Destroy not the minister by withhold ing thy money from him, for whosoever crippleth his usefulness, shall abide in the outer darkness of ignorance. Make haste to settle with thy pastor and he shall give thee sermons that will make thy countenances to shine with intelligence that thou be not as vain men and the heathen. Ask not sermons as a gift for they cost much time and labor, and thy pastor liveth in a great city, where his substance wasteth morning, noon and night. His children clamor daily for bread, and his wife abideth at home for want of such raiment as adorneth her sisters.

His heart is daily vexed with bills; his garments wax old, and his hat becometh in the envelopes that have been provided for that purpose, or the pastor will surely fall to deliver the sermon on which thy heart is set.

Blessed, yea thrice blessed, is the man who pays his preacher,

Pay him in lawful money for behold the trade dollar and the punched coin are an abomination and the buttons are of no account in the bank. Ask not preaching for nothing, for guile is in thy heart, and your pastor readeth thee like an open book. He laugheth thee to seorn, and shouteth to his conference brethren, ha! ha! The fool hath said in his heart: "There is no preaching now-a-days outside of the great cities of the East, and we will not pay for what we get at home." Surely he has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Behold his folly drieth up the springs of patience.

Pay the pastor and he shall rise up and call thee blessed, for his soul is exceeding vexed with poor promises,

The fool payeth his pastor with many promises and sayeth in his heart, "Salva-tion's free." Behold the man who never payeth his preacher, spending his money for that which is not bread. He shall be cast out into outer darkness. Like unto him is the earcless who tryeth
