

THE FATE OF ANARCHY.

Anarchists Parsons, Fischer, Engel, and Spies, the convicted Haymarket murderers, have been throttled by the law—the self-same law that they had hoped to throttle. The scaffold-drop fell at 11:57 o'clock Friday. Louis Lingg, the most blood-thirsty devil of the lot, on Thursday committed suicide in his cell by inserting a candle soaked with dynamite and a fulminating cap into his mouth and setting it off. His lower jaw was nearly all blown off, and his face horribly mutilated. He died in about five hours afterwards. How he concealed the explosive no one knows, but it is supposed he had it in his hair. He succeeded in cheating the gallows, but the country is rid of him all the same.

More utter contempt of death was probably never shown by any four men. From the first moments of the morning until the day closed upon them they would not see a shadow either of ignominy or the hereafter. The seven hours from dawn until the four passed to eternity were crowded full with events stirring as a day of battle. Beginning with a flat refusal in the very teeth of death to accept a word of comfort from a reverend minister of religion, one of their number, Fischer, sang to the jail and the world the song of the French Revolution, the famous Marseillaise. The voice of Fischer seemed round and full, but quivering just a trifle. The reporters pressed close to the door of the cage, and listened till the deep tones died away into silence. The song lasted full two minutes. Fischer continued to make a display of bravado. Soon after singing the Marseillaise, he spoke to Turakie Stubbe in a laughing way. "When I get to heaven I'll put in a good word for you."

BEGINNING OF THE END.

Following close upon the decision of Governor Oglesby that all but Fielden and Schwab must swing, (the latter's sentences being commuted to imprisonment for life) the deputies commenced at 10:37 a. m., of Friday, Nov. 11, distributing tickets to reporters who were to watch the march to the gallows. The greatest bustle and excitement prevailed in the jail office, but Spies, in his cell, continued writing unintermittently, and the others remained equally nonchalant notwithstanding the confusion that marked the beginning of the end.

With seemingly not a thought of the dread massacre at the Haymarket, they prepared for

THEIR MARCH TOWARD THE GALLOWES almost as if it were a pleasant holiday excursion. Extraordinary as were the scenes presented at this moment, it was not till the first man stepped out upon the gallows that the great climax came. The two hundred and more writers with nimble fingers waiting to spread the news to the farthest bounds of the earth had almost to a man been gathered in the north corridor of the jail. There, for just an hour, they were imprisoned in front of the dull red scaffold. Not many of the 200 were present that did not sit uneasily upon his chair, thinking rapidly of the coming doom of four fell low creatures, or perhaps even more, of the vague possibility of the jail and all within its walls being blown to the blue sky by Anarchistic dynamite. The long hour was not half completed, when, in the jail's distant south corridor, unseen and unheard by the main body of the reporters, big Sheriff Watson, at 11:23 a. m., accompanied by grim old Jailer Polz, the manly looking Rev. Dr. Bolton, and a score of stalwart deputies stepped up close to the door of August Spies' cell, preparatory to

to the four condemned men. This service being performed they were each manacled and the white shrouds were drawn over the condemned murderers.

THE MARCH TO THE GALLOWES.

Forming in double file, each of the four Anarchists side by side with a deputy, were now headed east and started for the gallows. A stop at the iron door of the cages gave the four a chance to turn their heads in the direction of the second gallery of the jail and bid good bye several times to Schwab and Fielden, receiving broken, guttural farewell salutes in return. Here again was spiritual consolation offered by the Rev. Dr. Bolton now for the last time. A sarcastic smile lit up the faces of all four men, as they resumed their tread along the corridor and turned slowly into the dark east angle, disappearing like ghosts up the steps of the gallows.

ADJUSTING THE NOSES.

The four deputies standing to the rear of the four condemned men, began without delay to adjust the ropes, Spies' nose being the first placed.

Spies did not show a tremor, but when the same process was being carried out with Fischer he turned and quietly whispered to the jailer a suggestion concerning the rope. Engel bit his under-lip when his turn came, while another was being fastened on Parsons by his side. Before the four Anarchists had an inkling of what was to be done the white caps were deftly slipped upon their heads and drawn quickly down to the necks, shutting off the view of each as completely and with less warning than does the camera cloth of a photographer.

THE DROP FALLS.

A crash as of a falling house thundered through the corridors. The slender ropes were taut. In a full view of the two hundred men in front were the four white, writhing shrouds. The ropes could be seen tightening about the necks that between cap and shroud could be noticed blackening and purpling. Nine mortal minutes passed. Then it was known to a certainty that not a neck had been broken. The four Haymarket murderers had been literally throttled and strangled by the law.

Coffins were in readiness and at death the four men were placed in them and their bodies delivered to their friends. The burial took place on Sunday last, the bodies being followed to their graves by friends, sympathizers, and curious sight-seers. No disturbance of a serious character occurred in the city. The police and military precautions were perfect, and the Haymarket massacre was avenged by the law without further bloodshed or destruction of property.

HART'S majority in this State is 44,888. The three eights are quite suggestive for next year, which will not be an "off year."

THE massacre at the Haymarket is avenged. Life, liberty and property will be safer in consequence.

THE Ohio Democrats went into the recent campaign on a Free-trade platform. We hope they will do the same next time.

CHICAGO has vindicated herself and the law. Never was a better day's work done in this country.

This week we reproduce the election table, accurately revised and corrected in accordance with the official count on file in the office of the Prothonotary. The showing is an excellent one for the Republicans. We have increased our vote 14 over the Blaine vote of '84, when it reached its highest; 233 over the vote for State Treasurer in 1885, and 56 over Beaver's vote last year. Not only this, but our majority is far larger than it ever was before. A just cause for congratulation.

THE curtain of death has fallen upon the final scene in the dreadful tragedy in Chicago. The whole affair, now that it is over, seems more like some frightful nightmare than a train of realities in the America of the Nineteenth Century.

HART'S PLURALITY.

The official count from all the counties shows Hart's plurality to be 44,888. Following is a table of the pluralities of each candidate in the several counties:

Table with 3 columns: Counties, Hart, R., and McGurn, D.

THE Crown Prince of Prussia, Frederick, is fatally ill from cancer in the throat, similar to that which killed General Grant.

GOVERNOR OGLESBY, of Illinois, deserves a large and handsomely engrossed vote of thanks.

THE Republicans elected their candidate for Congress in the Second District of Rhode Island, where the Democrats had a plurality last year, and so will control a majority of the state delegations in the National House of Representatives. This is one of the most important political triumphs of the year and insures the choice of a Republican president in case the next presidential election is thrown into the House.

THERE is no change in the result of the elections held in the different states as given in our report last week, except that the Republican majorities are generally much larger than we reported them. Ohio gives Foraker over 25,000, while in Pennsylvania Hart has nearly 45,000, instead of 25,000 as we had it.

FROM a canvass made by the New York World of Governors, Senators and general party leaders, it appears that Blaine and Cleveland are still the favorite candidates of their respective parties for the Presidency in 1888. The old tickets are good enough for us; indeed, are our preference. Mr. Blaine is as strong to-day as he has ever been, while Mr. Cleveland is weaker with the people if not his party than he has ever been. Mr. Cleveland weighted down with the rebel flag order alone in the last Presidential election would have been defeated by many thousand votes. In the next election he will have added to his rebel bid for votes, his proved incapacity for the position he holds, his sacrifice of his civil service reform principles to cater to the worst element in his party, and his numberless sins of omission. Long live the old tickets.—Pittsburgh Com Gazette.

Forest County's Vote for 1887.—Official.

Table with 3 columns: Districts, Hart, R., and McGurn, D.

MAJORITYS—Hart over McGurn, 221; Williams over Thompson, 204; Arner over Clark, 318; Sawyer over McClelland, 324; Parsons over Copeland 113, electing Lederer, Butler, Parsons and Shields; Blum over Kennedy, 74, electing Gillespie, Jones and Blum; Church and Cooper both elected. Kennedy, labor candidate for State Treasurer, and Keyser for Supreme Judge, received 14 votes each in the county.

In Brief, And To The Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature. The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made this American people a nation of dyspeptics. But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy. Remember: No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and soon found myself completely all right and well." Try a bottle, only 50c, at Howard's Drug Store.

RENEW'S HER YOUTH. Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and from now on I am completely all right and well."
