

The Bradford Star of last Saturday well says that: "Hon. C. W. Stone is openly and squarely in the field as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. He will make an earnest and honorable canvass of the State, asking the support of his friends and all friends of good government and honest politics, upon his own merits as a man and a good Republican. He is not the candidate of any man or any faction of the party. Though his personal relations with all the so-called leaders of the party are friendly and he enjoys their utmost respect, he is recognized as a man whom no collar of servitude will fit. If he is nominated, and we believe he can be nominated if the rank and file of the party are united, there is no element of the party that cannot and will not rally to his support at the polls. The fact cannot be too clearly stated and understood that the coming gubernatorial nomination must be governed solely with a view to the harmony and best interests of the party. It will not be safe, neither will it be good political policy, in view of the importance of next year's contest and the strong front that the enemy will present, to weaken our strength with a nomination that may repel the sympathy of a large and influential section of the party. Good politicians seek to unite rather than to disintegrate their party, and the nomination of a man like Hon. C. W. Stone for Governor will do more than ought else to prove that the Republican party is the party of the people and is not under the domination of the bosses or corporations than any that could be made."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Jan. 2, 1890. The President's New Year reception is still the talk of the town, and is likely to be for many a day to come. It was undoubtedly the most brilliant affair that ever took place in the White House, and that too, in spite of the cold drizzling rain which made the day one of the most disagreeable of the season. Mrs. Harrison's place was filled by her daughter, Mrs. McKee. Secretary Blaine held a reception at his house immediately after that of the President, in honor of the foreign legations and the members of the Three Americas' Congress and of the International Maritime conference. This was particularly trying on Mr. Blaine, as his wife was absent in Maine, where she had gone to attend the funeral of her sister, and he had only the day before received news of his elder brother's death, in Oregon. But as the invitations were all out he felt it to be his duty to lay aside his private griefs, and fulfill his official obligations. Second only in brilliancy to the President's reception was that held by the Vice-President and Mrs. Morton in their magnificent residence, which they have just taken possession of. Secretary Tracy has decided after a careful examination to abandon the plans of the 7,500 ton armored cruiser for which the money was appropriated by the last Congress, and to ask Congress to pass a supplementary bill changing her displacement to 8,500 tons, in order that she may be built after an English plan, which is said to represent an entirely new idea in armored ships. As we are after the best to be had it is probable that Congress will acquiesce. Secretary Blaine has appointed J. Sevellon Brown chief clerk of the State Department. Mr. Brown held the position for many years, but was removed by Secretary Bayard. An attempt was made by a local paper this week to get up a big scare over the Russian influenza or "La-Grippe," but it fell quite flat, as all of the reputable physicians in town declare that Washington has not had a single case. The International Maritime conference has finished its discussions and adjourned sine die, thus obviating the necessity of having to prolong the session, as Congress by a special resolution provided for. The conference is regarded by all concerned as having been a complete success. Chairman McKinley's committee on Ways and Means is giving daily hearings to parties interested in the new tariff bill. This week the glass men, the chemical men, the wool growers and others have been heard. It seems a little funny to see well-known Democrats asking for more protection, but it only shows that they know a good thing when they enjoy the benefits thereof. Society has temporarily gotten the advantage of politics. The New Year's receptions began a round of entertainments that will last until Lent, but the advantage will be only temporary; for on Monday Congress will be back, and there will be something more important, at least for the men, to talk about.

Some surprise is expressed here that Justice Lamar should have declined to address the citizens of Richmond, Va., on the life and career of Jefferson Davis. It is hinted that Justice Lamar is only waiting to be urged.

Secretary Windom anticipated the January interest on the public debt in order to give the stringent money market the benefit of the $8,000,000 thus put in circulation.

Commissioner of Pensions Raum has recovered from what at one time promised to be a serious illness and is again attending to business.

Literary Society.

On last Thursday evening, the teachers, who had boarded at the Fitzgerald residence, met after the lecture and had a literary society, which was very enjoyable. That being the birthday of Mr. J. C. Bryner, he was made the recipient of a pair of slippers; the presentation speech was composed and delivered by Mrs. Cook, she admonished him to protect his "nether extremities." Miss Work, in a neat and witty little speech presented Mr. T. W. English with an ink stand, saying he would probably have occasion to use it in the months to come. Miss Clara Simpson rendered "The Last Hymn" in a very effective manner. Mr. C. P. Williams, the tenor singer of the institute, sang the hymn contained in the last stanza. The Bright and Dark Sides of the Prophecy, were given by W. C. Ciser, Clara Simpson and Laura Clover. Mrs. Cook delivered a temperance recitation, which was very nice. Mr. Williams read and answered a very perplexing query, which seemed to baffle all present. "How Jane Conquest rang the bell," was recited by Miss Laura Clover, in her easy, graceful manner. J. C. Bryner yielded to the party and gave a declamation, this was followed by impromptu addresses by Prof. Kerr and T. W. English. A standing vote of thanks was tendered Prof. Kerr for the successful manner in which he had conducted institutes. After this an informal meeting was held and some lively games engaged in, in which even our worthy County Treasurer took an active part. The party adjourned, resolving to meet at the same place next year, if possible. REPORTER.

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY.
