The Canadian question is one that will not down. It is continually cropping out in unexpected places, for in stance, when Senator Payne proposed in the Senate that the select committee "on relations with Canada" be dropped as being usurpatory of the functions of the Executive, he stirred it up in a lively manner. Senator Hoar in defending the existence of the committee, said: "It is useless to be and growing body of men in Canada that desire appexation to the United States." Senator Cullom favored the committee and hoped that its investigations would result in making the two countries one. Senator Sherman favored the committee and thought that if the countries remained separate, peace would be almost impossible. Senators Edmunds and Hule were willing to vote for the committee, but did not propose to commit themselves as favoring annexation. Senator Morrill had no objection to the committee, but he regarded the present agitation as preposterous, and did not believe Cauada had ever been more loyal to Great Britain than at the present time. What the opinions of the democratic Scuators were, remains a secret.
