-During the storm on Saturday Tionesta's First Experience With a Veritable Cyclone.

The most violent wind storm, accompanied by rain and bail, that this town and immediate vicinity has ever experienced struck the burg last Saturday about the time people were sitting down to dinner. It came in the shape of a whirl wind, and its most destructive track was scarcely a quarter of a mile in width, but in that track all things with which it came in contact had to move. It seemed to come from a southwesterly direction, and cave no heed to hills or valleys. but would swoop down and tear up a roof or a tree here and there and then rise again, something after the fashion of a rubber ball bounding over the ground. When the storm struck the town darkness came with it, and for some moments all kinds of work had -Mr. Jas. Faichney of Neilltown, to be suspended, and so sudden did it come that people had scarcely time to close doors and windows, while many sought the cellars for safety.

The Lawrence House sustained the

A TALK WITH JOHN EVERHART.

The next stop the reporter made was at the Everbart house, the scene of the terrible tragedy. It was noon and John S. Everhart had just came in from plowing and was feeding his horses. The reporter inquired if this was the Everhart residence. Mr. Everhart answered in the affirmative, and when asked on what grounds his son had been arrested, said "I have not the least idea in the world, and I don't believe that the detectives who made the arrest know any more than I do." Continuing, Mr. Everhart woman may be made" by smoothing said: "Detective Colkitt told my son out the wrickles caused by neuralgia and me the day the arrest was made that he would not have done so if in one way. Invest twenty-five cents Jack Kribbs had not been blowing in a bottle of Salvation Oil, the great about me. have entertained anything else but the kindest of feeling for my wife, for she was always good to him and done so much for him."

In connection with this case, a rereporter of the Clarion Democrat was admitted to Dan's cell, and among other things elicited the following: When asked if he was surprised when arrested, he answered indifferently that he was not particularly surprised as he had heard some time before that there was a warrant out for small of stature, of light or sandy complexion, thirty eight years of age and the father of five children. To a casual observer there is nothing about him to indicate the murderer. For although he is guarded in his conversation and apparently shy to a marked degree, these traits are said to be natural with him and not assumed. The crime with which Everhart is charged is too serious a one to admit of hasty conclusions and until something more tangible in the way of evidence has been secured, it is but due him that the most favorable consideration be accorded him, free from all prejudice. J. E. Wood, Esq., bas been retained as counsel by Everhart while District Attorney Sloan, assisted by M. A. K. Weidner and John W. Reed, will look after the interests of the Common wealth.

Detective Colkitt who made the arrest is the same officer who arrested Collingwood and is quoted as saying that he will produce one witness at the hearing on the 24th, whose testimony will be sufficient to bind Dan. Everhart over for court.

Jim. Horner, the other prisoner, and the man who was in company with Everbart on the day of the murder, was found peering through the iron barred cell door, his jaws actively en. ## HERE AND THERE.

Counterfeit silver dollars are said to be plenty in various parts of Western Pennsylvania which are the best specimens of spurious coin ever seen in this country, They are dated 1887. The color and ring are so near perfect that it is practically impossible to detect anything wrong in either of these particulars without the closest comparative examination. The difference in weight is that the "queer" dollar is lighter by the weight of an oldfashioned silver five-cent piece-so little that a scale test or handled by an expert is necessary to detect the shortage. While him. Dan, Everhart is a man rather the counterfeit is mould-made instead of being stamped, the workmanship is high grade in general and particularly on the face of the coin.
