PENSION COMMISSIONER TANNER deserves credit, even from his enemies, for the frank, straightforward way in which he demands an investigation of his official conduct. He talks like a man who is not afraid; who is all right, and is determined that the world shall know and acknowledge it. out of all his troubles.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30, 1889. Senator Ingalls, who is now here, is puzzling his friends. He is working in a rather secret and mysterious manner at some sort of a project; some think he is gathering material for a series of powerful speeches in the Senate this winter, while others believe be is doing some important work. I think the latter more likely to be right, because, aside from the Senator's well known literary bent, he is probably not averse to earning some money by his pen. He is not a rich man, and the burning of his Kansas residence last year was a heavy financial blow to him. Fortunately the Senator's literary ability is such that anything he writes is eagerly sought by the leading publishers.

Senator Manderson's letter to Commissioner Tanner declining to accept the increase in his pension to which it was recently decided by the Pension Office he was entitled, until he had been re-examined by a board of Surgeons and his right to it fully demonstrated, is just the sort of manly document that these who know him might have expected under the circumstances. Charlie Manderson is not letter must have made those fellows who have been dropping insinuations about "official influence," having been used in his case, feel rather cheap.

Everyone who knows them will agree that personally the three present Commissioners-Messrs, Lyman, Roosevelt and Thompson are most estimable gentlemen. The incongruity, absurdity and impossibilities of the Civil Service law are matters deserving of criticism, but to attack the character of the Comshould be repealed. The opponents of the law should see to it that the dis-

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Batcheller, laughed when he was shown the story of a Wall street combine to force the Treasury to pay more for bends and if it declined to do so to bring on a financial panic. "You the force the Scientific American, the Scientific American the Sc to bring on a financial panic. "You can say," said the Secretary, "in the most positive language, that there will be no financial panic under the present administration, and that at present it is getting about all the bonds it wants at the regular price and does not pro-

so without neglecting business, as after the election of a Speaker nothing can be done by the House until the committees are announced, and to select and arrange them will take the Speaker at least two or three weeks.

Representatives Rowell, of Illinois, and Peters, of Kansas, have gone to Louisiana to take part in the campaign now going on in the Third district of that State to elect a successor to the late Representative Gay. They will remain until the election takes place, and will doubtless obtain some information that will be useful to them when some of the Southern contested election cases are under consideration by the House.

The Census Bureau will occupy its new building about September 15, and until after that time, Superintendent Porter has given notice that he will see neither applicants for positions nor their friends.

The local republican organizations are making a lively kick against being left out in the cold by the new District Commissioners.

Pennsylvania Day at Gettysburg.

Wednesday and Thursday, Septem-Here's wishing him a safe deliverance ber 11th and 12th, will be great days at Gettysburg. Most of the survivors of the battle resident in Peonsylvania, and many now living outside the State, will have a reunion on the famous field at that time, and scores of comrades will meet face to face who have not seen each other since Lee's retreat. Every inquiry has been answered either by letter or circular as promptly as possible. Up to Aug. 24, about 4,500 applications had been recorded. Col. Keller believes 10,000 is a conservative estimate of the number of applications that will have been received before Pennsylvania Day. Upon the receipt of an application the record of the soldier thereon is immediately compared with the official records there. If entitled to transportation, an order on the railroad company for a ticket is at once for warded. Whether entitled or not the applicant is notified.

Gen. Hastings says that all the can was of the State will be put up without expense to the old soldiers. A force of men from the State arsenal will begin the construction of the city of tents Sept. 6th, and they will be ready for occupancy when the old soldiers arrive on the field.

Progress of Inventions Since 1845.

In the year 1845 the present owners of the Scientific American newspaper commenced its publication, and soon after esthe sort of man to take anything that tablished a bureau for the procuring of he is not clearly entitled to, and his patents for inventions at home and in foreign countries. During the year 1845 there were only 502 patents issued from the U.S. Patent Office, and the total issue from the establishment of the Patent Office, up to the end of that year, numbered only 4,347.

Up to the first of July this year there since the commencement of the publica-Government. ### MISERY IN MOSCOW.

Impassible and Mercliess Barriers Which Separate the Poor from the Rich. St. Petersburg is European, and half the things which pain one there are felt to be in some sort of association with the evils and vices of the West, says a writer in the Atlantic for August. But Moscow has its own miseries, and they are so intensely Russian, so characteristic of that vaster Moscow of which the old capital is merely the tiny center, that in becoming sensible of them one shudders, not for a community, but for a whole peo-ple. The contrasts which life offers in ple. The contrasts which life offers in St. Petersburg are contrasts mainly be-tween things it is scarcely just to com-pare, between a well being which is foreign and a want that is native; but in Moscow wealth is elder brother to poverty, yet stands divided from it by a chasm as impassible as it is merciless. There is a distinct alliance of roughness and semi-culture between the rich merchant who does business daily in the White Town, and the wretched street vender whom he passes on his way a dozen times; yet the two are farther apart than the poorest and the richest classes in Western Europe. Moreover, poverty is so unspeakably miserable in Moscow that it seems to be the characteristic rather of a distinct species of the animal man than of any particular layer of the population.

The streets daily yield figures which can only on general principles of an-thropology be called human. The eye disentangles a face from these moving masses of rags but slowly and painful-

In the daytime they explore the city from gate to gate, halt-ing from time to time to beg alms or munch fragments of black bread which form the chief spoils of their diurnal quest. Many women of this class are young and robust, fresh from the lapors of the field; but some are old, infirm, haggard. All trudge about with the aid of a staff, and all wear a rude canvas bag tied around the neck. At night long after the last vesper has died away, when the White Town is deserted and the suburban residences are gay with laugnter of the happy men and women, the vast army of the penniless and the miserable seeks its nocturnal repose Heaven alone knows where—on the forsaken field of the day's markets in the open air, on the steps of churches and cathedrals, or in the quadrangles and courts of palaces and public buildings. To be unutterably wretched and yet to be a nightly sojourner in the "outer courts of heaven;" to be poor, and yet to fall asleep with only the thickness of a wall separating one from some of the most use less and costly accumulations of treasure in Europe, the conversion of which into money would furnish the means for banishing acute poverty from Russia altogether—such experiences as these are the lot of thousands to whom
