ATTEND THE PRIMARIES.

Republicans throughout the county should bear in mind that next Saturday, July 27, the Republican Primaries take place, and it is earnestly hoped there will be a large turnout of the voters at all the precincts. The canyass of the candidates has been a very pleasant and orderly one from all reports, and while each candidate has been putting his shoulder diligently to the wheel, we judge the campaign has been so conducted as not to leave any bitterness over the result, and that there has been just enough friendly rivalry to insure a good attendance at the polls. Let all Republicans turn out and help swell the vote. Don't stay away.

THE only John L. Sullivan has shown good generalship and outwitted the authorities by getting into Canada. Mr. Sullivan, it seems, know when to run as well as when to fight. He can't knock out a requisition.

A SYNDICATE in Chicago has made arrangements for the shipment of a large number of cattle from this country to Europe this season. This will be doubly beneficial-to the stock raisers in this country, and to those who will receive the cattle in the Old World. A few years ago cattle were brought to this country from Europe, and it is a good sign that the current has already set in the opposite direc-

BRICE, Gorman and Scott, the three Democratic leaders, with their heads together in close conference, was a scene in a New York botel the other night. They were probably telling each other how not to do it.

Ir was not necessary for Secretary Blaine to deny the New York Herald story that he is about to resign from the Cabinet. The source of the yarn was sufficient for every Republican to immediately brand it as a lie. The Herald never had a good word for the man from Maine, and it has endeavored to get as far away from the truth as possible when referring to him. Mr. Blaive says he has not resigned and be is going to remain in the Cabinet, and in saying that much he gives the Herald lie a prominence it does not deserve. The story, while it lasted, filled the Democratic press with glee, and was a sweet morsel for the average Democratic editor. But Tanner can stand it, and the President's comfort does not ap publicans, pear to be affected by it. The motive that prompted the conspiracy can be readily guessed from the sneer of one of the most malignant of the newspaper critics, that during the war we were assured that patriotism and love of country were the inspiring motives the country is assured that it was all boodle and not patriotism. This sneering skulker, who, when there was reach of the rebel bullet, is unmindful "boodle" could not have been a very lively one in the minds or hearts of the Union soldier at a time when it was with great difficulty that the Government raised the money to pay him the beggarly $9 a month-this being the amount which he received during the first part of the war .- Harrisburg Telegraph. 1

These birds of brilliant plumage run wild in the Indian jungles, strat freely about the rice fields, and frequent the sacred trees along the Grand Trunk road. Those that frequent the Grand Trunk road and stroll about in the vicinity of the villages, are almost as tame and fearless in the presence of man as the domesticated ones that so proudly strut about the lawn of an American country-house. The reason for their tameness is found in the fact that they also, in common with many things in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms, are held sacred by the Hindoos. The natives never hunt, frighten, nor molest the peacocks in any way, because they are held sacred to their war-god Kartikeya. In mythological times, when the gods made war upon each other, this deity, the "God of War, and Generalissimo of the Armies of the Gods,' was believed to ride to battle upon a peacock. In consequence of this tra-dition, the pious Hindoo thinks it sacrilege to barm the martial fowl, or in any way to show it disrespect. The Rajput warriors used to go to war wearing peacock-feathers in their turbans, and even now they believe that these fowls scream when they hear thunder, because the noise is mistaken for the din of battle. It was to me a pretty sight to see these brilliant olumaged birds stalking about on the Grand Trunk road, half-tame in their sacred security from molestation. As they strutted proudly about, or stood still and spread their gorgeons tails, it seemed to me fit and proper that such bright ornaments of the jungle should be protected from wanton violence at the hands of man. In certain districts the British government has made laws forbidding the shooting of pea-fowls by Euglish hunt ing-parties, or by soldiers from the garrisons. This is done from the respect that the government always de-sires to show to the religious prejudices of the natives. In other provinces, however, the natives, while they refrain from molesting the sacred fowls themselves, offer no objections to the shooting of them by English sports-

Where there are no native prejudices to be consulted, the government rather encourages the sport than otherwise. The officers and soldiers of the garrisons are usually keen sportsmen, and every facility is granted them for pea-fowl hunting, because the sport is considered excellent training in the use of fire-arms. The true Anglo-Indian sportsman scorns to shoot a pea-fowl with anything but a rifle, because, with a shot-gun, the sport is a little else than mere slaughter. With a rifle, however, the killing becomes a matter of skill, and soldiers who spend a good share of their time in shooting at fly ing peacocks with their rifles, would be sure to sequit themselves all the more creditably as sharp-shooters on the field of battle .- Thomas Stevens, in Red Tape in Russia.

From an illustrated article by George Kennan, entitled "Exile by Adminis-trative Process," in the Century, we quote as follows: "How easy it is in Russia to get a high official's signature to any sort of a document may be illustrated by an anecdote that I have ever reason to believe is absolutely true. A stola-nachalnik,' or head of a bureau, in the provincial administration of To. bolsk, while boasting one day about his power to shape and direct govern-mental action, made a wager with another chinovnik that he could get the governor of the province—the late Governor Lissogorski—to sign a manuseript copy of the Lord's Prayer. He wrote the prayer out in the form of an official document on a sheet of stamped paper, numbered it, attached the prop-

Von Moltke's Successor. "The successor of General von Moltke, Count Waldersee," said a man who saw a lot of things on the other side of the water last winter, "is about as easy-going and complacent a person as I ever saw. He was on a big field back of Charlottenburg Palace when a review of the troops was held in honor of Queen Victoria, of England, last spring, on the occasion of her visit to her dying son-in-law, Frederick of Germany. There were two empresses, several crown princes, and a royal princesses on the field that day, and the display of royalty was so tre-mendous that the officers were literally Over them all glowered the surly and observant eyes of the com-ing Emperor, as he rode by the carriage that bore the two empresses. Walder-see arrived late. He is a magnificent looking soldier, but his manner is more notable than his appearance. He sat a fiery chestnut like a centaur. The devil semed to be in the horse's legs. He seemed to jump in five directions at once, but the General was apparently as comfortable in the saddle as though he had been sunk in a sea-side hammock. He kept up a running fire of comment as he rode about in the royal group, and he seemed in especial demand among the royal sisters of the present emperor. He laughed and joked with them with the air of the best comrade in the world, and wheneyer he rode away to talk to som

Knew the Place.

A bright Philadelphia child has many relatives in Pittsburg, and her little ears had taken in so many expressions about the place that her ideas regarding its general appearance were clearly defined if not correct. A few days ago she started with her mother on a long expected visit to the Smoky City, which, in spite of reports to the contra-ry, is but little less blacker than of yore. As the train sped on hour after hour the little one became more and more sure that they must be getting very near their destination, and at last asked for the fortieth time, "Mamma, isn't we most there?"

"Oh, I guess it is not much further." answered her mother wearily and with little heed to the exact truth. For another half hour the cars rumbled along and then suddenly dashed into a tunnel to the great delight of the little one, who joyously exclaimed, "Oh, mamma, get my things; this is Pittsburg,"—Padadelphia Record.
