddly Addressed.

Many oddly-addressed letters daily pass through the post-offices. Several of the rhyming kind are somewhat remarkable for the poetical skill displayed by the writers.

A clever example is given in the following, addressed to Sir Walter Scott during one of his visits to London:

"Sir Walter Scott, in London or elsewhere: He needs not ask, whose wide-extended fame Is spread about our earth, like light and air, A local babitation for his name."

Charles Dibdell, the naval-song writer, sent a letter to Mr. Hay bearing the following address: "Postman, take this sheet away,

And carry it to Mr. Hay; And whether you ride mare or colt on, Stop at the Theatre; Bolton, If in what county you inquire, Merely mention Lancashire."

A letter addressed as follows was mailed in the provinces, and was duly delivered in London:

"Where London's column pointing to the Like a tall bully lifts its head and lies, There lives a citizen of sober fame, A plain, good man, and Balaam is his name."

The letter was delivered without delay to a Mr. Balaam, a fishmonger near the Monument.

Turning from poetry to prose, we find the following vague direction:

Another envelope bore the following: "This is for the young girl that wears specta-cles, who minds two babies 30 Sheriff street, off Prince Edward street, Liverpool."

Mr. J. Wilson Hyde, in his book, 'The Royal Mail," says that two letters directed as follows were duly delivered: "To my sister Jean, Up the Canongate, Donn a Close, Edinburgh. She has a wooden

The other was directed:

"My dear Ant Sue as lives in the Cottage by the Wood near the New Forest."

"In the latter case," says Mr. Hyde, "the letter had to feel its way about for a day or two, but 'Ant Sue' was found living in a cottage near Lyndhurst .-Home Chimes.

The Hare in the Moon.

When the moon is waxing from the eighth day to the full, it requires no very vivid imagination to descry on the westward side of the lumar disk a large patch very strikingly resembling a rabbit or hare. The Hindus have the following legend in relation to it:

In former days a hare, a monkey, a in a wilderness together after having sworn not to kill any living thing. The god Sakkria accordingly determined to Brahmin, he first appeared before the monkey, of whom he asked aims. That worthy promptly brought a bunch of mangoes and presented to him. The pretended Brahmin, having left the monkey, went to the coot and made the same request, who presented him a row of fish which he had just found on the bank of fox, who imme liately went in search of food, and soon returned with a pot of milk and a dried lignan, which he had | the shop and bought it for $12. found in a plain where they had been

Principles of Sea-Bathing.

Sea bathing, when properly and carefully indulged in is a most health-giving and enjoyable diversion. But a few broad principles should be remembered. Never bathe within two hours of a meal, never when overtired and exhausted, and never when overheated. At the same time the body should be warm, and not cold, when you plunge in. Do not remain in the water long enough to become tired or chilly, and when you come out dress quickly. It should also be remembered that bathing does not agree with every-Those who feel faint or giddy in the water, or whose heart begins to beat overmuch, should consult a doctor who is thoroughly acquainted with their constitutions, before they enter the water again. Medical papers say that many of the bathing fatalities which have been generally attributed to "cramp" are really due to failure of the heart's action, induced by the plunge into cold water, committee of the booble Aldermen for and aggravated by swimming. Bouquets Under Water.

The following, taken from Vick's Magazine, is a description of the process by which a bouquet of flowers may be preserved fresh for a long time:

A vessel of water is required; the vessel should be large enough to allow the submersion in it of a plate or dish holding the bouquet to be preserved, and a bell glass to cover the bouquet. The dish or plate should contain no moss or other material; the water should be limpid and quite pure. Place the plate at the bottom of the water, and on the plate, submerging it, place the bouquet, which maintained in an upright position by a ighted base previously attached to it. This being done, the bouquet is covered with a bell glass, the rim of which ought to fit exactly to the flat part of the plate; the bell glass should be entirely filled with water, and without the least air

Then all are raised together, plate, ouquet and bell glass filled with water, placed on a table, carefully wiping the exterior, but leaving on the plate, around the base of the bell glass, a little provision of water, which prevents the entrance of air. The flowers in this condition will be preserved in all their freshness for several weeks, and their beauty increased by a great number of bubbles of gas, produced by the respiration of the leaves, and which attach themselves to the petals, appearing like pearls. The edge of the plate and the water that contains should be concealed by a ght bed of moss, in which are set some other flowers. In the evening by artificial light, a bouquet thus arranged produces a charming effect.

An Unwelcome Ornament.

Nature occasionally indulges in curious freaks upon the human body, and in freaks which sometimes are a sad drawback to the personal appearance. What, for instance, can well be more distressing than for a comely matron of middle age to discover that horns similar to a ram's horns are growing upon her head, and to be obliged to allow them to grow until they reach a size which prevents her hiding the deformity with any cap, hat or bonnet? The lady thus afflicted is a Frenchwoman, and her curious case has been reported to the Academy of Medi-She had reached her fortieth year when the first horn made its unwelcome appearance on her forehead. It was shortly followed by a second, which, however, fell off of itself after attaining the length of twenty-four centimetres; but the first remained, to the great inconvenience of the poor woman, who was by it prevented from resting her head comfortably on a pillow. Ultimately a surgical operation was undergone, and the objectionable ornament was removed. The patient recovered her health and pence of mind, but not for long. months after the operation another horn began to grow precisely on the same spot, the latest news given the Academy of Medicine concerning it being that it had reached the length of five centimetres. and bid fair to grow rapidly. It is estimated that there are 2,000,000 of people in London who never go to church. Fully 100,000 leave on the cheap trains for the suburban pleasure resorts between 8 and 9 A. M. Fifty thousand more crowd the steamboats plying on the Thames between Kew and Gravesend. The angling clubs numbering several thousand members, march with full paraphernalia to the various depots-or stations as they are called here-attracted by the cheap day on the Thames, the Les, the Coine, the Wey and other accessible streams. They generally take their families with them, and the wife, carrying the lunch basket, is a constant companion of the man with his fishing pole and "blacking box" which serves the double purpose of a seat and a receptacle for tackle and bait. A great many people are afflicted with Ca-tarrh who do not know what alls them; and a great many more continue sufferers who might be cured. Thickening of the membrane which lines the nasal passages, thus making breathing difficult; a discharge from the nostrils, more or less copious, watery or thick, according to the stage of the disease; a sense of fullness in the head; a constant inclination to spit; and, in advanced cases, a dropping of intensely disgusting matter into the throat, are a few of the prominent symptoms of Catarrh.

Deafness, inflamed eyes, neuralgic pains, sore throat and a loss of seuse of smell, are very often caused by Catarrh.

All these troubles are cured by Piso's Remedy for Catarrh, Relief is had immediately after beginning its use, but it is important that it be continued without intermission until the catarrhal virus is expelled from the system and healthy secretions replace the diseased action of the mucous membrane. Manifestly it is unreasonable to expect a cure in a short time of a disease that has been progressing for months or years.

This question of time is provided for in the putting up of Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. It is so concentrated that a very small dose is directed. The quantity in one package is sufacient for a long treatment, consequently the accent for a long treatment, consequently the expense is a more trifle, and there is no excuse for neglect nor reason for it but forgetfulness. A cold in the head is relieved by an applicaction of Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. The comfort to be got from it in this way is worth many times the cest.
