A BILL has been introduced in the House by Mr. Keefer, of Franklin county, prohibiting the destruction of song and wild birds. It is truly said by a cotemporary that every agriculturist is directly interested in this bill. No one who has not given the subject some attention can form any idea of the number of birds that are destroyed. Hundreds of thousands are slaughtered every year for the sake of their skins which are used chiefly for decorating hats and bonnets. As the food of these birds consists almost entirely of insects injurious to the growing crops, their destruction in such numbers allows the insects every opportunity of increasing, and as they increase very rapidly the lujury which

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent,)

Washington, February 1, 1889. Very few Republicans in Congress doubt that there will be an extra session of the 51st Congress. Everybody in the House is talking about it, and the man who ventures an opinion that there will be no extra session is looked upon by his colleagues as very ignorant of the subject. From the first there has been a difference of opinion THE men who are attacking Mr. as to the advisability of having Con that it ought to be avoided, if possible. The most vigorous campaign for office under the new administration yet opened in Washington is that for the position of Public Printer. There are half a dozen or more aspirants for this position already in the field, with several States to hear from. Among the most prominent are Col. W. R. Holloway, of Indianapolis, and Capt. Meredith, of Chicago. An effort has been made to side track the Indianapolis aspirant and leave the field open, so far as he is concerned, to the Chicago applicant. The friends of the latter, it is said, have proposed to Col Holloway, through his supporters, that be withdraw from the contest and enter the race for the appointment of Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the forces of Holloway to combine on Meredith for Public Printer, and those of the latter reciprocating by doing all they can to se-cure Col.
