HERE AND THERE.

It is said that the following remedy for diphtheria, where it has been applied promptly, has never been known to fail in effecting a cure. It is a remedy that was discovered in Germany, and is said to be the best known. The remedy is simply as follows: At the first indication of diphtheria in the throat of the child, make the room clean. Then take a tin cup and pour into it a quantity of tar and turpentine, equal parts. Then hold the cup over a fire so as to fill the room with the fumes. The little patient, on inhaling the fumes will fall asleep, and when it awakes, it will cough up and spit out all the membranous matter, and the diphtheria will pass off. The fumes of the tar and turpentine loose the matter in the throat thus affording the relief that has baffled the skill of physicians. The remedy is simple and parents should cut this out and preserve it.—Ed.

Judge Taylor yesterday rendered an important decision on the fence law. The old colonial law of 1700 requires fences in this State to be constructed of a certain height and strength. In 1885 the Legislature passed an act allowing counties to settle the fence question by voting for or against the repeal of the old law. Venango county voted for the repeal. Some months ago cattle belonging to a Mr. Cherry, near Rousseville, broke into the premises of a neighbor named Frost. The latter sued Cherry for damages before Justice Mustard, of Rousseville, and got judgment for $6. Defendant appealed the case to court, Hancock and Thorp, of Oil City, appearing for him, and W. J. Breene, of this city, for Frost. They argued the case before the court two months ago. Judge Taylor's opinion sustains the Justice, on the ground that the first section of the act of 1700 is still in force in Venango county; also, that the act of 1885 is unconstitutional, as it is special legislation, in conflict with Art. 7 of the new Constitution. This decision means that if a man would collect damages for the depredations of his neighbor's breachy cattle, he must show that he maintains the old-fashioned fence, popularly described as "horse-high, bull-strong and pig-tight."—[Franklin News.]

A gentleman who pretends to know says that the secret of Solicitor General George A. Jenks' success at the bar was as much owing to his habit of studying men as his knowledge of law. He made it a point to learn the weaknesses of the opposing counsel, and would invariably make practical use of his information. If his opponent had a hobby he would force him to get on and ride at a critical point. As an instance of this he told the following story: George and his brother, Judge W. P. Jenks, had opposite sides of an important case. George realized that he had the weak side, and knew that his brother would knock his argument into a cocked hat unless something desperate was done. Knowing his brother's great biblical knowledge and his weakness for displaying it, George contrived to make a couple of bungling quotations from Scripture at the close of his argument, in which he tortured the inspired word in a horrible manner, greatly to the exasperation of his brother. When Judge William arose to address the jury he immediately proceeded to show them how little George knew about the Scriptures. He gave the quotations in proper form, showed that they were not uttered by the particular prophet to which they had been improperly applied. By the time the Judge had straightened out the distorted Scripture quotations he had little time left to talk about the case. And thus, by setting up a man of straw for his opponent to knock out, instead of his argument, George won the case.—[Punxsutawney Spirit.]

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unpleasant but too well known. They differ in different individuals in some extent. A Bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue is hardly ever inspected at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events. The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhoea or Constipation may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and stomach disorders of various kinds. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.
