THE FOREST REPUBLICAN.

J. E. WENK. Editor & PROPRIETOR. WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1888.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

If President Cleveland's message of a year ago was confined to the one subject of tariff reform, the document sent to the Congress on Monday fully makes up for the subjects then omitted. The "state of the Union" is pretty thoroughly discussed, and if any point of interest of the affairs of the nation is omitted, unless it be the Civil Service reform, we fail to detect it. Instead of being the message of a President about to retire from public lifeone whose policy has been repudiated by the people-it reads like a document of a man with the greater part of a term yet to serve, and who lays out an elaborate programme of reform. It might pertinently be asked, why did not the Democratic party, when in power, accomplish some of these reforms, or at least make attempts which would command the confidence of the people?

The protective tariff receives a great deal of attention. While Grover Cleveland as a candidate for re election was "no free-trader," as a man about to retire from public life his free trade sentiments are very clearly expressed.

He attacks the protective system as a violation of the Constitution-the compact between the Government and the people, and predicts that all classes of soclety will rise to destroy it. He talks glibly of equal rights of citizenship; of poverty and wealth; of the fortunes of manufacturers being exacted from the masses of the people ; about trusts, combinations, and monopolies; of the broken bond of the Government with the people; and, letting his feelings outrun his judgment, he says :

Communism is a bateful thing, and a menace to peace and organized government; but the communism of combined wealth and capital, the outgrowth of overweening cupidity and selfishness, which insidiously undermines the justice and integrity of free institutions, is not less dangerous than the communism: of oppressed poverty and toil, which, exasperated by injustice and discontent, attacks with wild disorder the citadel of rule.

The President detects a tendency to extend the federal power into the domain of State and local jurisdiction, says it must be checked, and passes on to quote with approval and presumably to apply to himself Andrew Jackson's declaration: "The ambition which leads me on is an anxious de sire and a fixed determination to restore to the people, unimpaired, the sacred trust they have confided to my charge," etc.

Mr. Cleveland then mentions the constitutional provision requiring the President to give to Congress information as to the state of the Union, and proceeds to tell what has happened since his last annual message, and to review the international questions settled and unsettled. He mentions the rejection of the Fisheries treaty by the Senate, and then says that no case of unlawful treatment of American vessels by Canada has been reported since March 3, 1887, in which reparation was not promptly obtained from the Dominion Government, thus confessing that his demaud for extraordinary retaliation powers was a piece of buncombe. The Sackville matter is mentioned, and the correspondence in the case is promised.

He has tried to prevent the extermination of the fur seals, to fix the boundary between Alaska and British Columbia, protect American citizens of foreign birth from military service when visiting home, and to duly condole with Germany on the death of the two Emperors.

The history of the rise and fall of civil service reform, which, if written as exhaustively as other subjects discussed, would have used several thousand words more, is not given in the message.

The selection of Governor Beaver ination. Those who passed best were, Blanch Hunter and Russell for Marshal of the Inauguration Day parade in Washington assures a skillful handling of the great number of organized bodies that will be in line on that occasion. Governor Beaver will bring to the work the experience of the soldier ; he is a strict disciplinarian, and so far as he is concerned there will be no delay in the prompt movement of the line. It is already estimated that the number participating will be larger by one-half than ever before, and no one could be found better equipped in all respects to manage the affair than Governor Beaver. It is probable that as a matter of persoual satisfaction he would prefer to ride at the head of the National Guard of the State, but he will doubtless accept the appointment which has Splints, Sweeney, Ring-Bone, Stiffes, been tendered him, and he can take the Pennsylvania troops along for Sold by Herman & Siggins, Druggists, staff and escort duty.
