The funeral of Mrs. Jas. Allio took place at Newmarville on Sabbath last, and was one of the largest ever held there. Mrs. Allio was a daughter of Herman Carbaugh, and was aged about 21 years. Wilbur Hunter attempted to shake with the saw on Collins & Watson's lathe mill, Fox creek, on Friday last, with the usual result. And Wilbur will be obliged to nurse his hand for some time before he can resume work.

The Oil City Blizzard celebrated its sixth birthday last week. It is a real pleasure to note the prosperity with which this ever sprightly and entertaining daily is meeting in its increasing years. E. S. Hoyt has succeeded in hatching out a dozen lively little pheasants in his incubator. They seem perfectly contented in their novel quarters, and can scarcely be distinguished from the brown Leghorn chicks, except that they are smaller. Mr. Hoyt thinks he can domesticate them, and by breeding with chickens, produce a new variety of poultry.

The spring meeting of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture and general farmers' convention will be held in the Court House, Warren, Pa., June 12th, 13th and 14th, 1888. An elaborate program of exercises has been arranged, and some of the heaviest agricultural guns of the State will be present and participate therein.

Gov. Beaver, President of the Board will be there and respond to the address of welcome. This is the first meeting of the board ever held in this section of the State, and all farmers and others interested should try and be on hand, as they'll hear many things that will be both entertaining and instructive. The managers of the affair are arranging to secure excursion rates on all roads leading to Warren.

When, twenty eight years ago, our Republic called for defenders, the best and the bravest gave themselves an answer to that call, so to-day of your choicest and best weave a garland to bestow in honor of the grandest patriotism earth was ever proud of, and in memory of the truest patriots that ever trod this same earth. And when your children inquire why ye do so say, It is done in remembrance. And whilst ye teach their fingers to gather the flowers and twine the wreath and the garland, be not silent concerning the matter that is thus memorialized. Then will they have pride of their ancestors and love their country, and if another such time should arise, will emulate the deeds of these grand men who went down to death that a nation might live.

The storm king was abroad Monday. And although no damage of account was done in town still the wind blew a pretty stiff breeze for a few minutes. A pear tree in front of the M. E. Parsonage, a crab-apple tree in Jos. Grove's front yard, and a pear tree—one that had been grafted into an ash—in Judge Irwin's yard, were all blown down. Up at Tubbs Run the storm was more severe. Over the creek it was also quite severe. Up on the hills it was still worse, leveling fences, blowing down trees, etc. The oil regions suffered pretty severely in the way of blown-down derricks and upsetting of rigs generally. The losses will foot up many thousand dollars all told. At Tylersburg the storm created quite a havoc, having moved some of the houses from their foundations, and tearing roofs from buildings, among which was one belonging to Mr. Ralph Ault.

EVERHART AND HORNER. Both Discharged and Re-arrested.

The bearing of Dan. Everhart and Jim Horner, for the commission of the Everhart-Gillfillan murder, came off before Squire McGregor at East Brady, on Thursday last and resulted in the discharge of the prisoners, the prosecution having failed in producing evidence sufficient to warrant the Justice in binding them over for trial. When the prisoners had been discharged the prosecution seemed surprised at the result, believing they had given sufficient proof to hold them, and averring that, had they thought the Justice was not satisfied they could have produced abundant additional testimony. This may or may not be the case; at any rate, the evidence as printed in the Derrick is hardly enough to satisfy the general public, and if they had more convincing proof it would not have injured their case to have shown it up.

Nine witnesses were called, the substance of whose evidence is about as follows: Mrs. Lena Mahle, a near neighbor, saw a medium-sized man in a gray coat, carrying a walking stick, or stick of some kind, walk briskly through the Everhart gate and proceed in the direction of the house, about noon the day of the murder. Rob't Anderson testified to a conversation in a hay field with Dan in 1884, in which he expressed himself as being dissatisfied with his stepmother, who was opposed to making him a title for his land. If it were not for his mother he might haul all the hay to his own barn instead of only part of it.

George E. Whitmore, a young school teacher, was returning from school about 4 o'clock, when he was stopped by Mrs. Mahle, who said there's trouble down there, indicating Everhart's house; she invited the teacher to go with her saying she was afraid to go alone. The witness called to Dan. Everhart, who came to the door in his shirt sleeves, and was informed there was trouble at his father's. He then put on a gray coat and accompanied the teacher, sometimes running, and sometimes walking to the house. At the gate they met Mr. Owens; they all proceeded to enter the house by the kitchen door; Owens first, Dan next and the teacher fetching up the rear. From the kitchen they went to the dining room, where they saw the body of Mrs. Gillfillan lying on the floor with her throat cut. When Dan stepped into the room he exclaimed, is it so? Mr. Owens replied, it is too true; Dan returned: "Oh, I looked over there," indicating a direction opposite to where the body lay.

N. B. Host was called to contradict the assertion that the defendant, Horner, rode with him or saw him on his way to Lickingville about noon on the day of the murder. The defendant, Horner, rode back with witness from Lickingville on the return trip. He saw Dan Everhart chopping wood, and said "hello" to him, and received a hello from Dan in reply. E. H. Sawyer was defective in hearing, but his memory was unimpaired. This witness distinctly recalls seeing Dan Everhart and Horner walking up town together, coming from the direction of the Everhart house, between 1 and 2 o'clock, and half an hour before N. B. Host drove into town. Witness could not be induced to modify his testimony.

Miss Lena Sandrock testified to attending a singing class at the Lutheran Church in Fryburg, at which Horner was present, on the night of the tragedy, but Bent Buck was her escort and Horner was the escort of her sister. She testified to visiting Deitz's tavern where they drank some wine. Horner became quite boozey when ready to start for home. Horner went to the barn after his horse, and when he returned he said, cold blood had been shed near Lickingville, but at first refused to say where. He subsequently admitted that it was at Everhart's, and that Dan Everhart had met him at the barn, cautioned him to say nothing about it.

Edward Eisenman, of Fryburg, testified to seeing Dan Everhart in Graham & Faemeyer's store between 9 and 10 o'clock on the night of the tragedy. Young Seigworth was with Everhart, and it was then he heard of the murder from Mr. Seigworth. Dan was standing by his side, but he remained silent.

After the summing up by the lawyers on both sides the Justice discharged the prisoners. Immediately upon the discharge, new warrants were taken out before Squire Summerville, of Brady township. Horner was arrested the next day at East Brady, and Everhart was arrested at Clarion. No date has as yet been set for the hearing.

Costiveness is the primary cause of much disease. Dr. Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters will permanently cure costiveness. Every bottle warranted. For sale by G. W. Bovard.

The Storm in Clarion County.

A Tylersburg dispatch says that Monday's storm was the most severe one that has ever visited that section of Clarion County. Although no lives are reported lost many narrow escapes were made. The destruction of pine and hemlock timber is immense, while from the meagre reports already at hand, the destruction of live stock is great. Trees from three to four feet in diameter were blown down and roads were generally blocked.

Traffic on the narrow gauge road was totally suspended for nearly two days. Farmers sustained heavy losses by their fences being blown down and in a number of instances the destruction of whole orchards is reported. McDonald's saw mill near Vovinkel was blown in completely, the smoke stack smashed to smithereens, and the mill machinery was piled up in a confused way. When the catastrophe occurred there was 90 pounds of steam in the boiler, and for a time it was thought that the explosion of the boiler would add horror to the scene. The mill was being operated by Mr. Dailey, and just what it will cost him to get it in running operation again is not known. A falling tree struck the residence of Heck Smith, about one mile north from Tylersburg, consisting of four in the house, but as the tree struck the gable end they all escaped without being injured.

A train on the narrow gauge containing over 30 passengers was blown from the track, and while every passenger was injured some, none, it is thought, are dangerously hurt. Snyderburg fared worse than most of the little towns in this section. Mrs. Soyder's hotel was completely unroofed and the whole top caved in. Joseph Newland's store was also unroofed and the goods were moved to Lucioda, Scotch Hill, six miles southeast of Tylersburg also received its share of devastation. The large skating rink was bodily picked up, carried six or eight feet, turned over and smashed to atoms. At Strobleton, two miles northeast of Fryburg, a fence rail was blown through the large show window of Moran's store. Mrs. Leight, who was standing near the door, was struck in the face and badly injured. Patrick Haie's barn, two and one-half miles northeast from Fryburg, was lifted from its foundation, carried quite a distance and smashed to pieces. The agricultural machinery was also badly damaged.

Lickingville was also visited by the destructive elements, and John Everhart's barn was completely wrecked; had one cow killed and other stock hurt, while his tract of pine timber land is said to be ruined. S. S. Barne's barn, three miles north of Tylersburg, was visited by the storm entirely destroying it. What appears to be the most miraculous heard of yet in that section was that a horse was in the barn and not the least injured.

German Hill.

Rev. R. J. Graetz left last Monday for Youngstown, O., where he will attend the Ohio Lutheran Synod, and from thence he will go to Montra, to pay a few week's visit to his parents. Mr. Andy Stright of West Hickory, was the guest of Mr. R. Kaman and family over Sunday.

Edward Kiser came near losing a valuable colt the other day by its coming in contact with a barbed wire fence. Who is it walks in wisdom's ways And takes the arm of Wise, And o'er the Pleasant Mount doth walk To view the starry skies? Road work has commenced and the general question is, "how much road tax have you got?" May 28. HEDGEHOG.

HERE AND THERE.

The papers in neighboring towns, shortly to be visited by Wallace & Co.'s show, might do their readers something of a service by informing them that there is a very slick gang of swindlers traveling with the circus. We say the papers might do this, but it would do no good. People like to be swindled and insist on being taken in and done for occasionally.—[Blizzard]

Miss Nannie Morrow, teacher of Foxburg school, makes the following report for month ending May 25th, 1888: No. of pupils enrolled, 36; average attendance, 29. Those not absent during the month are as follows: Jerry Lynch, Charles Karns, Epp Klein, Martin Fitzgerald, Eddie Fitzgerald, Pearl Copeland, Laura Smith, Hannah Case, Hannah Lynch, Verne Dunham, Lottie Dunham, Bernice Bruner, Rachel Gillfillan and Ida Karns. The following were absent only one day: Harry Bruner, Harry Smith, Garvey Copeland, Nellie Turner and Bertha Siggins.

A nervous looking man went into a store in a neighboring town the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when a clerk asked if there was anything she could do for him. He said no; he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat there half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man, "I just wanted to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says, above all things, I must avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the newspapers, I thought that this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours for complete isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.

A few years ago several gangs of surveyors from New York made their headquarters in East Brady and surveyed the whole country, apparently. It was said that they were surveying for an air line railroad to connect New York with Chicago and shorten the distance 150 miles over that of any other railroad line. Having accomplished their work, they left and nothing definite was ever heard of the project. It now appears that the building of the road is an assured fact. The name of the road is to be the New York, Mahoning & Western railroad. It will run almost in a direct line from Redbank, this county to Fort Wayne, Ind. It shortens the distance between New York and Chicago 138 miles. The railroad company has let the contract for grading, tracklaying and ballasting the entire line to Geo. D. Sibley, of Findlay, O., and the work will be commenced at once. The contract for 317 miles of steel rails has just been let to the North Chicago rolling mills, and construction contracts have also been made.—[East Brady Review]

Rev. Dr. Talmage a few days ago wrote the following: "Warm days are alluring; they are abounding in vitality. Though they drain us a little of our vital force, it is only to give it back by and by in larger measure. They are so rich in beauty. How many summer-dressed hillsides will soon be like roseate walls, carved in the coralline elements of the laurel, from top to bottom, over all their dimpling slopes! How many lovely lakes will laugh in the morning under the white and golden glory of the lilies! How green and graceful will be the ferns that grow in the shadowy places! How sweet will be the bird-songs, poured out through the soft opaqueness of the dawn! In the city parks in summer, how velvet are lawns and awards, glades-clippings, and testing the eye with their verdure! And the dear little city gardens, so tenderly loved and cared for, how burdened they are with the fuchsias and heliotropes and delicate mignonette and lavish petunia! To say nothing of the growing corn and the ripening fruit and buckwheat and the rye, what, on the score of the beautiful alone, should we do without the long warm days?"

Rev. Feitt's Memorial Sermon.

On last Sabbath morning, Rev. R. F. Feitt preached the usual memorial sermon for the G. A. R. and the people at the Presbyterian Church in this place. There was a goodly gathering of the veterans and citizens; some from the surrounding country. We note a few of the points in this excellent and masterly sermon: "The text was from St. John, 'Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.' History is not lacking in instances of this supreme proof of love—the supreme self-sacrifice for the good of others. Enumerate if possible those of our comrades who fell in battle fighting for liberty; summon them from their bloody graves; what a host! Marshal them into companies, in battalions, in regiments, in divisions, in armies; behold what masses; what endless columns, what a dense array! Yet to all, life was precious. They gave their lives for the common good, to ransom men from bondage, from degradation. Have they not imitated, so far as their nature would allow, the example Christ made of himself on Calvary. One sentiment animated every soul and that sentiment was the highest type of patriotism: a willingness to die, that their country and government might not perish from the earth. As the fruits of their efforts we have liberty for which centuries have sighed, conscience is free and education to be had without money or price. I am speaking to an American audience and in a state where patriotism is hereditary, whose high honor it is to have shed some of the first blood to perpetuate the government of our country. The speaker then eloquently referred to the Spring of 1861 and the blood that the 6th Massachusetts and the Philadelphia brigade, under Gen. Small, poured out on the streets of Baltimore, and the gallant stand they made.

"What is money without a government, knowledge without a country? What are lands, home, wife and children, without liberty! These considerations impelled the noble band of patriots to hasten to the defense of their native land. In an hour the Nation awoke from its trance of indifference and saw, as once seen at midnight, a mountain illuminated by lightning, the relation of Government to liberty, wealth, and whatever is most precious to the race. To be permanent a government must be honored. The true basis of authority is not physical force. It must be strong and honored enough to command the respect of its subjects. It must be able to defend itself from all insults and hostile intrusion. This principle also applies to the Divine Government. Deeper than reason; deeper than education, in the human heart is the principle and acknowledgment of justice. Hence all attempts to enslave a people's idea of God have failed. Thus constituted and thus alone does any government, civil or divine have the elements of endurance. But if a government lack this ability to command the respect of its subjects—this ability to vindicate its honor when insulted, who can predict stability to it? What is more pitiable under heaven than a weak, nervous, cowardly government, halting in its performance, supplicatory in its posture? We had just such a weak, nervous, cowardly government in our day in this country. The three last months of President Buchanan's administration were as weak and shameful as patriots ever blushed for. Is there any wonder that all Europe, in view of what they saw going on at Washington in the winter of 1861, proclaimed that the great Republic was breaking to pieces? Europe had seen these symptoms of dissolution before, and knew what they meant. They were right; the great Republic was breaking up; half the stones in the majestic structure were sliding from their places. The speaker then referred to the 300,000 strong who yielded up their lives fighting under the starry folds of our glorious flag—and their survivors are the gray haired, battle-scarred, broken down members of the G. A. R. Comrades of the G. A. R.! Our ranks are growing thinner as time marches on. Our comrades are dropping around us like the leaves of autumn; our ranks are already sadly thinned. Let us, therefore, with loving, earnest faith accept Jesus Christ as our Saviour and friend. And while we stand on the shores of the "silent river," let us hand down to our sons and daughters the torch of liberty which we received, bright and flaming, that like a pillar of fire went before us on our weary marches, and like a star of hope shone above us during the storm of battle; so that when we shall come to be gathered to the dust where our fathers and comrades are laid, we may say to them, "We have not squandered your inheritance of glory."

A MAN OR WOMAN

who will work faithfully, can secure (if they so desire), a rare chance to make money, by handling THE HON. HENRY W. BLAINE'S (Senator from New Hampshire) Temperance Movement, or THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MAN AND ALCOHOL. From the fact of the deep interest being taken in the Temperance Movement to-day, as also the high standing of the writer as a leader of men and moulder of public opinion, it is presumed you can readily see the unusual opportunity offered to make money by selling such a work. If favorable to engaging with us, please answer at once, as territory is being taken very rapidly, and give us full particulars as to your business experience, references, etc. E. R.
