Death of Mrs. W. J. Roberts.

Mrs. Taricy S., wife of W. J. Roberts, died at her home in Tionesta, Saturday morning, October 26, 1889. Her death was sudden, she being ill with cramps only a little more than 24 hours, and the announcement of her death was the first intimation that most of our citizens had that she had even been siling.

Mrs. Roberts' maiden name was Harrington, and she was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., October 29, 1825, being therefore in her 64th year. She was married March 29, 1849, to Wm. J. Roberts. George J. Lacy Dead.

When our report of the shooting of George Lacy closed last week, nothing in the nature of an operation had been performed, but upon the arrival of Dr. Sutton, Pittsburgh's eminent specialist, he decided at once on an peration as the only chance of saving the injured man's life. It was accordingly performed by Dr. Sutton with the assistance of Drs. Ross, Ritchey and Stranahan, on Wednesday noon. A large hole was found in the omen tum and transverse colon. The abdominal cavity was full of fluid from the bowels, mixed with blood from ruptured blood vessels. The large hole in the colon was carefully repaired by stitching, and the abdomen was washed out and closed. The ball, which it was found had passed through 11 thicknesses of clothing before entering the abdomen, was not found. Before the operation there was no hope of recovery; after it there was some, but in spite of it the slender thread of life snapped, and Mr. Lacy passed away at about 11 o'clock a. m., on Thursday.

On Thursday evening, Justice of the Peace F. E. Allison, acting Coroner, summmoned a jury and held an iuquest on the body, and after taking he testimony of some witnesses, returned a verdict charging Charles W. Hewitt with the murder of the deceased. Hewitt had a hearing before Justice Cobb on Friday, and was committed to jail for trial at December

The remains of the deceased were brought through here on Saturday afternoon and taken to Erie for burial, beside those of his mother. A large number of the friends of the deceased living in this place attended the obsequies at his late residence, which were conducted by Rev. J. V. McAninch of the Tionesta Presbyterian Church. Besides other kindred and friends Mr. Lacy leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his tragic and untimely death, which is looked upon as a severe blow to the business interests of the locality, as it will be a difficult of the locality, as it will be a difficult matter to fill his place as manager of Harners Shop, in East Hickory.

The Erie Evening Herald of Monday has the following account of the funeral at that place: "The remains of George J. Lacy were buried in the Erie Cemetery yesterday. Brief services were concluded at the residence of Dr. Stranshan by Rev. Solon Cobb. The friends then proceeded to the cemetery, where the last rites were performed and the body committed to its last resting place. The bearers were Messrs. William Spencer, Col. E. P. Gould, Charles Foster, Walter Scott and J. H. Henry. Mr. Lacy was well known in Eric and his deep learning won great respect for him from all who met him."

The many Oil City friends of Mr. Lacy publish the following touching memorial in this morning's Derrick : IN MEMORIAM.

We have lost George J. Lacy, our friend is no more with us. Those who knew him best feel his loss the most. The silent grief each feels is our best tribute to his memory. The tears we shed for our loss are few, but sincere. To a mind fortified as his was by the study of the highest and noblest lives that have shed their lustre on the world, death had neither fears nor terror. To him it was but a transition from this world in which he had been placed, to the mercy of the All Merciful, who had placed him here. He was a man peculiarly fitted by his disposition to be a well spring of pleasure and intellectual enjoyment to those who had the privilege of associating with and were capable of appreciating him. His conversation was sparkling with those jewels which the exoloring mind brings from the cave of knowledge. His craving for information and fondness for study compelled him to surround himself with the greatest and best minds of past ages. In the lettered ease of his well furnished library, stored with the greatest and best ancient and modern authors, holding sweet communon with them, they were to him as fond friends who familiarly and freely yielded to him those thoughts that conferred immortality on them. He was a profound think er, and a cogent, clear reasoner, and had he been spared to us would have inevitacommunity in which his lot had been east. He has left us, and is with the Saviour who taught the God of the parable of the Prodigal Son. From the true friends left behind George J. Lacy take our last proud and sad farewell.
