Death of Col. L. F. Watson.

Our people were painfully surprised by the receipt of news, on Monday afternoon, of the sudden death of Col. L. F. Watson, Congressman from the particulars are given in a Washington dispatch, dated Monday, Aug. 25:

The eleventh death in the Fifty-first Congress occurred to day, that of Representative Lewis F. Watson, of Twenty-seventh District. death was startling in its suddenness. Mr. Watson had been living at the Shoreham and until recently seemed quite well. Mrs. Watson, who had been away during the Winter joined him here a short time ago. A little after 11 o'clock this morning, accom-panied by his secretary, C. M. Shawkey, he was about to leave the Shore ham by the ladies' entrance on H He experienced a sickening feeling with pain in the region of the heart and his secretary quickly administered some brandy which had a temporary effect, but Mr. Watson soon fell to the floor and was carried to the parlor by Mr. Shawkey, Manager Keenan, Mr. Addison, the Shoreham bookkeeper, and Dr. F. L. Chamberlectures will be free, and it is hoped they lain, who chanced to be near by, were will both have good houses. A cordial insoon at his side. Restoratives were vitation is extended to all to be present at each session, and to assist in making it inin a few moments Mr. Watson expired teresting and instructive. on a sofa without speaking after his fall. The deceased was about seventy years of age and his death was caused by apoplexy. Dr. Chamberlain states that the case was similar to that of Senator Beck, whom he attended. The death of Mr. Watson was a shock to the members of the House, with most of whom he has been on such terms as to amount to personal friendship. For some time his health has been poor and his friends have been anxious about him. His physician warned him a short time ago that he must cease all work, and he went to the seashore for a vacation, but he felt that his duties in Congress demanded his presence here and he returned in spite of the protests of his physician. The members of the Pennsylvania delegation held a meeting in the Speaker's office after the adjournment of the House. Mr. O'Neill presided and Mr. Kerr acted as secretary. Resolutions were passed in honor of the deceased. The delegation voted to attend his funeral, which will be held on Wednesday, at Warren, in a body. The remains will reach Warren at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

The Derrick of yesterday has this: 'Conductor C. C. Stone, who has large oil interests on the Tionests, came in from his oil farm yesterday evening with a seven inch smile, all on account of the superior conduct of an old well which, for several months past, had been shut down, as worthless, by a former owner, and abandoned. But Mr. Stone, who is too old a producer to kill a dog on circumstantial evidence, had the well fixed up and was properly rewarded for his confidence. The abandoned well filled a 60 bbl. tank the first day, and would probably have filled two tanks of like capacity the second day, but Mr. Stone was opy that let through only enough light obliged to shut it down, and came to make a noonday twilight.
